A GAIN IS SHOWN IN FIRST GRADE LIST OF TEACHERS

An Increase of One Thousand In Four Years Noted In Report For State.

The objective toward which the entire educational program in the Maryland county schools is directed is a trained teacher in every classroom. The instruction of the children can be improved only as the teachers do better work with them in the classroom. The Maryland school law, which is considered second to none in the country, contains many provisions which aim to bring about improvement in the training of the teaching corps. Such things as the minimum state salary schedule; the bonus for teachers in charge of rural schools; high school aid; the equalization fund; the requirement of summer school attendance by teachers at least once every four years; supervision in every county, with state aid toward the payment of salaries, are all required solely in order to insure better teaching for Maryland children.

The annual report of the State Department of Education shows what has been accomplished in the past few years.

In October, 1925, there were nearly 1,000 more white elementary teachers holding first grade certificates than there were four years ago, in October 1921. While in 1921 only 40 per cent of the 3,000 white elementary teachers held first grade certificates, over 2,212, or nearly three-fourths, in 1925 are normal school graduates or have equivalent training. At present only 247 teachers hold the lowest grade of certificates, while in 1921 there were 658 teaching with very limited education.

The normal schools have been graduating larger numbers each year. Through the State aid received from the Equalization Fund, the financially poorer counties have had sufficient funds to employ increasing numbers of these normal school graduates whenever vacancies have occurred in their staffs. Whenever a teacher holding a certificate lower than first grade has been replaced by a normal school graduate, the salary cost has been increased by from $200 to $550. Some of the counties have been able to make more rapid strides because of the former lack of high school facilities and the consequent dearth of students from these counties attending the normal schools.

Teachers holding the lower grades of certificates have been improving their qualifications through work under the county supervisors, attendance at summer school and through extension courses.

Every county shows steady improvement in the professional preparation of its teaching staff. Parents may now feel that their children are entrusted to the care of teachers who are able to participate intelligently and sanely in the physical, mental and social development of the child. These teachers during their period of preparation at the normal schools have had practice in teaching under careful guidance.

In the number of qualified teachers, Baltimore county heads the list with a total of 343. Allegany and Washington counties are second and third with 282 and 160, respectively, while Garrett county is ninth with 87.

During the last four years, Prince George's added the largest number of qualified teachers, with a total of ninety-six. Baltimore county increased its qualified staff by eighty-two and Garrett and Allegany each show an increase of seventy-five.

Every county shares in carrying on this forward movement, the increase in the four years in the number of teachers holding first grade certificates in individual counties varying from 8 to 94. Several counties had a large proportion of well trained teachers in 1921. These counties could not expect to show the gain in number of teachers holding first grade certificates evident in those counties which had relatively few in 1921. Certain counties, especially those receiving the Equalization Fund since it was appropriated in the fall of 1922, have been able to more than treble the number of their staffs who may be considered to have satisfactory preparation for instructing children. Garrett has increased since 1921 from 12 to 87, Prince George's from 56 to 150, Wicomico from 24 to 83, Worcester from 16 to 56 and Dorchester from 22 to 63.

Those interested in knowing the per cent of white elementary teachers employed who on the two dates considered held first grade certificates will find the following figures interesting. The counties are arranged in the order of the per cent of teachers holding first grade certificates in 1925.

In Queen Anne's county every teacher now in service is a normal school graduate or has had the equivalent in training. Baltimore and Allegany counties are very close to the goal reached by Queen Anne's. At the other end of the scale, in Charles and St. Mary's counties, only one-third of the present teaching staff in white elementary schools have had a normal school course of two years. However, the proportion of teachers holding first grade certificates in these last named counties was twice as great in 1925 as in 1921. For these counties this is a remarkable improvement and was made financially possible by the equalization fund.

It is possible to predict that, if the present program is carried forward, by 1928 Maryland counties will have reached the goal of a trained teacher in every classroom.

As a factor in the advance of the Maryland educational program, the report says:

"The Maryland school law, which is considered second to none in the country, contains many provisions which aim to bring about improvements in the training of the teaching corps.

"Such things as the minimum State salary schedule, the bonus for teachers in charge of rural schools, high-school aid, the equalization fund, the requirement of summer-school attendance by teachers at least once in every four years, supervision in every county, and State aid toward the payment of salaries are required solely in order to insure better teaching for Maryland children.

"The normal schools have been graduating larger numbers each year. Through the State aid received from the equalization fund, the financially poorer counties have had sufficient funds to employ increasing numbers of these normal school graduates whenever vacancies have occurred in their staffs.

"Whenever a teacher holding a certificate lower than a first grade has been replaced by a normal-school graduate, the salary cost has been increased by from $200 to $550. Some of the counties have not been able to make more rapid strides because of the former lack of high school facilities and the consequent dearth of students from these counties attending the normal schools.

"Teachers holding the lower grades of certificates have been improving their qualifications through work under the county supervisors, attendance at summer school and extension courses.

"Every county shows steady improvement in the professional preparation of its teaching staff. Parents now may feel that their children are entrusted to the care of teachers who are able to participate intelligently and sanely in the physical, mental and social development of the child. These teachers during their period of preparation at the normal schools have had practice in teaching under careful guidance."

MARRIED.

Michael—Roth—The wedding of Miss Marie Roth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Roth, and Mr. Arthur Chilton Michael, of Oakland, was solemnized at the bride's home on Monday, January 4th, at 8:30 o'clock a. m., by Rev. Henry A. Grubbs, pastor of the Oakland Presbyterian church. The bride was attired in a wine colored crepe romaine dress with hat to match and carried American Beauty roses. Following the ceremony a delicious wedding breakfast was served, after which Mr. and Mrs. Michael left for a tour of the eastern cities. They will reside in Detroit, Michigan, where Mr. Michael is employed by the city of Detroit in an engineering capacity. The guests present at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. John N. Michael, parents of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Jones, Bower, West Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Michael and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Stoddard, Baltimore; Mrs. George Hipsley, Mt. Lake Park; Mr. and Mrs. V. O. Moore, Alliance, Ohio, and Miss Helen Little, of Oakland.

Card of Thanks.

LAWSON AND RODEHEAVER ARE HELD FOR GRAND JURY

In Connection With The Death of Andrew Matthews From Poisoned Intoxicants.

Joseph Lawson and Homer Rodeheaver, Preston county, (West Va.) young men from the vicinity of Hazelton, a few miles west of Friendsville, Garrett county, were remanded to jail after a hearing accorded them before Justice West Monday afternoon, on the charge of murder growing out of the death of Andrew Matthews, another youth of Preston county, which was caused, it is alleged by the State, after Matthews had taken a drink of liquor from a jug given him by Lawson.

The hearing was to have taken place Saturday but was postponed owing to the absence of the material witnesses for the State, being called at one o'clock Monday following the postponement, at which time about fifteen witnesses were present along with quite a large number of the relatives and friends of the accused young men.

At the hearing the State was represented by State's Attorney W. R. Offutt, while Lawson and Rodeheaver had as their attorneys Messrs. J. C. Renninger and E. R. Jones.

At the Justice's office the evidence was to the effect that Lawson, and not Rodeheaver, had given the Matthews' boy, who was aged about nineteen years, the drink of supposedly poisoned "moonshine." This was the evidence of Paul Lininger, the companion of Matthews, both of whom were engaged in hauling mine material or lumber from a saw mill in the vicinity of their homes in Preston county to Friendsville for shipment, and who were returning to the mill after having delivered the lumber at the railway point on Friday, December 18th, at which time the young men driving the teams overtook Lawson and Rodeheaver, driving a Ford coupe, and had become stalled in a muddy place in the road. It was alleged that after the automobile had been put back on the roadway both Lawson and Rodeheaver gave the drinks to Matthews and Lininger.

Shortly after starting homeward with their teams, Matthews fell from his wagon in an unconscious condition. He was picked up by Lininger, it was said at the trial, who supported him in his arms during the rest of the drive homeward, but that just after crossing the West Virginia line Matthews expired. Arriving at the home of Lininger the father of the Lininger boy was called and seeing the condition of Matthews he made an effort to revive him but failed. In the meantime young Lininger had fallen inside the doorway of a grain house. He was taken into the home and restoratives applied. He soon rallied from the effects of the liquor and in a few days had entirely recovered.

During the hearing it was also brought out in the evidence that Matthews was subject to attacks of epilepsy, which fact will be used in the trial of the cases against Lawson and Rodeheaver as the cause of his death and not the effects produced by the administration of the intoxicants by the accused men.

Justice West, in view of the evidence offered held both Lawson and Rodeheaver for the action of the June grand jury on the charge of murder. Lawson was also found guilty of unlawfully giving liquor to a minor, which is an offense under the liquor law of Maryland.

Messrs. Jones and Renninger, attorneys for the accused, will institute habeas corpus proceedings in the Circuit Court for their release on bail, it is understood.

WHAT WOULD THE PIONEER SAY TO ALL OF THIS?

First Quarter of Twentieth Century The World's Greatest Inventive Age,

High on a frontier hill a century ago, a thin spiral of smoke sent its message to a band of red-painted savages crouched in a forest.

Around the edge of the forest, slowly, laboriously, came an emigrant train, four or five crudely fashioned bowls of wagons, drawn by slow moving, sweating oxen.

A few swift arrows whistled thru the air. The struggle was unequal. Man in his native element had conquered man, the invader, again.

But man's mind proved swifter than the swiftest and straightest of the feathered darts of death of the Indians. The years passed and the invader defeated the native. Standing today on the same spot where that migratory train met its fate, looking back over the century between, the man of today rules as matter of all he surveys. He has bent nature to his bidding.

Especially during the quarter century coming to a close with 1925 has man, the invader, beaten down the elements into inventions that would send man, the native, screaming in flight. The inventions of the past 25 years and their practical development, overshadow all the inventions of the entire race for hundreds of years pre-

Before the dawn of the twentieth century the knife of medical science, efficient though it was, went in with only a general knowledge of man's ailment. But now its path is defined. The x-ray was discovered by William K. Roentgen in 1895.

In a Paris laboratory, in 1898, two scientists worked to give the world a wonderful new chemical element, radium, an element that is still so rare that it is being passed around the world from hospital to hospital where it is used in the treatment of cancer, goiter and other diseases. Its value has been put at $3,000,000 an ounce. The scientists were Prof. Pierre Curie and his wife, Marie Sklodowska Curie.

Where the red man's smoke sent its signal into the sky now stands a huge tower, taller than the highest tree of the old forests. From the tower man sends his messages to his fellows in invisible smoke that flashes across continents and oceans in the twinkling of an eye.

Twenty-five years ago the world laughed at Guglielmo Marconi and a little group of men who believed in radio. Now in many a home along the route of the old schooner train, a family sits around the box that brings stories of the world's work and songs of the world at play.

Twenty-five years! The world was indeed amused when it read of Darius Green and his flying machine, but more amused at the Wright brothers for following Darius' example. To fly was to die. Wings to carry man thru the air? Well, hardly. But 25 years have sped—and man flies!

Man flies, so does time. On the spot where the first immigrant train met fate, a red school house was reared. Twenty--fie years ago a bright-faced boy risked his life to get to that school house. His way led across a road that was hardly more than a path, with a narrow footbridge here and there across some frozen stream.

The boy returns today to spend the New Year with the family. He goes whizzing in his automobile along a highly polished pavement, roars over a culvert where the old bridge stood and past the barn that Dobbin long ago gave up to a new fire-breathing beast that rolls.

High ahove the barn another engine hums. The boy of 25 years ago would have run away at the sight of this monstrous fly. Now he takes out his watch, perhaps with the thought that the airmail's right on time again.

Steam and gasoline and electricity have changed the world. Hero, of Alexandria, played with a steam toy in 120 B. C., but it was 1700 years before a practicable steam engine was invented. A little more than 100 years ago Fulton applied the steam to a boat and it moved. World-old traditions were shot to smithereens when Fulton's crude craft paddled along in the Hudson.

McCormick's reaper is nearly 100 years old, but it took the genius of application of the twentieth century to roll reaper and thresher into one and hitch the tractor to it to do in a few hours work that once took long days.

Gutenberg invented a printing press in 1450. The twentieth century press grinds out thousands of newspapers a minute. The work of a minute in the twentieth century would have taken Gutenberg a lifetime.

Daguerre, in 1839, gave the world the secret of photography, but not until the twentieth century did man turn this invention to a common language of pictures that today blooms on every main street in the world movies. And it took the twentieth century to learn how to send pictures across the land on the wings of lightning, the telephone.

War, with its terrible instruments, stands as the blot on the first twenty-five years of the century when man turned his inventions to destruction. He changed the tractor into a tank, devised machines that poured bullets in a swift stream, invented gas and all its deadly implements and protective devices, built flame projectors that could sear a regiment to cinders, and Big Berthas that from a distance of 75 miles tore buildings and men to pieces.

Time flies and the things of the twentieth century already seem old. But none who lived twenty-five years ago knew what a pulmotor was, or a submarine, or a war tank, a tractor, an electron tube, a hydroplane, a machine gun, a Liberty motor, radio-telephony or an airplane.

The world smirked at men who sat tinkering with strange new toys back in 1900.

But the world has quit laughing at the inventor, and that has been one of the first quarter of the century's dearest lessons—that invention is our meat and drink and the inventor is the hero of this complicated age.

Please make a final effort to get these stamps into my hands by January 15th at the latest, as the State report must go in at that time.

I take this opportunity of thanking all who bought Christmas Seals, and especially the teachers of the county, through whose efforts the majority were sold, and the following contributors, whose generosity made the campaign a success:

Animal to Be Envied Is the Hippopotamus

An unnamed explorer is quoted in the Berliner Tageblatt as speculating on the relative happiness of men and hippopotamuses. Other animals, it appears, have their troubles.

"Many a believer in the transmigration of souls might like to be a magnificent bird of paradise fluttering from twig to twig in the tropic heavens when he returns to earth," he says. "But oh, how soon he would find himself in somebody's roaster or adorning the Sunday-go-to-meeting hat of some fat provincial lady!

"The great wild beasts, though they live in glorious freedom, suffer. Lions, leopards, tigers, elephants, eagles, have a hard life and a constant search for food, and many of them are destined for the lead of the human—or inhuman—hunter's rifle. Let us say nothing of the slavery of domestic animals, which are eaten in return for their services to men.

"There is only one free and fortunate beast, whom man leaves in peace because his skin is useless, his flesh repulsive, and hunting him dangerous. That is the hippo. He can spend his life in philosophic calm, live it out to the end, and grow to be a couple of centuries old—so at least learned men say."—Living Age.

Electricity the Cause of Auroral Displays

Aurora Borealis, Northern Lights or Streamers, Aurora Polaris and Australis, and Polar Light are the different names given to an electrical meteor, appearing most frequently in high latitudes in the form of luminous clouds, arches and rays, the latter sometimes meeting at a point near the zenith, forming what is called a "boreal crown." The generally accepted theory is that the aurora is due to the ascent of positive electricity from the intertropical water surfaces, which flow toward the poles. In the polar regions it descends toward the earth and comes in contact with the terrestrial negative electricity, which results in luminous discharges of great brilliancy. Intimate relations exist between sun spots, magnetic storms and auroras, the appearance of a large spot on the solar disk being almost invariably accompanied by a magnetic storm in all parts of the globe. During magnetic storms auroral displays usually take place, but not all auroras are coincident with magnetic disturbances.

A Family of Z's

Some persons have a queer, not to say a perverse, humor in names, and when they happen to be parents they often inflict on their offspring names that are a lifelong embarrassment. A writer in the Boston Herald recalls the case of a man named Zuriel Cook, who, having been cursed with an outlandish name, determined that all his children should suffer with him.

Zuriel Cook married Polly Lombard at Henderson, N. Y., early in the Nineteenth century. His large family of children were named as follows: Zuriel, Zeresa, Zerema, Zebus, Zephronia, Zerodia, Zedina, Zegotus, Zelora, Zethaniel, Zeruth, Zelobus, Zedelia and last of all James.

It is fair to presume that James was a posthumous child. If Mr. Cook had lived the boy would probably have been named Zephaniah or Zerubbabel.

Tobacco Once Banned

It was recently announced that the government of Tibet had placed a ban on the introduction of tobacco into that country. But regulation and prohibition of the use of the narcotic weed by the law of the land is by no means new, says the Dearborn Independent.

The following is taken from the court book of Methold, Norfolk, England, dated October 4, 1695. "We agree that any person that is taken smoaking tobacco in the street shall forfit one shilling every time so taken and itt shall be lawful for the petty constables to distraine for the same to be putt to the uses of the towne."

A few pages farther there is the record of the first arrest under the tobacco prohibition law. "We present Nicholas Barker for smoaking in the street and do amerce him one shilling."

Uninviting "Lunch"

A Columbus business woman, who also is a housekeeper, occasionally takes to her office a lunch prepared at home. One morning recently, following a chicken dinner the evening before she took from the refrigerator what was left of the repast, with which she prepared an appetizing lunch. Bones, peelings and other debris were placed in a neat package, to be taken to the garbage box, and the lunch also was carefully wrapped. When she opened her lunch package at noon, however, she found she had brought with her the package intended for the garbage can, and had tossed her lunch into the receptacle.—Indianapolis News.

Indians and Game Laws

Indians cannot as a rule kill game out of season except as specified in a special treaty governing the particular tribe to which an individual belongs. There are between 20 and 30 of these treaties drawn up for the various tribes in this country. Under no circumstances, however, is an Indian permitted to violate the federal migratory bird treaty, and any provision made in a special treaty is revoked by the federal act. Indians, however, are allowed the privileges of fishing.

TENNESSEE OFFERS REFUGE FOR BIRDS

Reelfoot Lake Set Aside as Winter Sanctuary.

Nashville, Tenn.—Reelfoot lake, winter quarters for millions of the wild duck family, this year offers protected refuge to the migratory visitors from the North and the Far Northwest.

A sanctuary in the grassy bend of the curiously-shaped lake and in the deep wild grasses is wired off from the reach of the hunter's gun.

A heavy fine is provided for any person who enters the wire inclosure or drags a boat about the grasses within, which will be permitted to grow up in the wildest confusion, untouched by human.

Reelfoot lake was formed by the great earthquake of 1811-12. It is ragged and jagged. Some parts of the marshy sections are impenetrable and it is very dangerous for hunters to attempt a trip on its vast expanse without the guidance of a "pusher."

Reelfoot's northern tip extends just over the Kentucky state line. The lake proper contains 1,160 acres and, with its marshes included, 25,050 acres.

Thousands of sportsmen from the United States and many from foreign countries have visited the lake every year. A conservative estimate of the number killed on the first day of the open season was 10,000.

The state is considering the establishment of a biological station there for scientific study and investigation.

Blinded by Own Hand, Youth Builds Anew

Los Angeles, Cal.—Roberto Perez is totally blind. He is only twenty-two years of age. He was found in his little grocery store at 244 North Indiana avenue. Those who believe the world is giving them only tough breaks should heed his story.

He was one of a large family—a mother, a stepfather, two brothers and a sister. Perez sickened at life and pressed a gun against his left temple.

He was in the hospital for many months. His stepfather soon died. One of his brothers was killed at the paraffin works. The other brother died of tuberculosis. Perez, though the bullet had pierced his head, did not die. He refers to his recovery as a providential edict to care for his aging mother and his sickly sister.

"I told mother I desired to build a grocery store and go into business," he said. "This, my mother thought, was absolutely impossible for me to do."

Roberto Perez built his store.

To expedite its building, he devised forms in which he cut the timbers. He wired it, painted his own signs, erected his own shelving, constructed his own refrigerator and showcases.

And now, the blind boy's vision is taking him even farther on its road to success than his little grocery store. He is writing short stories.

Find Indian Heiress in Detroit After 30 Years

Ashland, Wis.—A search lasting many years has resulted in the locating of the Indian mother of Edward Brezette, Ladysmith, Wis., and the settling of an estate which brought the woman a moderate fortune.

Thirty years ago an Indian girl disappeared from Ashland after negotiating with Mr. and Mrs. Ed Brezette of Bayfield for the adoption of her two-month-old son. The mother of the girl, Majiskekwe by name, of Hayward, disappeared soon afterward, leaving a valuable estate.

The first clew in the search led to a hotel in Superior, Wis., where evidence was found that the girl had obtained a position thirty years ago.

Newspapers took up the search and a Minneapolis woman, being informed of the circumstances, furnished the information that the missing woman was Mrs. Bert Cornish of Detroit, Mich.

In a hearing before Indian officials here this week, the right of Mrs. Cornish to the estate of her mother, Majiskekwe, and to her own allotment were established.

Mrs. Cornish now is visiting her son, whom she had not seen in thirty years.

Eggs Used as Currency in Remote Armenia Region

Erivan, Armenia.—Eggs are being used as currency in the Kara Kala district of Armenia, where the American Near East Relief is operating. Twelve eggs are accepted on their "face value" as equivalent to 1 ruble, or 50 cents in American currency. If any of the eggs prove bad, they may be returned as "illegal tender." The new form of "currency" is made necessary owing to the difficulty of getting the regular soviet money to Kara Kala, which is buried deep in the mountains of Armenia. A pair of American shoes in Kara Kala costs 200 eggs.

Paleolithic Skeletons Found in Siberia

Krasnoyarsk, Siberia.—Excavations on Afrantoy mountain near here have resulted in the discovery of several skeletons of paleolithic men and the remains of several hundred mammoths, wolves and bears. The skeletons are believed by Russian archeologists to be about 30,000 years old. Weapons and tools of hitherto unknown types also were found. Among these are curiously shaped cudgels made of tusks of the mammoth.

Foretell Weather by Watching the Birds

That birds are able to perform feats that are impossible to human beings has long been known to science, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. They have, for instance, a most marvelous sense of direction. This cannot be put down to memory, for young birds reared in England will go straight to the same African haunts to which their parents went weeks before them.

But it is as weather prophets that birds excel, according to an English naturalist. Swallows, martins and swifts, he says, will tell if the following day is to be fine. If they are flying really high, say, 500 to 1,000 feet above the ground, a whole week of sunshine may be expected. If they are only 50 feet high, the outlook is doubtful. But if they skim a few feet above the ground, rain is certain.

A tame raven invariably slept on the southwest porch of a home. Twice in two years it changed to the northwest side, and both times a terrific gale blew from the southwest. When a wood filled with singing birds is suddenly silenced a thunderstorm is usually due. It often is observed, too, that if migrating birds fly north instead of south late in fall a mild winter may be expected.

Gained Lasting Fame as Builder of Roads

The first macadam road ever constructed was officially tested and approved in Scotland more than a century ago. The inventor was John Louden Macadam, a native of Ayr, Scotland, where he was born in 1756. Macadam went to New York in 1770, entered his uncle's counting house, and became a successful merchant.

In 1783 he returned to Scotland and purchased a handsome estate. In 1810 Macadam began his experiments in highway construction which have made his name immortal.

The great road builder was thoroughly Scotch in his methods, and as he wanted nothing flimsy, he investigated road building methods in a score of countries, traveling 30,000 miles.

His preliminary trials of "macadamizing" were so successful that in 1816 he was appointed surveyor to the Bristol Turnpike trust and remade the roads there cheaply and well. The house of commons investigated his system, and he was voted $50,000 and appointed surveyor general of metropolitan roads. He declined knighthood.—Chicago Journal.

"The Beggar's Opera"

"The Beggar's Opera" was the first musical play presented on the American stage. It was written by John Gay, and was produced at the Nassau Street theater, New York, 174 years ago, January 14, 1751. A large proportion of the 10,000 people then comprising the population of New York attended the performance, although there were not a few who protested against "the godless affair" and threatened "to have the law" on it. The Murray and Keene company, a band of comedians who came to New York from Philadelphia, were responsible for the production, which was a benefit performance for Thomas Keane, who personally called on the leading citizens and sold tickets. The performance began at 6 o'clock and was over at 8:45. One of the lines from this light opera was "How happy could I be with either, were t'other dear charmer away."—Chicago Journal.

Mistakes of Reporters

A bad mistake is made by a small English provincial newspaper when it hails the arrival in town of the son of Robert Louis Stevenson, poet and novelist. Stevenson had no son, at least that anyone ever heard of. But a worse mistake was made by another paper, also British and provincial, which is talked of still among journalists on Fleet street. The editor's sole woman reporter being ill, he sent out a man to describe the dresses and goings on at a wedding nearby. One of the guests, a woman, spoofed him, and now you cannot buy the issue of the paper his report appeared in at a premium. He had the women's hats trimmed with pommes de terres; their dresses with creme de menthe.—Baltimore Sun.

The Days of Youth

"We are young only once," you often hear some person remark as an excuse for "hitting the pace."

True, we can be young but once, and the pleasure of youth must be crowded into that space of time.

But how long are we young? Some men are old at forty, while others are still young at sixty. It depends upon the pace they hit and the manner in which they hit it.

We can crowd a lot of work and pleasure into youth if we keep our hearts and our minds and our bodies clean. We can reduce the amount of both and shorten our youth by resorting to reckless dissipation.—Newcastle Courier.

Fire Worship

The religion of fire worship, called Zoroastrianism, is a survival of a faith of great antiquity. It flourished during the Fourth and Sixth centuries B. C., and its adherents have always paid great reverence to the elements, especially fire.

The devout Parsee engages in frequent daily prayer and worship, and when he worships turns his face to some bright object. The name "fire worshiper" was popularized by Moore's poem, "Lalla Rookh."

INCREASE EFFORT TO SAVE REDWOOD TREES

Nature Lovers Join to Buy California Forests

San Francisco.—Increasing effort, with prospect of success, is being made to preserve from extinction the world's tallest and most beautiful tree, the Sequoia sempervirens, or redwood.

Spread over the northern hemisphere of Europe and America when the earth was young, the tree was scoured from the globe by ancient ice sheets until there remained only a forested belt of a few hundred miles along the coast of northern California and a bit of southern Oregon. There in cathedral grandeur it raises its lofty spires 350 feet and more. Its name, sempervirens—ever living—arouses the imagination, for it is from 2,000 to 3,000 years old, only a thousand years younger than its cousin the Sequoia gigantea, of the Sierra Nevada mountains.

League Buys Groves.

Magnificent timber, resisting moisture and decay for centuries, though fallen, it was cut and shipped throughout the United States and abroad in such quantities as to endanger its exhaustion.

Aroused, the Save-the-Redwood league, composed of such nature lovers as Franklin K. Lane, Dr. John C. Merriam, William Kent and others, actuated by love of beauty, in recent years has raised money to buy some groves and induce the state of California and various organizations to preserve others.

Today, 15,515 acres have been freed from the woodsman's menacing ax. In addition, the league has initiated a program for a national redwood park of 20,000 acres of trees that were a half-thousand years old when the star appeared over Bethlehem.

The lumbermen have sympathized with the spirit of conservation, and, moved greatly by considerations of financial advantage, began reforestation so extensive as to promise complete replacement of trees cut down. Merchantable redwood timber in the forests estimated at 50,000,000,000 feet board measure, will be reproduced by planting at the rate of 550,000,000,000 feet board measure yearly, assuming the present rate of cutting and reproduction. Lumbermen figure from this that the second growth of redwood will be ready for cutting in 100 years at the same time that the virgin timber has disappeared.

Trees Aid Reforestating Plan.

The tree itself is a great factor in its perpetuation, for sprouts spring from its stumps so profusely and persistently that M. B. Pratt, state forester, says:

"If planting by the lumber companies is continued on the present scale, I consider that adequate means will have been taken to reforest the cut-over lands, particularly since these lands are reforesting more or less by themselves by means of stump sprouts."

The redwood belongs to the pine family or cone-bearing group. In the fall of the year the cones are gathered from the ground and taken to the nurseries of the lumber companies at Scotia, Fort Bragg and Caspar, Cal. Seeds removed from the cones become trees of six or seven inches in one or two years. Trees thus grown in 1925 numbered 3,250,000.

In the winter of two years ago a start of replanting was made when 800 acres were reforested. Last winter 3,000 acres were planted, and the program for the present winter embraces 6,000 acres. When the total reaches 10,000 acres yearly, this with natural reproduction, it is hoped, will preserve the redwood for posterity.

Revives "Dead" Patient With Heart Massage

Baltimore, Md.—His heart without pulsation and his respiration stopped, David E. Kauffman of York, Pa., was given up for dead at the Volunteers of America hospital.

Except for the fact that the man's body still was warm, Dr. John W. Graham, resident physician, felt certain that life was extinct. He had applied every practical test without detecting any sign of life. And yet he was not satisfied. He began to massage the heart and to apply artificial respiration. After two minutes the man started to breathe and his heart resumed beating. Doctor Graham said that the case was the most remarkable in his career as a physician. He put the patient to bed and pronounced his condition favorable.

Kauffman, who is forty-five years old, lapsed into unconsciousness while sitting in the lobby of a hotel.

Sale of Land to Benefit Schools of Tennessee

Nashville, Tenn.—Tennessee public schools will benefit from the sale of unclaimed and vacant lands when a defect is cured in an act passed by the state legislature in 1903 making it mandatory on the state to sell unclaimed lands.

Under the provisions of this old law, untilled properties must be sold for the benefit of the schools. But the law failed to designate any certain officer to conduct the sale.

There are many thousands of acres of such lands in the state, some tracts rich in mineral deposits, some with valuable stands of timber and others rich agriculturally.

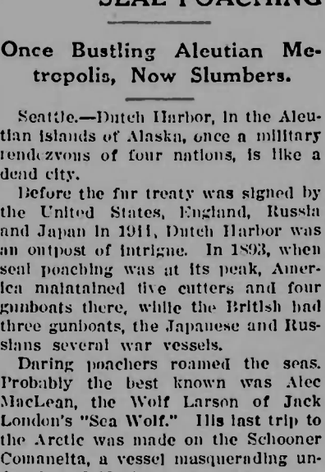
CITY THROVE ON SEAL POACHING

Once Bustling Aleutian Metropolis, Now Slumbers.

Seattle.—Dutch Harbor, in the Aleutian islands of Alaska, once a military rendezvous of four nations, is like a dead city.

Before the fur treaty was signed by the United States, England, Russia and Japan in 1911, Dutch Harbor was an outpost of intrigue. In 1893, when seal poaching was at its peak, America maintained five cutters and four gunboats there, while the British had three gunboats, the Japanese and Russians several war vessels.

Daring poachers roamed the seas. Probably the best known was Alec MacLean, the Wolf Larson of Jack London's "Sea Wolf." His last trip to the Arctic was made on the Schooner Comanelta, a vessel masquerading under forged Mexican papers.



One of his best known exploits was when he eluded a pursuing cutter and anchored two barrels of sealskins to a buoy. Later he returned and picked them up.

In 1911 all governments involved in the seal industries agreed to handle the killings themselves. Guards were stationed at the rookeries and sealing-at-sea was made unlawful. This treaty was drawn to run 15 years. The pact is expected to be renewed next year.

At present the entire patrol is carried on by four American coast-guard cutters.

Meanwhile Dutch Harbor, nestled among the island mountains, slumbers.

Andersonville Prison Spring Keeps Up Flow

Atlanta, Ga.—Georgia and the southland are recovering from a drought of unprecedented severity. Many streams and water sources dried up, and all records for aridity were broken, but through it all a stream of water continued to flow from the side of a beautifully foliaged hill on which, some sixty years ago, was located the Andersonville military prison of the Confederate army.

This is "Providence spring." Local history has it that in the closing days of the war between the states, that section suffered from the effects of a drought which dried up the wells, leaving no water supply for the thousands of federal prisoners of war.

These conditions existed for days while the men, in their delirium, madly scratched holes in the ground with their bare hands in the attempt to strike water. Finally, too weary and exhausted to put forth more physical effort, it is recounted they dropped to their knees and prayed God to send them relief.

While they were still praying, the legend says, a bolt of lightning struck the hillside, and a fountain of sparkling water gushed forth.

The fountain has been housed in an ornate work of masonry, in which is inserted a bronze tablet identifying it as "Providence spring," and relating the above story.

Adjoining the camp is Andersonville National cemetery, covering an area of 120 acres and where rest nearly 14,000 of the "boys in blue," who succumbed to the ravishes of the fever and other diseases.

Parachutes to Carry Air-Mail to Ground

Paris.—"Mail from the sky" is to be a reality for the towns along the Paris-London air route. The machines in this service are being fitted with machinery for dropping parachutes to which mail bags are attached.

The pilots will drop the mail by pulling a lever, just as a bomb is released from a war plane. The bag will drop plummet-like until about 300 feet above the ground, when the parachute will open and float gently toward the waiting postman.

Pilots are expected to release their mail consignment so as to land the parachutes as near as possible to given receiving places.

NEW RULER SEATED ON PEACOCK THRONE

Persian Capital City of Kaleidoscopic Contrasts.

Washington. — Recent news dispatches from Persia announce the deposition of the Kajar dynasty, which has ruled the country for more than 150 years, and the ascension of a new shah to the famous peacock throne in Teheran.

"Despite Persia's traditional conservatism in governmental affairs Teheran, its capital, is a city of kaleidoscopic contrasts," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society. "Visitors may enter through any of its twelve beautiful gates, whose glazed tiles glisten in the sunlight, and find spread before them a dingy collection of mud houses rubbing elbows with palatial residences enclosing flower-filled gardens. A lumbering camel, seemingly just stepped out of a priceless old Persian rug, may draw aside to allow the passage of a high-powered motor car bearing a wealthy Persian en route to his villa on the outskirts of the city.

Linked With "Arabian Nights."

"Teheran has not always been the capital of Persia. Rhages or Rei, its predecessor, the ruins of which are nearby, was a bustling city of one and a half millions in the Middle ages. As the birthplace of Harum al-Rashid, Caliph of Bagdad, the fifth and most renowned of the Abbassides, its name is forever linked with 'Arabian Nights.' This city, also called Rhagae, was destroyed by Jenghiz Khan and Timur.

"Modern Teheran's position, 70 miles south of the Caspian sea, commanding the highways of the extensive upland plateau and the entrance to the Elburz passes, has made it the center of a considerable caravan trade, though it does not rank high as an industrial city. Its population is roughly estimated at 300,000 in winter, but in summer this number diminishes one-third. For, although the district lies in the approximate latitude of Cape Hatteras, and nine months of the year bring it cool nights and sunshiny days, the three months of summer are uncomfortably hot and dry.

"The palace of the deposed shah is located in the 'Ark,' or former citadel, in the middle of the city. Here is the Salaam court, containing the large Takht-i-Khaneh, or throne room, where the shah received his people at his New Year's reception, three months and more after the Western world ushered in a new year. This reception formerly was a brilliant affair; the royal band played all through the ceremony, the court poet was much in evidence with the shah's greetings for the new season, and the shah himself was seated in a jeweled chair on a beautiful marble throne, which, however, should not be confused with the priceless Peacock throne kept in the treasure vault.

"The office of the commandant of the imperial guards, the apartments of the grand vizier and the imperial archives are separated from the main palace by a shady rose garden, but one's interest naturally centers in the treasure vault wherein are kept the Persian crown jewels.

"Nadir Shah, who was also known as Kuli Khan, was shah of Persia from 1736 to 1747. Shortly after he was crowned he invaded India, laid waste the country and sacked Delhi. It was he who laid down his bare sword as a sign that the massacre might begin and refused to lift it again until thousands of the inhabitants had been murdered. And he it was who brought the peacock throne to Teheran where it has been since 1739.

"This gorgeous chair of state is incrusted with thousands of precious jewels; rubies, diamonds, emeralds and so many others that one is almost blinded by its coruscant splendor. Emblazoned on the back is the large peacock from which the throne takes its name, with its tail spread out in a magnificence no living peacock ever attained. Taken as one piece of 'furniture,' the peacock throne might easily be called the most expensive in the world, for it is valued at thirty millions of dollars!

Where East Meets West.

"Keeping it company is the sword of Timur, the Tartar, which doubtless accompanied him on his victorious march through Persia and Syria as far as the frontier of Egypt, in those bloodthirsty days when invasions and conquest were the lifelong ambitions of every great man. In the treasure vault also is a huge terrestrial globe of gold, weighing eighty pounds, set with 51,366 gems, and nearby is the diamond known as the Dary-i-Nur or 'Sea of Light,' weighing 186 carats, which Nadir Shah did not overlook at Delhi.

"Teheran might well be called the meeting place of East and West, for in the southern portion of the city, tucked away behind the pale pink and blue plaster walls, may be found the majority of the natives with their bazaars and their own circles of life hardly untouched since the early years. In the northern part the Western influence is seen, felt and heard in the shape of well-graded streets, electric lights, movies, European shops, hotels, restaurants and even a tramway. The airplane has made its way to Teheran, the drill square north of the central square sharing honors as an aviation field and—a football gridiron!

"Persia is fast adopting modern ways. The new ruler, who is referred to in a dispatch from Teheran as 'King' Pahlavia Reza Khan, has released all political prisoners and issued a decree reducing the price of bread."

THE FOUNDATION OF GOVERNMENT

, Judge Denis E. Sullivan, in the Superior Court, deciding the anti-injunction law passed by the Illinois legislature, holds that "peaceful picketing" is a violation of private rights. Eight strikers parading with banners in front of a retail clothing store in Chicago, urging customers not to enter were given sentences of from 10 to 30 days in jail, and fines up to $200. Judge Sullivan said:

"To say to a citizen that his country's laws will afford him no protection to his rights or property or from the unlawful interferance of others, is to invite bloodshed and anarchy. No Government worthy of the name can survive or claim the allegiance of its citizens on any such theory.

"Liberty includes the right to own property and make contracts. As the employers in this case had a contract of employment with their workers, the action of others, either non-employes or employes, for the purpose of breaking that contract or preventing the sale of goods, would be depriving the employers of their property without due process of law.

"The right of every man to organize for protection does not include the right to interfere with legal right of any other person to carry on any legitimate business.

"The legislature has attempted to deny to one class of citizens the protection of the courts while granting it to other citizens under similar circumstances. To say to one class that its property may be taken from it or destroyed by another class without compensation or process, is not liberty; it is inviting the tyranny of the mob."

COOLIDGE ON FARM PRICES

Here are a few suggestions in President Coolidge's message to American farmers:

Adequate storage, necessary credit and orderly cooperative marketing will place agriculture on a sound business basis. No matter how disguised, the moment the government engages in buying and selling farm products, it fixes prices. Even the United States is not strong enough to fix prices which would constantly guarantee success. Farmers are opposed to submitting themselves to control of a great price-fixing and marketing bureaucracy. For a more orderly marketing calculated to secure better range of prices the cooperative movement promises greatest success. To have agriculture prosperous it must rest on an independent business basis.

COMMONSENSE BUSINESS EFFICIENCY

President Mitchell of the National City Bank of New York says the people do not fully realize the very high efficiency of the service given by the railway systems of our country, which expedites marketing farm crops, and enables raw materials to flow in and manufactured products to flow out of the factories for distribution to retailers, with clocklike regularity.

Besides expending billions of dollars on materials, supplies, wages, taxes, interest and dividends, they enable the farmer, business man and manufacturer to work in perfect harmony and with the greatest prosperity.

The same is true of other lines of public utility and public service like telephone, insurance, banking and electricity. In these fields the American people are the best served people in the world.

Our 114,000,000 citizens have the safest banking system, are better insured, use more horsepower per workman and have more telephones than all the rest of the world.

TIME TO TAKE STOCK

Once a year business establishments take stock, weigh resources against liabilities, turn back the old pages and put pen to new. Each year the well-regulated business strikes balance and starts again, not over again from the old beginning, but fresh from the old year's finish.

Once a year the individual—serious minded man or woman or ambitious girl or boy—takes stock, stock of happiness and the health and the wealth upon which it is founded. Each measures with the yard stick of conscience the component elements of these two great pillars of life: health of body and mind and spirit, and wealth of experience, mental resources, friendships, the will to do and self-esteem.

Inventory is important to the corporation and to the individual because it points out basic truths. First, perhaps, is that life is growth. Another that the matter of our growth is in our own hands. And still another that we may guide ourselves to a more productive and happier future by knowing and correcting the mistakes of the past.

To "know thyself" continues to be the first rule of happiness and success, which are one and the same. Honest self-examination is profitable, but painful, as most unaccustomed exertion is. Probing a lazy mind, a sore conscience or a hollow tooth is unpleasant. But it is absolutely necessary to prevent further decay, and eventual dissolution.

Experience exposes the weak links in the chain of life as in the chain of business. Inventory is the reading of experience. It must be done honestly, courageously, without self-deception. Else one day the chain will snap.

Let us take stock, nor fear to know our weaknesses. Knowing, we may correct them, and build stronger and surer, happier for ourselves because more useful to others.

HOW THEY BECOME COMMUNITY ASSETS.

America has been called the "melting pot" of the nations. The refining fire separates the dross from the pure gold. Teachers and communities often forget in this process that they share the obligations and benefits. Teachers usually prefer schools with few natianalities represented among the pupils. Communities hesitate to refer to the percentage and types of "foreigners" in their "boost our neighborhood" campaigns. Is this attitude based on sound reasoning?

Teachers and pupils may gain valuable and broadening points of view from classes composed of children coming from homes representing different types of culture. Such pupils demonstrate its games and dances and recite its folklore and songs. Teachers should sympathetically guide these pupils so that they may contribute the best of their native inheritance. What community would not find its life enriched by an infusion of some of the appreciation of: the art characteristics of the Italians, the music ability of the Germans, the hospitality traits of the Poles, or the thrift habits of the Swiss?

A story is told of an Italian girl in a home economics class who had taken little interest in the work and had been a disciplinary problem. The girl was literally reborn on the day the class prepared noodles. When the teacher began her demonstration the girl begged to be allowed to prepare them. No artist ever put more thot, interest, and real skill into her work than she. Her classmates were much interested and impressed and the teacher learned many valuable points in the preparation and handling of noodles. The girl was a new person after that—she had been a contributor.

Where Some of the Money Went

If you invested in Christmas seals, you will be interested in knowing that 70 per cent from the sale of the seals goes back into the counties for the benefit of local tuberculosis activities, and the remaining 30 per cent to the Maryland Tuberculosis Association for the support of the activities under its direction, including the Children's Preventorium—the Miracle House at Clairborne—and toward the maintenance of the State-wide tuberculosis clinics.

Attendance at the tuberculosis clinics doubled during 1925, according to the report of Dr. John M. Nicklas, Medical Consultant of the State Tuberculosis Association and Clinic-Aide in tuberculosis of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases of the State Department of Health.

Over 2600 persons were examined, and of that number 1012 were found to be suffering from the disease. Of the 1012 positive cases discovered, 868, or about one-third of the total were new cases, paying their first visit to the clinics. Two hundred and forty clinics were held during the year, an average of 20 each month, reaching nearly every section of the State. In some counties they were conducted regularly at the county seat; in others a different place was selected for each clinic. Altogether, 75 places were visited. Patients were drawn from 597 different communities.

Over 96 per cent of the patients were referred to the clinics by their family physicians, the rest were without medical attendance, or were directed to the clinics by friends. All were either tuberculosis suspects or contacts, that is, they had either shown some sign of the disease or had been in contact with it. Of the contacts many were children under 13. The number of physicians who referred patients to the clinics was 662.

Of the total number of positive cases disclosed by the examinations, 809 were among white persons, and 203 colored: 535 were in the early stages, and therefore gave possibilities of a favorable outcome; 449 were moderately advanced, and the rest were far advanced. In connection with the examinations 794, or aproximately one out of every three of the total number examined, showed marked signs of undernourishment; and 194, or about one out of every 13 revealed some unexpected heart complication. Estimates based upon the number of cases now under treatment in the State, and upon the new cases discovered, indicate, Dr. Nicklas said, that there are about eight thousand persons ill with tuberculosis in the counties of Maryland. The great advantage of the clinics is in the opportunity they give for the detection of the disease in its early stages, when there is every opportunity of arresting the disease, of restoring the invalid to normal activities and of preventing the spread of the disease to others.

Mr. Gilmor S. Hamill, accompanied by his grandson Gilmor, and by Mrs. G. Semmes Hamill, motored to Baltimore yesterday morning.

Messrs. A. L. Lee and William R. Browning were at Belington, West Va., yesterday where they went on a business mission.

A Brief History and Report of the Boy Scout Auxiliary for the Year Ending January 2, 1926, by the President, Mrs. G. Semmes Hamill, Jr., Oakland.

The Oakland Troop of Boy Scouts was organized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Tower by the Rev. Mr. Torrey, October, 1921. Very shortly after the troop was organized the need of financial and other help was felt. In other words, people were needed to get behind the boys, to enlist the interest of the community in their behalf, to see that they had a proper room to hold their meetings in, said room to be kept clean and comfortable, and last but not least, to see that sums of money be rnised from time to time to finance the troop in their various activities. With these ends in view, Rev. Torrey, the Scout Master, decided to organize a Boy Scouts' Auxiliary which should be composed of the mothers of the boys and all other public spirited women of the community who were interested in the Boy Scout movement.

The officers of the Auxiliary were elected January 2, 1925, as follows: President, Mrs. G. Semmes Hamill, Jr.; vice-president, Mrs. Ernest Townshend; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Frank Rathbun. The president at once named four committees, as follows:

Finance, Mrs. J. C. Renninger, chairman; house committee, Mrs. C. A. Tower; ways and means committee, Mrs. James Willison; advisory committee, Mrs. Hamill and Rev. Torrey.

It was decided to hold a meeting the last Friday of each month at 3:30 p. m. at the Boy Scout headquarters.

The first act of the auxiliary was to advise the troop to give up their room in the Martin building thereby saving $12 a month rent. With the aid of the Scoutmaster they gained permission from the town to use a room in the city hall. This room the auxiliary thoroughly cleaned, hung curtains at the windows and installed stoves and the troop soon fitted it up with their belongings.

On January 10, the auxiliary gave a most successful card party in Fraley's Hall, through courtesy of Mr. Lawrence Fraley, who donated the hall for the urpose, at which $100 was cleared.

The next month the auxiliary furnished refresments for the banquet the troop gave their fathers.

As spring came on plans began to be made to send the boys camping for two weeks, at Sang Run where there was swimming and fishing. A special meeting was held early in May to get down to business. The chairman of the finance committee suggested that each boy be taxed $3 a week to help defray expenses. A motion to this effect was made and carried. Another card party to raise funds for the camp was given May 16th, at which over $50 was cleared. This same month the auxiliary furnished refreshments for the party given to the Friendsville Scouts by the Oakland Scouts.

From May until the troop left for camp on July 3, the auxiliary worked unceasingly soliciting donations, ordering camp and food supplies. Oakland responded magnificently to their appeals. The Knights of Pythias donated $50; individuals donated money and food. Meat and canned goods were secured at cost and a special price was given on bread. A tent large enough to house the entire troop and the Scoutmaster was rented and thirty boys were well housed and well fed and given the time of their lives for three weeks.

In October a banquet was given to the Scoutmaster, the troop and the newly formed Court of Honor at the William-James Hotel whose proprietor, Mr. Towler, was most kind in helping make the affair a success. A superb cake was donated by Mr. Henry Lauer. The auxiliary paid all costs of the banquet.

Though the treasury was not yet empty, need again began to be felt to replenish it, so a card party was given November 19, at which nearly $70 was realized.

Following the card party, the meeting on the last Friday in November was held at the home of the president instead of at the Scout headquarters, with a special invitation given to the wives of the men forming the Court of Honor. Plans were made to have a moving picture for the benefit of the Scouts between Christmas and New Year's. The president was appointed a committee of one to make all arrangements about the picture. Mrs. Scott Shirer, wife of the then assistant Scoutmaster, was asked to take charge of the sale of candy. After the business was transacted tea was served.

The movie benefit took place Wednesday, December 30, and was very successful, though returns from all tickets sold have not come in, so report of the amount realized cannot be given. Mr. Wilhelm Weber and Mr. James Martin kindly donated their services as musicians.

The auxiliary has earned in the first year of its life, irrespective of any and all donations, something over $200, and starts the new year with $109 in the treasury.

Mention should be made of two ladies who have no boys in the troop, Mrs. Lawrence Fraley, who paid for two boys to go to camp, and who has been uniformly interested and generous, and Mrs. Willison, who has been untiring in her efforts with all entertainments. Mention should also be made of Mr. Lee, who has encouraged the boys with prizes of money to reward their efforts in various lines.

Of the former Scoutmaster, Mr. Torrey, who has been the auxiliary's kind adviser and sympathizer, nothing need be said, as without him there would have been no troop and no auxiliary.

The new Scoutmaster, Mr. Scott Shirer, is deserving of the auxiliary's best support. He is earnest and enthusiastic and well fitted for the post. There are many others in the town whose names cannot be recalled who deserve mention for their kindness and generosity.

Lastly, mention must be made of the officers, committee chairmen and members of the auxiliary who have given me, their president, such splendid co-operation. I wish to thank each one, not only for her support but for the harmony that has existed between us. EMILY C. HAMILL.

KING TUT MARRIED WHEN BUT A CHILD

Expert Thinks He Became Husband at Age of Five.

New York.—That King Tutankhamen, who died in Egypt some 3,000 years ago, was only fifteen years old when his body was laid in his tomb in the Valley of the Kings, has been definitely ascertained by Egyptologists.

The age of the dead pharaoh had been the basis for much speculation among those who uncovered the tomb near Luxor. Howard Carter, who was the chief assistant to the late earl of Carnarvon in the work of excavating the tomb, had believed the youth was eighteen years old when he passed away, while others placed his age higher.

When, however, the mummy was taken from its golden human-shaped coffin and the wrappings about it were removed until the golden-sheathed body came into view, the experts, after an examination, established the age.

Wears Crown of Gold.

On the head of Tutankhamen was a tall crown of gold. The hands were clasped across the breast. On the side of the body were strapped two gold-hilted swords and two knives, the handles of which also were gold. On the breast golden stars were placed to mark the heart and lungs.

Tutankhamen inherited the throne of Khun-Aten through his marriage to that king's third daughter, Ankh-nes-pa-Aten, afterward Ankh-nes-amen, two years after her royal father had passed away. This was during the reign of the pharaoh, Saa-Nekht, his brother-in-law. Saa-Nekht is variously estimated to have reigned from eight to sixteen years after this event before his death and the succession of Tutankhamen. The latter is estimated to have reigned from two to nine years. The former figure is Howard Carter's and the latter Sir Flinders Petrie's. Sir Flinders is a noted Egyptologist.

Five When Married.

Thus, if Tutankhamen were fifteen years old at the time of his death he would have been only five years old when he married on the basis of the lower figure, while the larger figure would seem to be wide of the mark. Five years of age for marriage apparently is out of line with the customs of the royal houses of Egypt, for few, if any of the pharaohs, married before the age of twelve. They did not become of age until sixteen years old.

On the female side it was different, some of the princesses marrying when only one year old in order to acquire rights of royalty for the husband. In Egypt royal descent passed through the daughters.

The finding of the high gold crown on the head of Tutankhamen is a discovery unique in archeology, as also was the discovery of the swords at his side and parts of the royal regalia, for despoilers and thieves usually ransacked royal tombs so thoroughly that generally the mummy was stripped to its wrapping.

Less Rain Noted on Northern Pacific Coast

Tacoma, Wash.—Old residents of that part of Washington and Oregon lying between the Cascade mountains and the Pacific ocean long have been declaring that cutting the dense timber that once covered the region is gradually changing the climate.

"It doesn't rain like it used to," the old-timers remark, recalling the days when they referred to one another as "webb-footers" and "moss backs."

And now comes L. C. Cover, government weather observer here, with figures that partly corroborate the old settlers.

His figures show there has been a steady decline in rainfall here during five-year periods since 1895. The average annual rainfall from 1895 to 1900 was 45.99 inches. From 1920 to 1925 it had fallen to 33.96.

A generation ago the average rainfall in this district was 45 inches a year, but the present average, based on all available figures of the past, has dropped to 40.72.

Cut Ireland's Number of Drink Shops in Two

London.—Several thousand of the 15,000 drink shops in the Irish Free State will be wiped out if the recommendations of the government commission which has been inquiring into the liquor traffic are adopted.

These recommendations would leave one drinking place for every 400 of population, or about 8,000 for the whole country. The liquor sellers who would remain in business would be obliged to compensate those forced out by a levy.

Selling of liquor on Sunday would not be abolished, but travelers, to whom liquor may be sold on Sunday, would be required to travel ten miles, instead of three as at present, to qualify as bona-fide travelers. The idea of making St. Patrick's day, March 17, wholly dry, has been abandoned, and the commission has recommended that this holiday take the same status as Sunday.

MOUNT IS MORE THAN IT SEEMS

Georgia's Famous Peak Outcropping of Granite Range.

Atlanta, Ga.—"How come Stone mountain?"

This question has puzzled geologists ever since there have been any geologists to puzzle about Stone mountain.

Many explanations have been offered for the existence of the now famous granite monadnock, which rises suddenly out of a fertile country around it. The one most favored is that sometime along fifty to seventy-five million years ago, there was an upheaval in this land, at which time Stone mountain and the Appalachian mountains and other eastern wonder-rocks were thrust up.

But Stone mountain, on which is being carved the Confederate memorial, is not all just out there in wide-open DeKalb county. That's only where it shows itself.

It extends under most of the remainder of Georgia and some parts of South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama and Florida.

At the place where Stone mountain seems to meet ordinary earth it begins a sloping descent into the underneath of Georgia. At Macon, about 100 miles southwest of Stone mountain, the granite bedrock is reached at about 400 feet. Dr. S. W. McCallie, Georgia state geologist, says that when the granite is struck a person might as well stop, because a drill would go "on to China."

Stone mountain will not last forever, declare geologists. There is a devastating force which is diminishing, rapidly as such things go, the size of the mountain. This force is called exfoliation.

Once Hundred Times Present Size.

When the mountain came into being it covered probably 100 times its present size, as evidenced by the numerous outcrops of the same rock extending over a belt several miles in width. At this rate of shrinkage, geologists compute that in another 50,000,000 years there will not be any Stone mountain.

At present Stone mountain rises 686 feet above the ground and includes 563 acres of exposed granite mass. In this mass there are 7,543,750,950 cubic feet. There are about 12 cubic feet of granite to the ton, making the mass weigh in the neighborhood of 628,645,911 tons.

Since about 1865 Stone mountain granite has been used extensively in building as well as paving.

Rome Beggars at Home Among City's Rich Citizens

Rome.—The police have found that many of the sorriest and most pathetic appearing street beggars are some of the city's most opulent citizens behind the walls of their homes.

One of these aged mendicants was searched and his pockets shown to contain about $30 as one day's receipts. Another beggar was found to be a proprietor of dwelling houses, another an owner of a livery stable that boasted several horses and carriages, a third was a professional money lender at usurious rates, and a fourth was a frequenter of one of the capital's most expensive restaurants in the evenings.

Cesare Sanesi, palsied and miserably dressed in tatters, died on the street of heart disease. His body was gathered up unceremoniously by carabineers and buried in the public cemetery for the destitute. It was later learned that Sanesi was a member of one of the most noble of Florentine families, and that he bore the authentic title of count.

Coconut Milk Advised for Babies of Samoa

Pago Pago.—Young coconuts for young Samoans is the advice of the United States government to South sea mothers unable to secure milk for their babies.

The use of coconuts for babies is still an experiment, but so far is considered successful. Each child is given the meat of four very young coconuts daily, together with all the coconut milk he can drink.

Child welfare work in Samoa has been organized so that all villages in American Samoa are visited at least once every two weeks. In each village a committee of women has been appointed. Babies are taken to the weekly meetings of this committee. When a baby increases in weight the mother is praised publicly; when it loses, the mother is called to account.

"Old Maids" Hailed at Church Meet as Asset

London.—"Old Maids" and their great value to the community received whole-hearted recognition from the church congress at Eastbourne.

In a ringing speech, Miss Rosamond Shields, educator, who was not ashamed to admit that she spoke "as one of them," declared that single women of mature age were not fully appreciated.

She urged them to adopt the slogan: "Forward," and to scorn such a phrase as "marrying well," for never before were there such opportunities for single women.

"Relative freedom from home ties and restrictions gives single women far more chance than the mothers of children and the very young women to go outside their immediate circle and become interbridge builders between the different sets and classes."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 10, 1926.

FIVE MEN BELIEVE IN JESUS.

Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world.—John 1:29.

THE VOICE

The stalwart Baptizer was moved by a supreme confidence in himself; he was not an echo, but a voice. He was intensely interesting, passionately convinced that a new day was at the dawn and that men must be prepared to enter into it by cleaning the old slate and beginning to write anew. The son of a priest, he would inherit the position and very likely saw some service in the temple from which his open-eyed honesty bred in the spiritual atmosphere of home and nurtured by his days and nights of solitude with the sheep, drove him in shocked surprise over conditions that roused the wrath of Jesus and caused Him to the corded whip in protest. Homeless by the death of Zecharias and Elizabeth, the desert in which Elijah had disappeared called him and from its wastes he suddenly appeared like a flaming torch or the reincarnated prophet, and taking his place where the pilgrims streamed over the Jordan on their way to the holy city, he turned their eyes toward a holier city still. Small wonder that there was vast excitement or that a religious movement began that was the stalk on which Christianity grew. Jerusalem became interested and appointed a committee of priests and Levites, all Pharisees, to investigate. To them John claimed nothing except his conviction of his sense of mission, denying with all modesty and distinction beyond being a trumpet set to the lips of God. There's a man for you. He was as honest with himself in the face of popularity as he had been with the sham of Jerusalem. And when the tide turned and began to ebb he was still the same sincerely honest body who could not be disheartened by it.

With such a person at its heart Jesus—no doubt He knew John a bit—came and threw Himself into it. It was not with a sense of need but with that of endorsement of the good He found. It was imperfect, but it was the best thing in sight. The revolutionary movement in Galilee called but for that there was no sympathy. Jesus could not be caught by the war-makers but to build upon the adventurer's explorations in religion the City of God was a delight. After the high spiritual elation of the hour of commital in which heaven opened, relationship grew clear and the Spirit carried Him into rapture he turned to John's wilderness to think things through. It was on His return that the Baptizer's witness is introduced and became the "Voice" of direction, for some among the disciples he had gathered about himself for the teaching of some ritual that included fasting and forms of prayer. Was it the sacrificial spirit of Jesus that had laid down the rights of position in being baptized in spite of his protest that caused John to call "Lamb" instead of "Lion"? But the thing the author is interested in is Great John's witness to that early revealing.

THE RESPONDERS.

Two followers turned away from John and followed the figure to which he had given testimony. One was Andrew the winning. It was he that gave that early triangle of evangelism in the phrase, "He brought him to Jesus." Three angles are all personal—he, He, him;—the sides are sympathy, service and salvation. It is the red badge that is stamped upon the soul of every follower of our Lord and is the yoke of fellowship by which the world is to be drawn under the dominion of the life of God. Andrew loved boys so that it was he who discovered the lad with the loaves and brought him to Jesus, and it is not at all strange that he should have been in the company of the fisher-boy John who responded with him to the winsomeness of the Master. History holds a famous William the Silent, and the same adjective can be applied to John of the Gospel. The only positive word from his lips in the whole book is the characteristic line in the last chapter, "It is the Lord." He has small space in the other Gospels and is entirely unheard in the Acts. John like Mary was a good listener and a great lover. Naturally as the youngest among the disciples in that day he would be expected to be seen and not heard, but it is a characteristic also. Jesus greeted them with a question that may have been a gesture of courtesy, but is determinative enough to tell what sort of folk we are for our search is always in the line of our interests. Then came the chat about the little camp fire at the mat shelter where Jesus was having headquarters.

Simon the garrulous was the next addition to the group. He was always talking even when "not knowing what he said." It may be this likeness to so many of us that accounts for his him with a nick-name holding within unfailing popularity. Jesus caught it the thing he most admired, and "Old Rock" began his journey toward real greatness. Then the reed rug was rolled, so striking tent, the fire cleared away to prevent damage, and the little party set out for their first walk together along the trail of the eternal upon which they still travel.

THE WIDENING CIRCLE.

Philip the practical was the next addition. He could guess a crowd's wants and determine the cost of satisfying them without a minute's hesitation and wanted a photograph that he might visualize God. Imagination was lacking, but doing was largely developed. He responded instantly to the invitation to join the company. Jesus won him by sheer simplicity of direction. It is a model for those recruiting for the King. Perfectly satisfied he brought Nathaniel in a mood of antagonism roused over town rivalry. No doubt we catch a bit of the conversation of the group that had talked on from John's phrase of "Lamb" into Moses and the prophets, and Jesus had illumined some of the old pages so that practical Philip caught its meaning and repeated a bit to his friend. Again insight into character, personal knowledge gained by conversation with Philip after they had passed the figure brooding under the tree, enabled Jesus to set up an immediate contact with a word of praise. The understanding intimacy of the response [illegible] his [illegible] dreamer [illegible] to the conclusion and gave [illegible] witness to the impress[illegible] on him [illegible] a dream picture in [illegible] which the imagination of them both took wing and soared together where Philip could never follow. So the beginnings of that manifestation of the Master that resulted in responses from all sorts of folks are seen in their earliest making and offer continuous inspiration to His followers in search of others.

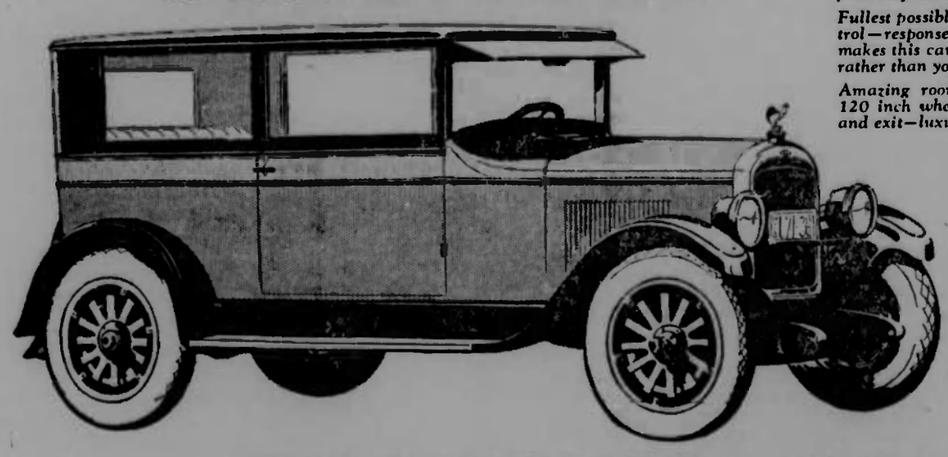
THE new-day car is here—and it's a Jewett. It is the answer of one of the automotive industry's oldest, strongest and most successful organizations to today's vital motoring needs and problems.

No surface comparison can adequately gauge this car's worth. Measure it instead against the situations and emergencies of driving.

Begin, if you like, with the severest test of all—take The New-Day Jewett into close-packed city traffic.

Dart in and out—shoot swiftly ahead of the jam—stop with soft smoothness—park in spaces you would have thought impossibly small!



Realization will come quickly—that here is a car, marvelously responsive to your touch, which takes instant advantage of every opening, gets you through streets that seem impenetrable, lets you come and go as you please where ordinarily you would never try to drive. A New-Day Car For New-Day Needs.

Then leave the crowded streets and seek unfrequented country roads where The New-Day Jewett will reveal a quality of performance which not even preceding Jewetts, acknowledged masters of the open road, can surpass.

After years of preparation, The New-Day Jewett is here—ready for you to see it and drive it.

Let nothing prevent your seeing this epochal new-day car without delay! And do not stop with a casual inspection, for the better you learn to know this car the more you will appreciate its unusualness—its right to be known as "The New-Day Car For New-Day Needs."

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. K. K. K. Watch Meeting and Banquet at Friendsville.

Last Thursday evening, December 31st, the Knights of the K. K. K. of Friendsville staged a watch meeting and banquet in honor of the women of the organization, the affair being held at the klavern with about two hundred Klansmen and Klanswomen present to enjoy the occasion.

Rev. P. W. Arbogast made a splendid address on the spiritual side of the Klan, basing his remarks on the 12th chapter of Romans. A mixed quartet rendered several fine selections and all the guests and members joined in a good old-time sing of American hymns by the audience.

Remarks were also made by Messrs. George J. Kolb, F. G. Fox and others.

A pantomime, "America," was given by four ladies of the women's organization.

At 10:30 the banquet was served, the menu consisting of oyster and chicken sandwiches, pickles, coffee, apple pie a la mode and other things.

As the old year was carried away by Father Time a signal was given to welcome the new year by a large cross burning on McCullough's Knob.

An enjoyable evening was spent by everyone present, each departing from the hall with a renewed spirit and believing the year of 1925 had been a profitable one in the Klan Kraft.

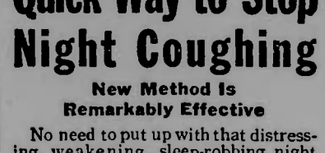
Quick Way to Stop Night Coughing



New Method Is Remarkably Effective

No need to put up with that distressing, weakening, sleep-robbing night cough another night. For there is a simple but very effective treatment which, usually with a single dose, stops all irritation and lets you sleep soundly the whole night through.

This treatment is based on the prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You take just one teaspoonful at night before retiring and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of night coughing. So the coughing stops quickly and you sleep all night undisturbed.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, sore throat, hoarseness, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children as well as grown-ups—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

PROTECTION OF WILD GAME BEING URGED

Killing Birds and Rabbits Out of Season Given as Cause of Scarcity in This County

Writing to his paper from Lonaconing, the correspondent of the Cumberland Daily News of Saturday last had the following to say concerning game and game conditions in that part of Garrett county bordering on the Lonaconing section:

"The scarcity of wild game in this section and part of Garrett county, has caused much complaint among hunters, especially the sportsmen of this place who are aware of and indignant over the extinction of pheasants and rabbits.

"Many reports have been current as to the cause and extent of this unfortunate killing, the most common of which seems to be that game is killed out of season and many sportsmen range their dogs in closed seasons, thus preventing the growth of wild game, which in past years was plentiful. One hunter, whose hobby is pheasant, quail and grouse, stated that this season he has not fired one shot in Garrett county where, in the years passed, he bagged big numbers daily.

In order to promptly alleviate the situation, the hunters of this section and vicinity will have to pull together and protect the game, for within another year hunting will be a thing of the past.

"The killing of game out of season in this neighborhood has occurred to some extent since the winter of 1923-1924. Previous investigations have shown that the game is killed this way, but thus far no examples have been made of the guilty parties.

"Energetic steps are going to be taken, it is said, with officials at Washington, who will keep in close touch with the situation in an effort to further assist the many Marylanders who are interested in this matter."

Egg Laying Competition

For some weeks I have been reading the accounts of the egg laying competition which is being conducted at College Park, Md., as it is a subject of which I am particularly fond of, and when I read the account of the past week's record I do not wonder at the opinion expressed by so many people, that up here on top of the Alleghenies it is too cold for anyone to make the poultry business pay, as they state in their account of last week's production that the average fell off or went down to 34.2 per cent when the weather got below freezing. If, when the weather gets below freezing, it causes the hens to fall off for everybody in the east, as it did those in the contest, no wonder the people in the warmer sections say the poultry business cannot be made to pay. Although we have had some severe weather here in Garrett county this winter, some days to zero and below, with a high wind, and some of our chickens had their combs frozen, yet from one flock of 56 Plymouth Rock pullets, hatched June 15; 38 White Wyandotts, hatched May 29; 31 Rhode Island Reds, hatched May 10, and 113 hens, 2 and 3 years old, (White Wyandotts and Leghorns) we did not receive less than 80 eggs each day, and from that up to 114. The first ten days of this month they laid eighty and one half dozen. and we do not have the time or the conveniences of an experimental farm, and do not give our chickens all the different kinds of feed they do at a place where they are conducting a contest. Yet, if the readers of this article will take their pencil and do a little figuring they will soon see how the chickens up here on the mountains compare with those in the eastern part of our state, or in warmer sections than ours. And then again, those pens at College Park are the pick of each man's flock contesting while ours are taken as a whole flock, not so much as being culled, but the flock just as they were hatched. We do not have the time to cull them, neither do we have any artificial heat in the houses. One house that we did not get completed this fall has some bad cracks in it, as we did not get any covering over it, just the rough boards put up and they have shrunk considerably.

TRIAL OF GLAD LARUE IS SET FOR FEBRUARY 1

Will Go On Trial For Murder of Woman Near Pittsburgh September 11th Last

Glad Larue, aged 24 years, son of Richard Larue, livnig on the National Highway between the Big and Little Savage Mountains in Garrett county, will go on trial Saturday, February 1, at Pittsburgh, Pa., charged with the murder of Mrs. Mollie McGinnis, East Pittsburgh, Pa., whose death occurred on Friday, September 11th, last.

Attorney John M. Henry, Pittsburg and vicinity, where he was well Summit, near Frostburg, Allegany county, will represent Larue, and is expected to be in Frostburg some time this week to go over certain details in connection with the case with members of the Larue family.

Larue's case has caused much speculation among the residents of the northern and eastern section of Garrett county and the people of Frostburg and vicinity, wher che was well known and was esteemed by many as a young man of apparent industrious habits prior to going to Pittsburgh three or four years ago.

Larue's victim, Mrs. McGinnis, was returning to her home from a shopping trip to Wilkinsburg, Pa., and was near the home of a neighbor when it is alleged Larue accosted her. It is said that Larue had a piece of led pipe in his hand and pursuing Mrs. McGinnis up a flight of stairs to the apartment of a neighbor, battered the door down which had been closed in his face, and grabbed Mrs. McGinnis, hitting her over the head until she became unconscious. She died a short time after the assault had been made.

Larue was not caught until several days after the commission of the crime with which he stands indicted. He escaped from the city the same night he killed Mrs. McGinnis, arriving in Frostburg the following morning and before the news of the commission of the crime had been received by the local officers. Two or three days later his capture at the home of his father located between the two Savage Mountains was effected hy the police of Frostburg, who later turned him over to the Pittsburgh officials.

BALTIMORE BOOTLEGGERS ARE BROUGHT TO OAKLAND

City Prison Jammed. So Twenty White and Colored Prisoners Come To Garrett County

Saturday afternoon United States Marshall Collier of Baltimore brought twenty Federal prisoners, white and colored to Oakland and turned them over to Sheriff Guy O. Yutzy to be confined in the local jail to serve their sentences of from thirty to ninety days following conviction in the Federal Court of Baltimore on bootlegging charges.

With all jails in Baltimore crowded the city officials were at a loss to know what to do with their charges until it was suggested that they be sent to the various counties, hence twenty were brought to Oakland, while three went to Hagerstown, five to Westminster and three to Frederick, with the Government agreeing to pay the county authorities for their keep.

In all seventy-two convictions on bootleggeing charges were obtained by the Government in the Baltimore court. To house the prisoners while court was still in session U. S. Marshall Collier succeeded in having some of them lodged in the Towson jail and other institutions near Baltimore until the exodus to Western Maryland began.

The men were brought here under guard and met at the railway station by Sheriff Yutzy who marched them to the local jail.

One resident of Oakland, when the procession was crossing Second street, wanted to know what minstrel troupe had arrived in town.

TWO YOUNG MEN MAIMED WHEN SHOTGUN EXPLODED

Set Off Charge in Old Firearm while Serenading Newly-Married Couple at Hazelton

Two young men—one from Garrett county, near Friendsville, and the other from Hazelton, Preston county, West Va.—are in the Western Maryland Hospital, Cumberland suffering from wounds and maimed for life as the result of a serenading party as the result of what had its origin in a hilarious party going out to serenade a newly wedded pair near the home of one of the victims which ended most disastrously.

Clyde Friend, of near Friendsville, and Dewey Fike, of Hazelton, West Va., are the two young men injured. They had gone with others of the community to serenade a newly-wedded pair and by the explosion of an old shotgun Friend had his left hand blown off, while Fike had several fingers so badly lacerated that they had to be amputated, his teeth knocked out and a part of his tongue cut off.

As members of the serenading party and in order to add more din and noise created by the serenaders, Fike and Friend took with them an old firearm loaded with powder with the intention of setting it off.

As the trigger spring on the gun had become broken, the young men propped the firearm against a rock and struck the percussion cap with another rock. The gun was so heavily loaded with powder that it exploded, part of the barrel striking Fike in the mouth and on his hand and another portion of the steel barrel almost severing Friend's left hand at his wrist.

The two young men were hurriedly taken to the Western Maryland Hospital in Cumberland, arriving there about four o'clock Monday morning, where Friend's hand and Fike's fingers were amputated by Dr. W. A. Gracie of the hospital staff.

Health Gnome Speaks In Behalf of The Runabout.

Does your child have a rest after his midday meal? If he does, the child is less likely to have tantrums and nerves, and you will get a good mark from his Health Gnome who is an occasional visitor to the State Department of Health. The Health Gnome blew in the other day and expressed his approval of the emphasis laid on the importance of the midday rest for the runabout, in a pamphlet just issued by the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health. This is what the pamphlet says on that subject:

"Every young child should have a rest of forty-five minutes on a bed or couch after the midday meal. No active child under six years old can store up sufficient energy even in a good night's sleep to carry him through the day without fatigue." "Because the runabout period—after infancy and before school—is such an important period in the life of the growing child, parents are further advised to take these youngsters to their family physicians every three months, for inspection and advice.

Here are some of the things the runabout is up against:

"Rapid growth and development of body and mind occurrence of four fifth of all of the infectious diseases; development of the physical defects that are not present at birth, such as defective teeth, obstruction in breathing from enlarged tonsils and adenoids, deformed bones from rickets, defects of eyesight and hearing. Habits good and bad are also formed at this period and are difficult to alter later. Some the these are obedience, self control, unselfishness, team play, punctuality, cleanliness."

Because these transformations are taking lace in the body and mind and spirit of a little child, a trip to the family doctor, at regular intervals of three or four months, is urged, so the proper advice can be given to the parents as to the child's food, clothing, sleep, rest and training, in order that defects may be corrected and helpful habits encouraged.

LOCH LYNN

The Sunbeam Band rendered a very interesting program at the Baptist church here on last Sunday evening.

Mr. John Sisk, who is employed at Scottdale, Pa., is visiting his parents here.

Mrs. H. M. Weeks and Mrs. E. E. Kesner delightfully entertained the U. B. Ladies' Aid Society at the Aid hall in this village on Friday. Mrs. B. F. Ryan, of Rowlesburg, was the guest of the afternoon. At the close of the business session refreshments were served.

There will be the usual services in both churches here next Sunday.

Mrs. E. E. Kesner was a Cumberland visitor last week.

Grand Master White of the I. O. O. F., left Loch Lynn Monday night for Baltimore, going to that city on business connected with the great organization of which he is the head in this State. Grand Master White has given the Odd Fellows of Maryland his best and results show his enthusiasm and intense loyalty to the fraternity.

Mrs. B. L. Hardesty spent several days of last week with friends in Keyser, West Va.

Miss Lola Belle Green will meet the women's class of this village at the Aid Hall on the third Wednesday of the present month. The purpose of this meeting will be to plan work for the present year. [illegible] it

Odd Fellows' Home For Aged And Orphans At Frederick

In a recent issue of "The Maryland Odd Fellow" the following item concerning the new home at Frederick appeared in part as follows:

"WHAT HAVE GOD WROUGHT?"

To every member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in the [illegible] jurisdiction to every Grand Lodge official past and present of every branch of the Order including Encampments, Patriarchs Militant and Rebekahs the Maryland Odd Fellow extends [illegible] upon the completion of the noblest and [illegible] work ever accomplished by Maryland members—the creation of the Odd Fellows' Home and Orphanage and Aged at Frederick.

The Building Commission, headed by Grand Representative John B. Spence, and composed of twenty or more Odd Fellows and Rebekahs, deserves especial mention for its capable work. Truly, the commission has been untiring in its efforts to discharge with honor the tremendous task assigned it, and have given great care and attention to every phase of building operations and the securing of funds to finance the project. Too much praise for faithful, efficient service rendered cannot be given these capable stewards.

Grand Secretary William A. Jones, Grand Representative H. Dorsey Etchison, Past Grand Master W. James Wilkinson, Sr., are others that deserve the welcome plaudit: "Well done, good and faithful servant."

With these servants, the editor has been closely associated, and can state emphatically and without fear of contradiction, that if the general membership could only realize to some faint extent just what sacrifice of heath, of money, of time and labor, they have given on this humanitarian enterprise, all would appreciate more deeply their efforts and thank Almighty God that He has spared to the Order such faithful stewards.

Again, we desire to say a word of praise for every member, because we believe that in raising the magnificent sum of half a million dollars by voluntary contributions — Maryland Odd Fellows and Rebekahs have established a new record for real philanthropy. A record unequalled by any fraternity.

This home marks the 64th to be erected under the Sovereign Grand Lodge with a total real estate value of $11,000,517.93, and which have cared for 16,000 orphans and aged. The cost of maintenance during 1924 was $1,524,899.72. In the number of homes Pennsylvania leads all jurisdictions with seven; New York has five; Illinois, Kentucky, California and Oklahoma two each, while the others are located in various states of the Union, in Canada and Australia.

In the light of these facts, what a shining example of the true mission of fraternal relationship—of love and sacrifice—has been rendered humanity by the greatest of all fraternities—the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and we should be extremely proud of membership in, and the accomplishment of, our Order. Let us in thanksgiving "praise God from whom all blessings flow," for it has only been through His manifold blessings that these achievements have been wrought.

The Home For The Aged

A beautiful thought came from the realms above,
It spread out its wings like a pure white dove,
It came to earth life, and knocked at the door
And whispered, "A HOME for the aged who may sorrow no more."

So we sat in the silence and waited for God
To show us the pathway that lead to the road.
Soon the still voice it answered within,
"God in His wisdom will lead you; trust Him.
Long years have you struggled, have valiantly served,
And never from the path have you fallen nor swerved.
You have worked! and have toiled with tear bedimmed eye,
And Jesus, our Master, saw as He silently went by.
He has opened the portals of Heaven's own door—
A Home for the aged who will sorrow no more.

Grand Master A. T. White, who is now head of Maryland Odd Fellows, is encouraging a movement now under way to have a great gathering of Western Maryland Odd Fellows within the next 60 days.

Tentative plans for this big event will be discussed by a committee which will meet at Westernport Wednesday evening, January 13th.

BAYARD

Bayard elected a mayor, recorder and five councilmen, Thursday, January 7th. While there was some opposition for each office, the campaign was extremely quiet and the total vote cast was the lightest in years. The canridates elected are as follows:

Mayor, George Snyder; recorder, H. R. Pud Fulk; councilmen, I. L. Neville, J. S. Frost, A. C. Shaffer, William Fulk, E. F. Wolfe. The results were: People's ticket—Mayor, Charles Alkire, 60; recorder, H. R. Fulk, 70, councilmen, J. L. Aronhalt, 63, E. F. Wolfe, 60, I. L. Neville,122, J. S. Frost, 117, W. S. Pugatt, 58.

Citizen' ticket—Mayor, George Snyder,73; recorder, C. E. Hickerson, 57; councilmen, J. S. Frost,117, William Vance, 56, I. L. Neville, 122, William Fulk, 70 A. C. Shafer, 75.

The newly elected mayor, George Snyder, is by no means new to the duties of mayor; having served some years ago and is held a reputation of being one of the best mayors Bayard ever had. Acting mayor Charles Alkire, was appointed to the office of recorder made vacant by the death in April of the late Frank Harvey. G. C. Shaffer, who was mayor, resigned his position in June and took superintendent of the Cumberland and Allegheny [illegible] accepting employment elsewhere, when asked, Mr. Alkire was called upon to act as mayor and recorder. Mr. Alkire never felt free to conduct the office of mayor as he felt he was not elected to either office, and did not care to be accused of trying to run the town administrative affairs without having been duly elected by the citizens of the community. Many public spirited citizens who have the interest of the community at heart regret that councilman J. L. Aronhalt was not returned to the council. Mr. Aronhalt's vote was effected by the fact that two candidates for council had run on both tickets; Mr. Aronhalt on point with [illegible] achievement during his term of office.

"Pud" Fulk, who was elected recorder over C. E. Hickerson, is the youngest of the new officers elected. All will assume their duties Tuesday, February 2.

The bowling alleys of the Emmons Coal Mining Co. are greatly patronized during these cold nights. An interesting contest was held Saturday night, the prize being a cowhide shirt won by Clarence Longhran. Plans are taking shape to hold a bowling tournament in the very near future.

An innovation is planned by Mine Superintendent Ed. Gerstell and Lindsey Frazier, poolroom and bowling alley managers, in the form of a ladies' night on the bowling alleys. It is thought the idea will prove a popular one. Superintendent Gerstell also announces a dance will be given to the employees of the Emmons Coal Mining Company, their families and friends. The dance will be held next week. The Potomac Six Orchestra will furnish the music.

Potomac Lodge 108, I. O. O. F. held a well attended meeting at Emmons lodge rooms Saturday night. Reports of the past year showed excellent progress in the growth of the lodge. The following officers were installed: Past grand, A. N. Brown; noble grand, Oran Fulk; right support to N. G., Art Mullenix; left support to N. G., C. E. Hickerson; vice grand, William Fulk; right support to V. G., Dan Casner; left support to V. G., C. Graham; recording secretary, A. S. May; financial secretary, Chas. Fulk; warden, M. W. Smith; chaplain, H. F. Fulk; inside guard, Marshall Blizzard, outside guard, Paul A. Leatherman; William E. Vance was elected trustee for a three year term. Owing to the inability of District Deputy Luke McDonald, of Keyser, W. Va., in arriving at Bayard, H. F. Fulk acted as installing officer.

Through the combined efforts of Councilman J. L. Aronhalt and Prof. E. B. Phares, principal of Bayard's High School, the school is now connected to the lighting system recently installed in the upper end of the town. The work of installing the street lights is held up pending the arrival of the necessary equipment which is expected to arrive this week.

Mr. G. C. McIntire, purchasing agent, Emmons Coal Mining Co., who spent the latter part of last week at Bayard, has returned to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. C. L. Nine left Sunday to visit her daughter, Grette, who is ill at Scherr, West Va.

A large number of the Ladies of the Maccabees of Bayard will attend the district meeting of the order at Piedmont, W. Va., Wednesday, January 13.

BITTINGER

One of the most uncomfortable storms of the winter swept over this section last Friday when the wind blew furiously from the east, carrying with it great flurries of sand-like snow.

Silas O. Wiley, of Elk Lick, Pa., spent a couple of days here last week visiting relatives. Mr. Wiley reports that his wife, who recently underwent a serious surgical operation, is recovering very satisfactorily.

Mrs. C. C. Penny, of near this village, was taken to Meyersdale, Pa., one day last week where she underwent a surgical operation in one of the hospitals in that city. We are glad to be able to report that the operation was a success and that Mrs. Beachy is rapidly recovering.

Mrs. T. B. Wiley, of Grantsville, spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives in Bittinger.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Mutual Telephone Co., which was announced to be held in this village last Saturday afternoon, did not materialize as a sufficient number of stockholders failed to attend the meeting.

Communion services will be held in the Lutheran church of this village next Sunday morning, January 17th, at 11:00 o'clock.

THE CHANGING NEAR EAST

By JOHN W. MACE
Field Director of the Near East Relief

The observance in December of Golden Rule Sunday on behalf of the overseas work of the Near East Relief, as sponsored by President Coolidge, calls again to public attention the importance and significance of this humanitarian enterprise. In the current number of the Review of Reviews, Mr. Mace reviews what America has done for the people of Bible Lands. This extract is given by special permission of the publishers.

THE Near East is a true topsy-turvy land, where things are not what they seem nor as you expect them to be.

Everything that the American thinks he knows about the Near East turns out to be different when he gets there. For example, nothing is more definite to the American mind—before the American leaves home—than the well established fact that Turkey achieved a tremendous victory over Greece three years ago, crushing the power of the Greek nation utterly and securing to itself an indisputable ascendency in all the Ægean and Anatolian region. But visit the Near East and what is your discovery? There you realize that Greece looks vastly more like a victor, now, than Turkey.

Empty Bowl, Formed by Children of an American Orphanage in Syria.

Shabby Constantinople

The Turk holds Constantinople, of course, by virtue of scaring Europe's peace negotiators when he came down to the Bosphorus with the big, insolent army that had driven all Greeks, military and civil, out of Asia Minor. But there is grave question about how much glory there is in holding the Constantinople of today. The city looks meaner and shabbier than it ever did before. Try as one will to wish well to the modernized Turk in his professional reformations, one has to acknowledge that if the appearance of the city of Constantinople is any sign, the Turk is still the sick man of the Orient. And he has lost Syria, Arabia, and Mesopotamia forever.

Prosperous Athens

On the other hand, in startling contrast, Athens is a city on a boom. By the same token the present-day Greek is in lusty health. Greece's comeback since 1922 is amazing. Not only in the capital and in other cities, but in towns and in country districts there abound evidences of a sound and growing prosperity.

All this has happened as the direct result of Greece's great "defeat." The stupidity of the Turks in driving out their Greek-Christian subjects, after their supposed triumph at Smyrna, is proving an incalculable enrichment to Greece. After the fall of Smyrna the Greek nation in Europe, with rare generosity and faith, opened its doors to receive the refugees of Grecian stock who were being expelled from Asia Minor, although it meant the herculean hazard of absorbing a million new inhabitants into a population of five millions on a limited and thinsoiled area.

It was a task and risk from which the strongest and richest nation on earth might excusably have shrunk. Huge borrowings and desperate expedients were necessary in order to feed and shelter this horde of fugitives. Inevitably there was great loss of life among the sick, infirm, and aged; only the strongest survived. But today that undesired immigration is fast proving an asset to Greece. It brought into the nation a host of clever, thrifty, enterprising people—the sort especially that had made Smyrna the richest city of its size on earth—a great army of producers and business organizers.

Athens is vibrant with energy, distinctly American in spirit. Its population has doubled since the beginning of the World War.

The pro-American feeling of Athens is not exhausted by its imitative energies; a great spring of gratitude wells out of the national heart. Greece has not forgotten that America, through the medium of the Near East Relief and other benevolent agencies, sent her inestimable assistance in money and in experienced social workers when refugees from across the Ægean three years ago were pouring in on her by hundreds of thousands—sick, hungry and dying.

I took much comfort in thinking of that while I was in Athens, for there is no satifaction deeper than in helping those who help themselves. Watching the crowd, it pleased me to reflect that some, at least, of those happy folk were among the exiles whom America had fed and helped to keep alive until they could stand on their own feet again. And it is pleasant to record that the Greek public authorities never let down any of their own efforts because Americans were there helping. They shouldered the utmost of their own burden, and cooperated besides in everything that the American organizations asked; and it should be remembered that more than half of the wards of the Near East orphanages are Armenian children, with absolutely no claim—except the paramount claim of humanity—for refuge on Greek soil.

The GOLDEN RULE in PRACTICE

A series of articles by prominent leaders on the Golden Rule as a guide in International Relations.

FURTHERING WORLD PEACE

By SIR ESME HOWARD
British Ambassador to the United States

PUBLIC opinion in America is rallying to the belief that the nation's own prosperity depends to a great extent on the prosperity of others. By helping the Near East Relief you are laying a great foundation for America's future in foreign lands.

You may think it strange that I, as an Englishman, should rejoice to see American competition growing in these countries of the Near East. I do so not only because as a sincere friend and admirer I am glad to see prosperity in this country, but also because I believe it will bring prosperity to those countries also.

At the time of the Christian exodus from Anatolia, 1,500,000 refugees were received into impoverished Greece. It is estimated that fifty per cent of these people are now able to provide for themselves. The Greek government is spending millions for this purpose, and the refugee commission of the League of Nations is administering a large international loan for the same purpose. I say this to show how impossible it is to expect these overburdened agencies to take over the many thousand children whom the Near East Relief is so generously and magnificently supporting, teaching them to earn their own living and become useful citizens. For the Near East Relief not only gives these children what we generally mean by education, but also teaches them all kinds of trades by which they may become self-supporting as they grow up.

Here is a work in which we all, whatever our faith, can gladly and heartily co-operate. It is a common ground on which we can all join in the service of God and of our fellow men.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent public men who are supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call public attention to the background and importance of the work and its need for general support.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 17, 1926.

JESUS AND NICODEMUS.

John 3:1-17; 7:45-52; 19:38-42.

God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life.—John 3:16.

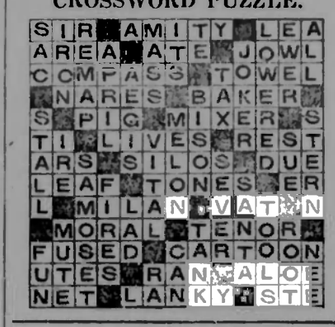
THE MEETING.

Under the stars and the open sky two men met. There is nothing so strange about that; it has happened in every century a thousand times, both before and since. How does it become worth while to study this particular case? It does not all lie in the skill of the teller tho that has a place. John's passion was the acceptance of his Lord. His purpose was the winning of a verdict from the Ephesian hearers and Dr. Robinson suggests that the Gospel is made up of sermon notes from the preacher's addresses. Certainly the story of that night told fifty years after its occurrring loses nothing of vividness by the passage of years. Swift,sure strokes bring the figures into bold relief. Youth and age are there; Judaism and Christianity face each other; form and spirit stand opposed; assurance and hesitancy contend for mastery; man and God bring their highest to that roof picture, and the resulting story has dominated the thinking of all the years since.

Jesus had been busy about Jerusalem and tho it may or may not have included the cleansing of the temple—a thing about which scholars differ, since John uses it as much for persuasion as for history, and could in that case have mentioned the one of the other Gospels—it brought Him into the notice of the Jewish leaders in such fashion that he was the question mark in the conversation of the day. War talk was everywhere, and the Jews could not tell where to place this enigma from Nazareth who had refused to join the revolutionists there but whose present attitude toward the seething popular discontent with Roman rule was not determined. Coming on top of the Baptizer's furor there was eager questioning as to what course He might take. It was something of this inability to "place" Jesus properly that brought this night scene.

THE MAN.

Nicodemus embodies the best of the products of the Jewish faith among its scholars. Fisherfolk and an ideal Israelite had given testimony concerning Jesus; now it is an aristocrat, and next it will be a woman of the street, so that John is picking his witnesses from all classes. For all classes were impressed by this Son of Man. Nicodemus took the scholar's time for the interview, and the semi-darkness under the pale stars and silvery moon invited confidences. He was courting an uninterrupted hour and one that held only himself and his Host. Courteous and perhaps a bit patronizing toward this unknown starter of tongues, one can only conjecture his reason for coming. Probably it lay in the region of his interest in the matters that might affect the welfare of the city and nation and he wanted to get a "line" on what Jesus had in mind. At any rate with his fine old face, his gray hair, his dignity and courtesy, he presents an unusually attractive figure. One is surprised at the bruskness of Jesus. There is no attempt to meet courteous phrase with courteous phrase. Bluntly He set him outside the Kingdom and told him he was not even in sight of it. And that to a member of the Sanhedrin and certainly one of its best. Was Jesus stirred by something of condescension upon the part of this member of select society?



THE MATTER.

Jesus was concerned with life; Nicodemus with its clothes. He was coming to consult a tailor over a new pattern for Judaism, but met a surgeon who demanded a major operation before fitting the cloth. There would have been no objection if the statement had been, "the Gentiles must be born anew." Jesus began the interview with a shock, there was no other way of entry into the man's mind. He is a bit testy in his startled query that is not so much query as indignant denial. It is as if he said, "You speak in riddles, Sir." But he was awake enough, roused and shaken out of all his self-complacency with which he had so conventionally attempted to begin the interview. There is no teaching possible without a roused mind, and that this master Teacher now had. He began the explanation of the way into the new life through the gateway of birth. It is the following of the inner urge of light that carries the grub up from the oozy bottom of the pond, up the swaying stalk and out into the sunlit region for which he was destined. So man feels the call of light and life and leaves the darkness which John terms death and finds himself in a new world in which the Spirit of Jesus is both light and life. Water for witness, spirit for worth brought Nicodemus to really searching for the way by which so great a marvel could be accomplished. Jesus immediately brought the testimony of experience and swept his inquirer out into the immensities of a world in which God's love was manifest and intended for every man regardless of race or condition. "Belief in a map, faith in a voyage," is the way Jowett expresses John's use of a term, for his chief interest was that men should venture out on the vast sea of the love of God revealed in Jesus.

THE MOVEMENT.

How far did our Lord carry Nicodemus that night? There is no way of knowing, but he was shaken out of his old attitude of mind and given a vision such as had never been his before. The hour probably stretched into several before he took his dignified way down the steps and through the silent streets. But he changed. He was no longer willing to be a mere cipher hidden in a "we." There came a day when bitter hate stirred against this Meddler with other folk's matter, and the group of which he was a part was openly hostile. It was then that he stood alone and said "L" It may not have been very loud, but it was tremendously different from his old position. He had broken from his crowd. Later there came the culmination of the hate in the cross and Nicodemus appeared again, bringing spices for the body and doing a thing that parallels the furnishing of flowers for the burial of a hanged convict. He would certainly get on the front page today with any such act, and he gained notoriety in Jerusalem by act of affection. Interest had grown to love to cause any such lavishly beautiful gift and he had certainly moved from his old darkness into the kingdom of light and love.

Dangerous Cough —How to End it

To quickly end a dangerous cough there is a very simple treatment which gives almost instant relief and often breaks the cough entirely in 24 hours.

This treatment is based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You take just one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but also loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. So the worst cough usually disappears quickly.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

The Constitutional Amendments and Other Structural Changes In Our Republican Form of Government.

By Finley C. Hendrickson in the Cumberland Sunday Times.

The argument is made that there should not be such an ado of late about amending the Constitution, since it has been amended nineteen times, and ten amendments were added shortly after the draft was ratified.

If we analyze the amendments, however, it will plainly appear why the earlier amendments created so little dissatisfaction and apprehension as compared with the later additions.

The first ten additions to the Constitution ,while called amendments, and ratified as all the other amendments have been ratified, constitute a Bill of Rights. Had the Constitutional Convention concluded a Bill of Rights was needed, it would have been placed ahead of the Constitution, like the Preamble. Hamilton argued that the Constitution did not call for a Bill of Rights; that it was in itself the great Bill of Rights for the American people, and he pointed out that the State of New York and some other States did not have a Bill of Rights in connection with their Constitutions; but Jefferson and others argued that a Bill of Rights be appended by the amendment plan, and this was done.

But the first ten amendments changed nothing in the original constitutional plan and in effect amended nothing. It might be proper to state in passing that very respectable authority holds to the view that the Bill of Rights did not strengthen the Constitution but rather weakened it. Certain it is that the main object of the supporters of the first ten amendments, namely, to prevent the encroachment of the federal branch upon the powers inherent in the states, went glimmering long ago.

Then came the Eleventh Amendment, correcting an error of court.

The Twelfth Amendment, directing the electoral college to vote for a president and vice-president of the same political faith, where the former provision was to vote for but one, the highest to be president and the next highest to be vice-president, made no structural change, though it gave somewhat less of a minority representation in the executive department of the federal branch.

The Thirteenth Amendment sounding to abolish slavery had no practical effect, as that institution had already been disposed of through the arbitrament of arms. It did put the offensive word slavery into the Constitution where the founders of the Republic had been careful to keep that odious word out of the instrument.

That part of the Fourteenth Amendment which aimed to punish the South by cutting down representation in the House of Representatives if they did not let the negro vote, was never enforced, and other sections of the Amendment made no structural changes.

The Fifteenth, or negro suffrage Amendment, was never enforced, but proposed a serious denial of the right of self-government to the States.

With the ratification of the Sixteenth or income tax Amendment, we come, in effect, to the beginning of the structural changes in our Constitution.

The Seventeenth Amendment destroyed the federal character of the Senate, creating, as it were, a second House of Representatives, like two congressmen at large from each state, representing constituencies,not states. The change was revolutionary, far-reaching, and has been attended by many political manifestations. Direct action to secure political results rushed through the open door. In that Amendment we now face the anomalous situation of a federal republic, as originally conceived, with the dominant federal feature in the national branch destroyed.

The Eighteenth Amendment struck heavily at the structural plan of the Constitution, particulaly the dual feature. It sets up an entirely new theory of government, that of "concurrent power" between Congress and the several states," supplanting the original constitutional plan of clearly divided powers. It reset more landmarks and tore down more foundation stones from the original plan than all the amendments from the first to the fifteenth inclusive. In the final analysis (mark the limitation) prohibition is not on trial in the 18th Amendment. As a sound or unsound policy of government prohibition will receive its vindication or rejection when given a fair trial under the Constitution proper.

The Nineteenth Amendment went another step to deny to the people of the states the right of self-government.

We may, upon proper analysis, trace why the last four amendments awakened so much political apprehension. They not only change the original plan of the Republic, but they set up antagonistic theories and practices to the original plan. The earlier amendments may be likened to adding supports to a building where all necessary supports had already been provided for, and the later amendments to tearing out supports upon which the whole plan rested heavily. To state the importance of the subject in another light, suppose all the earlier amendments had made as much structural change as the latter additions, how much of the original Constitution would remain? What two systems of government among societies of men differ more widely than do the later amendments from the original constitutional plan?

But the amendment changes do not embrace all the departures from the original plan of the Republic. Great structural changes have been inaugurated through administration policies, changes which in themselves have carried us far afield as a nation. The erection of a vast bureaucratic system, state and federal, (boards, bureaus and commissions not amenable to any direct control of the American electorate, but vastly increasing and reflecting the executive appointing power) has overlaid, like a web, our whole political experiment. Much that vitally affects the rights, liberties and property of freemen is now controlled more by bureaucracies than is affected by the original powers of government. The judicial system, state and federal, is being made subservient to the "rules" (in effect legislation) of multiplied bureaucracies which in turn are chained to the executive appointing power.

The substitution of the initiative and referendum for legislative responsibility, along with direct primaries, has cut heavily into the basic principle of representative government without the constant functioning of which a true Republic cannot be said to exist.

The subsidies conditionally voted the states by Congress are as discreditable to the federal branch as to the states.

The extension of federal power to a multiplicity of matters outside the orbit in which it was constitutionally designed to revolve has in a large measure unfitted it to deal with the major matters for which it was specially fitted and designed.

The primary object of this article has been to indicate the departures from the original plan of our Federal Republic rather than attempt to trace out the results attendant upon the innovations.

In addition to the election of a board of directors and officers for the present year, a number of other matters of business were attended to and definite plans made for the marketing of the company's product on a considerable scale.

The plant of the company is located between Deer Park and Altamont, on the property formerly owned by Col. George Treusdell, but now owned by Messrs. R. A. Smith and John Shore, of Blaine and Kitzmiller.

Several months ago some business men of Wheeling purchased from these gentlemen the bottling plant erected by Col. Treusdell. several acres of land, the springs which were extensively advertised by Col. Treusdell in various parts of the country, as also all of the equipment, pipe line rights, etc., necessary for the operation of the plant, it being the intention to manufacture and place on the market a high grade ginger ale and also to bottle and ship for table and general use water from the famous springs.

A company, known as the Altamont Springs Corporation was incorporated under the laws of Maryland and since then extensive repairs have been made to the bottling house and about the springs; new machinery has been purchased and installed and all arrangements made for the bottling of ginger ale and water on a large scale and the placing of the same upon the general market. Already a considerable amount of Altamont Springs Ginger Ale has been shipped to a number of nearby towns and cities, and wherever it has been placed the same has met with much popularity because of the high grade product and purity of the water used in its manufacture.

From now on the company expects to push the sale of its products and to place the same actively on the market and shortly to have its plant running at full time with a number of employes. The prospects look bright for this new Garrett county enterprise.

The directors and officers chosen at the meeting on Monday were as follows: Directors, J. N. Hendrix, A. J. Nager and G. J. Coffey, all of Wheeling; W. W. Dawson and E. R. Jones, Oakland. President, J. N. Hendrix; vice-president, G. J. Coffey; treasurer, A. J. Nager; secretary, E. R. Jones; general manager, J. W. Adams, of Wheeling; plant manager, A. H. Adams, Deer Park.

LUMBERING IN THE WEST

How Logging in the Big Woods Is Carried on by a Former Garrett Countian.

The Republican was in receipt of a letter some days ago from Mr. Frank O. Glotfelty, who has been engaged in logging in Idaho for the past six years, in which Mr. Glotfelty describes the mode in vogue in handling logs in the big woods of the northwest.

Mr. Glotfelty's letter follows:

To the Editor of The Republican.

Thinking that some of my friends and relatives in Garrett county might enjoy reading some news about how we log and manufacture lumber out here, I will write a few lines.

It will be six years in March since I came to the northwest. These years have passed very rapidly, but they have been prosperous years. I felt blue and discouraged at first, but finally got into the game and got busy, and then the time passed swiftly by.

I worked four months and was promoted to superintendent of an outfit that consisted of five steam donkey engines with over 100,000 feet of 7-8 and 1 1-8 inch cable, about 100 head of horses, three camps with three hundred men and five miles of flume, which outfit had been producing annually around 28,000,000 feet of logs. Yesterday Mr. John Dimeling, whom many of you know, handed me a statement showing what we did in 1925.

My inventory on January 1, 1926, showed 36 head of horses, no donkeys used in 1925, and 150 men employed in the woods. We produced in 1925 41,366,150 feet of logs; 8240 cedar telegraph poles, averaging 40 feet in length. The logs cost around $6 per thousand feet to cut and skid to flume. The poles cost 3 1-2 cents per foot afloat in the flume. We have over eight miles of flume now. The logs for the year averaged about 10 logs to the thousand feet.

The company operate their Spirit Lake mill nine months in the year and lost only 20 minutes time in the nine months. They cut 44,300,000 feet of lumber.

We have another electric mill at Ione, Washington. The two mills cut in 1925 87,666,000 feet of lumber. 76,000,000 feet was shipped and there is on stick 60,000,000 feet. The company has at the present rate of cutting, fifteen years' steady run before them.

I have several Garrett county boys working for me. They all like the work and climate and the pork and beans. They are all healthy and prosperous. I have one man who worked for me in Maryland and West Virginia but never saved a dollar until he came here. On January 1st he had at interest in one bank $6600. So this is not a bad place to be if you do your part.

The climate and weather is fine. We have had nine months' of nice sunshiny weather. From May 1st to October 1st we did not loose an hour on account of rain.

Mr. John Dimeling, who bought the mill at Bond, Md., and finished that job, is president and general manager here, so you see I am not among strangers.

We have a good class of men, consisting of Slavs, Swedes, Italians, Indians, Greeks and lots of other nationalities I never knew before.

We all like the great northwest.

Wishing you all a prosperous new year, I am,

F. O. GLOTFELTY.

Spirit Lake, Idaho, Jan. 9, 1926.

OAKLAND BESTS BERLIN QUINTET IN FAST GAME

Close Guarding Held Hoyt and Montgomery In Check—Return Game Last Night

The Oakland A. A. of the Pennsylvania-Maryland Basketball League, defeated Berlin, Pa., here Tuesday night by the score of 39 to 21 before the largest crowd of the season.

Dewey Rice, Oakland forward, was the outstanding star of the game with nine field goals to his credit. The locals took the lead at the start and were never headed. The score at half time was 19-7. Walter Hoyt and Mott Montgomery, former Keyser Collegians, appeared in Berlin's lineup, but close guarding kept them from getting loose.

Oakland played the Berliners a return game last night. The referee was so manifestly unfair in his decisions that the locals walked off the floor during the last four minutes of play with one foul against Berlin and 20 or more chalked up against the visitors.

The lineup at Tuesday night's game was as follows:

Oakland 39	Pos.	Berlin 21
Rice	F	Miller
Parsons	F	Imhoff
Bolden N.	C	Hoyt
Carrico	G	Montgomery
Shaffer	G	Saylor

Substitutes: Coleman for Imhoff, Groff for Saylor. Field goals, Rice 9, Parsons 3, Bolden 3, Miller 3, Imhoff 2, Hoyt 2, Coleman 1. Fouls, Rice 3-4; Parsons 5-5; Bolden 0-1; Shaffer 1-1; Miller 4-8; Imhoff 0-1; Hoyt 1-2; Montgomery 0-1; Saylor 0-1. Referee Collins.

1160 MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED HERE LAST YEAR

Largest Number Written in Any Year Since Formation of Garrett County.

Since the year 1914, The Republican has been printing in its mid-January issue a table showing the number of marriage licenses issued for the preceding year at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland.

The year that has just passed was the banner year in the marriage license bureau at the Court House, during whieh year 1160 licenses were issued. The year 1923 ran 1925 a very close second when 1142 permits to marry were written. In 1924 the number issued totalled 1083, which was one greater than in 1920, when 1082 licenses were applied for and granted. In this latter period the soldiers who had been engaged overseas and in various cantonments in this country had returned to their usual walks of life and had again taken up the civil pursuits, establishing a business and then as is natural they courted and won their helpmates with the result that 199 more licenses were issued in Oakland in 1920 than during the 12 months preceding.

The following dates and figures tell the rest of the story:

Year	No. Licenses
1914	733
1915	744
1916	751
1917	820
1918	770
1919	883
1920	1082
1921	961
1922	1030
1923	1142
1924	1083
1925	1160

Rev. A. J. Torrey To Leave Oakland February 1st.

Rev. A. J. Torrey, rector of St. Matthew's Episcopal church, has resigned as rector of that church to take effect on January 31st. Rev. Torrey will enter the Order of the Holy Cross, located at West Park, New York.

His many friends here will be interested to know something about the work in which he will be engaged after leaving Oakland. This order is a religious order of the Episcopal church, founded in 1881 under the guiding genius of Rev. George H. Houghton, D. D., also the founder of the famous "Little Church Around the Corner," whose real name is the Church of the Transfiguration of New York. The members of the Order of the Holy Cross began their work in the worst part of the East Side of New York among the slum tenaments, seeking to relieve the sick and very poor. In 1892, the Order moved to Westminster, Md., where they lived for twelve years and before the growth of the order required them to move to their present community house in West Park.

The men of this order are engaged in the teaching and preaching ministry and missionary work of the church. They have a college preparatory school of two hundred students located at Kent, Connecticut, and a splendid school for the poor white boys of St. Andrew's, Tenn. They also have a mission work at Ripon, Wis., and a mission work in Liberia, Africa. Rev. Torrey expects to eventually be located in one of these three fields of endeavor, although he is at the command of the head of the order. Rev. Robert E. Cam bell was consecrated Bishop of Liberia in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York City, within the past month. He was a member of the Order of the Holy Cross.

The men of this order serve the various fields of work without salary, only their living expenses being met. The three vows binding them together are those of poverty, chastity and obedience, their life work being the combination of missionary work, preaching and teaching, asking only the reward of the blessing of Almighty God.

PROHIBITION 6 YEARS OLD

Mr. Wheeler Offers Figures To Prove Contention That It Is A Success

The sixth anniversary of prohibition was hailed by Wayne B. Wheeler, General counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, as showing the consumption of alcohol lowered to a small fraction of its former total; the health of the nation improved, and the saloon "and the pauperism and slums," which clustered around it a thing of the past.

"The newly issued census figures," he said, "show a 55 per cent decrease in drunkenness committments in 1923 compared with 1910. Later figures show this decrease continued through 1925.

"America's sobriety is far ahead of European Nations cited by wets as evidence of the superiority of license. The ratio of drunkenness convictions in England and Wales was 200 per 100,000 population in 1923. The ratio of such convictions in the United States was 83.1 in the same year, 1923, according to the census bureau. London arrest three and a half times as many for intoxication per year as New York, and Paris twice as many, in spite of the severity of our police. 103,000 registered distilleries in France contribute to the intoxication of that nation. With bread lines, unemployment doles, debt dodging and hands outstretched for American loans, the wet nations of Europe may profit by American's example of new freedom from alcohol's rule."

HOME NEAR FRIENDSVILLE VISITED BY U. S. AGENTS

Who Arrested Occupant and Confiscated Mash, Stills and Five Gallons of Liquor.

Geza Urban, a foreigner, who has his home, well furnished, well appointed, tidy and nicely arranged, at a point a short distance from Friendsville, was arrested last Thursday by Prohibition Agent Harvey on charges of manufacturing and posessing intoxicating liquor. Urban was taken to Cumberland by the officer shortly after making the arrest and after entering a plea of guilty was released under $1,000 bond for the U. S. District Court.

Two 20-gallon stills were found in the woods back of Urban's house, in addition to three barreis of mash and five gallons of liquor. One of the stills was in operation when the place was raided by the officer.

Shortly after Urban had been arrested and taken away by the Federal agent, Deputy Sheriff Casteel arrived at the Urban place with warrants for his arrest which had been issued by the local authorities. Urban, of course, was not to be found, and neither was any evidence of the illicit business he carried on to be observed. Mrs. Urban met the officer and being unable to speak English she could not tell him what had occurred, hence the Garrett county officials were in ignorance of the actual state of affairs until informed by the Federal officer the following day.

MINE LOST 100 YEARS IS REVEALED BY COCKROACHES

Finder Recalls Legend That Insect Pests Infested Treasure Hole—Tarantulas Guard Another.

New York.—An old Mexican gold mine, all trace of which had been lost for more than 100 years, has been rediscovered in a curious manner, says "Brief Stories."

It was one of the many prolific sources of treasure worked by the Spanish adventurers in the days of Cortez and had been given the name of the Cockroach mine on account of the large numbers of these insects which infested its immediate neighborhood. It was afterwards sealed up and its site forgotten.

Recently, after the lapse of more than a century, a prospector in the district, noticing a rock swarming with cockroaches, remembered the story, followed the trail of the insects and found the mine, which is again being worked.

Strangely enough, there is in Mexico another ancient mine known to only a few Indians and to one or two white prospectors who have been lucky enough to return unscathed from the region. This mine is situated in the mountains near Durango, and still bears traces of the operations conducted by the long-dead race whose civilization was hardly less advanced than our own.

The Spaniards, in their turn, made attempts to raise the precious ore, specimens of which have proved the mine to be the richest of its kind in the world, but the chief obstacle in the way of further development is a vast horde of death-dealing scorpions which swarm in the workings.

So large and venomous are these specimens that many lives have been lost by the numerous exploring parties who have tried to reopen the mine and, although organized measures have been taken to deal with the pests, there has been no apparent diminution in their number. Thus a vast treasure will probably lie untouched for all time.

In South America, near the source of the Quibo river, deep in the fastnesses of the Andes mountains, there is another ancient mine, similarly guarded by the terrible tarantula spider, which has denied mankind approach to the mine for generations.

The tarantula is a fierce and horrible insect, whose bite means death to a human being, since there is no known antidote for its poison. According to native legends, the ancient Peruvians, and lately the Spaniards, when working this mine, employed special battalions to wage warfare against the spiders, with orders to keep the immediate surroundings of the workings clear of the pests, regardless of the number of lives lost in the undertaking.

Finest Aztec Youths Sacrificed to Gods

Philadelphia.—Modern ideas on compulsory religious education advocated as a measure to be enforced by all civilized peoples is a return to the so-called barbaric educational ideas of the Aztec Indians of Mexico, according to Dr. A. Irving Hallowell, member of the department of anthropology of the University of Pennsylvania.

"Education of the children began early and consisted primarily of a knowledge of ritual for the boys and of the art of making ceremonial robes for the gods by the girls," Doctor Hallowell declared. "It was under the fear of sacrifice-demanding gods that an Azteean child grew to manhood, if he was not sacrificed in infancy."

The sun god was the principal deity of the Aztecs. This sun god, or Toantuih, was an abstract deity who manifested himself through various lesser deities. His abode was upon the substratum of ether below that of the All-Father, who was a somewhat indistinct deity with the qualities of omniscience, invisibility, incorporeality and perfection. A young man of perfect physical proportions, who was a slave or a captive of war, was prepared for the sacrifice made once a year to the sun god.

Hidden Oil Fields Revealed by Heat

Washington.—New oil fields and other valuable mineral deposits, in regions where the telltale rock structures now lie buried far below the surface and random drilling is impractical, may be discovered at a relatively low cost by means of measurements of the heat in deep wells, according to W. T. Thom, Jr., geologist in charge of the division of fuels of the United States geological survey.

Series of temperature measurements taken at different depths in wells of the Salt Creek dome in Wyoming, says Mr. Thom, shows that these temperatures and the shape of the folds in the rocks associated with oil deposits.

His theory is that the rock strata were first folded up; then in the course of geological time the top of the fold was cut off by weathering, exposing the deeper lying and hotter rocks at the crest of the ridge, or dome.

Roof Lasts Long

Fatonville, Wash. — Thirty-seven years was the life of a shingle roof that T. C. Van Eaton, a pioneer after whom this city was named, renewed this summer. The structure houses a department store, whose proprietor declared that not a cent's worth of goods had been damaged by leakage. The shingles were split out of red cedar cut nearby.

POPULAR APPEAL SAVES LANDMARK

Ancient Gateway in Picturesque Perugia Is to Be Preserved.

Washington.—With so many ancient landmarks tumbling before the pick and steamshovel of modern progress the news that an ancient gateway in Perugia, one of Italy's famous "hill towns," has been saved from destruction through popular appeal is welcome to lovers of antiquity. Permission has been granted by the commune of the town to run electric trams through this gateway, near the Palazzo del Popolo, famous palace, but public indignation brought about a rescinding of the permit.

"The city has known one of the stormiest and bloodiest of histories," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society. "High on a hill commanding the River Tiber, Perugia has been safe from enemies from without, but it has been torn by internal quarrels. In the decline of Rome no barbarism mounted its walls, but the plots of its nobility and the quick tempers of its citizens resulted often in teapot tempests that went on until one side or the other was almost exterminated.

A City on a Hilltop.

"Perugia is almost midway between Rome and Florence, although not on the main line railroad connecting the two cities. Like Siena and Assisi, its neighbors, it is built in antiquated style, partly on top of a group of hilltops and partly on the slopes, with fine views of the Apennines in every direction. It has a picturesqueness of accident, of irregularity, of rising and falling ground, and of striking combinations of light, shade and color.

"Everywhere except on the short spinal ridge the streets are staircases and toboggan slides. Everywhere one climbs or burrows. The life of a Perugian, it may be truly said, is one of ups and downs.

"On the map, Perugia is spread out like a great stone-scaled dragon on its rock, crouching over the country and extending long paws down the valley side. Nature furnishes backgrounds of olive-colored hills and distant mountains, while nearly every vista on its staircase streets is broken and framed by the graceful stone arches that buttress the tall houses. The old towers and donjons have largely disappeared, but the atmosphere of the town is military and despotic. Many houses still show traces of the heavy chains that barred the streets after nightfall, when, if a man forgot his steel undershirt, he came home in a wooden one.

"Perugia is really four cities in one. There is the ancient Etruscan Perusia, with its walls and stone gateways; the Roman Perugia, whose masonry rests on what remained of the Etruscan city after the natives had set fire to it; the Medieval Perugia of the Baglioni, built on the Roman foundations; and the Renaissance Perugia of the popes, reared on the ashes of the Baglioni palaces.

"In the strict sense, however, there is no modern Perugia. The railroad station is, as in most European cities, far outside the ancient city walls. Two street car lines, a few automobiles and some up-to-date shops, clustered around the tourist center, are the only inroads the present has been able to make. There has been no temptation to build since the Sixteenth century. The patches added to its crumbling ramparts and houses in the last four hundred years have enhanced their natural attractiveness.

"The rich pastoral beauty and repose of Perugia's surroundings have left their mark on the art of the city. As the seat of the renowned Umbrian school of painting it earned a high place in the realms of Italian art during the Fifteenth century, when Perugia was the most powerful city in this part of Italy. The neighborhood of Siena and the religious atmosphere of nearby Assisi and Loreto doubtless exercised an influence on the prevailing style, which has been described as lacking dramatic power but being rich in reverie. Raphael was once a student of the Perugian master, Pietro Vannucci. Today the walls of many of Perugia's churches and former palaces are alive with examples of the work of the school.

Stone-Throwing Pastime.

"In the main square by the side of the big unfinished Gothic cathedral the life of the city once centered. Here the gentle Perugians played at one of the bloodiest and most dangerous games in the world—that of hurling stones at one another until often a dozen were killed and scores wounded. In times of peace this was the Perugian equivalent of a baseball game or the movies.

"According to some critics Perugia has, in the Porta Augusta, one of the finest gates in the world. It beetles in black magnificence above a whole quarter of the town, its base early Roman, the middle sections Romanesque, and the airy top Renaissance. The whole is now blackened with dust, decay and fire, and, while it is not imposing in the sunlight, its heavy stone and buckler, dated pilasters and massive base are awe-inspiring in the damp and gloom, when mist is flying through the streets. 'These Umbrian cities seem so Roman,' says one writer, 'that the sight of Caesar's legions marching through them, with lances and bucklers flashing in the sun, would be the most natural thing possible.'"

ONLY ONE ARMY OFFICER IN FOUR IS WEST POINTER

Number Commissioned From Civil Life Far Exceeds Total of Academy Graduates.

Washington.—Hardly more than one officer out of four in the regular army and Philippine scouts is a West Pointer, and the number commissioned direct from civil life exceeds the total of academy graduates.

These figures are disclosed in the annual report of Maj. Gen. Robert C. Davis, adjutant general of the army, made public. It fixes the total regular active commissioned force on June 30, this year, at 11,880 for the two branches, with enough retired and reserve men on active duty to bring the grand total up to 12,462. Of that number, 3,262 are West Point graduates, 3,969 came from civil life, 2,941 from the officers' reserve corps, and 1,604 from the enlisted ranks of the regulars, National Guard, volunteers or some other branch of the service.

The total enlisted strength was 135,-754, of which 96,695 were on duty in continental United States. To maintain the force, 45,553 recruits were necessary during the year, of whom more than 92 per cent were native-born Americans. General Davis figures that it costs $63.58 per man to gather recruits, including those for the Philippine scouts.

The report reiterates army objections to the one-year enlistments authorized by congress and shows that departmental policy has limited acceptance of men under this provision to those needed for specific purposes in a particular locality where no important transportation cost was involved.

During the year the strength of the officers' reserve corps jumped from 81,706 to 95,154. More than 4,000 new reserve officers were obtained from the training corps graduates and the civilian training camps added another 500.

A plea for preservation of 100-year-old army records that are dropping to pieces from much handling is made by the adjutant general in his report. They cover the regular army for the period of 1812-1912, including original muster rolls of the regiments.

"Their gradual disintegration will continue until they shall have literally fallen to pieces, unless the constant handling to which they have been subjected can be obviated through transcribing all information which they contain upon index-record cards," General Davis warned.

Chicago Judge Proves He's Friend of the Men

Recently Judge Harry Lewis of Chicago announced a divorce case policy of "no child, no alimony." Now Judge John J. Lupe of the domestic court of Chicago, pictured above, declares his approval of this policy. "There is no reason why men should support women all their lives, if the women have not earned the right to it by making good homes, by being pals and helpmates, and by having children," says he.

Police Restore Life to Infant With Lung Motor

Milwaukee. — Two patrolmen restored life to an infant which had stopped breathing here after it was born by working over it for an hour and thirty-five minutes with a lung motor. The baby, a boy, born to Mr. and Mrs. Christ Richter at their home, was normal and strong, but a moment after birth it stopped breathing. For thirty minutes nurses and doctors worked over the child. Then police were called. They applied the lung motor and restored life to the child.

Cat Reveals $3,000

Hobart, Okla.—Hobbs' dog chased Homer Brown's cat into the latter's antique store here. The cat made a leap for a dark corner, and plunged head first into a small-necked vase. Its head stuck. After chasing the dog away Mr. Brown was forced to break the vase to free the cat. Gold coins to the value of $3,000 dropped to the floor.

MEADOW MOUNTAIN

Not having seen any news items from this community for some time, I will write a few of the happenings for publication in the columns of The Republican.

Messrs. Irvin Custer, John Herman and son Benjamin and George Herman started for Florida the latter part of last week, going by motor. They expect to visit Miami and other places of interest before returning to Maryland.

Hauling mine timber seems to be the principal occupation of our people just at this time.

Messrs. Lloyd Brenneman and Howard O'Brien returned home last Thursday from Baltimore where they had gone to seek employment.

Mr. Lambert Parnard purchased a new Ford roadster recently.

Misses Grace Brenneman and Leona Bernard spent part of last week in Cumberland.

Mrs. William H. Oss has returned to her home in Lonaconing, having been called here to attend the funeral of her mother, the late Mrs. Douglas Rhodes.

We are sorry to state that Mr. J. L. McRobie, of North Glade, who was recently paralyzed, remains in a critical condition.

Due to the condition of the roads and bad weather we have not had any mail service here for some time.

BALKANS UNDER BANDIT SPELL

Daring of These Outlaws Is Celebrated in Song and Story.

Vienna.—Vienna was still thrilled by the spectacular trial of Moncia Carnicin, a young Macedonian girl, who, at the opera last May, killed Todor Penizza, a notorious Balkan bandit chief, when news issued from Greece that the Brabanis and Yagoulis, brigand bands that for years terrorized the inhabitants of Mount Olympus, had been wiped out. The heads of the leaders, on which a total of 10,000,000 drachmas had been set, were taken to Katerini, a provincial capital, and exhibited to the public.

Reports of Balkan outlawry appear so frequently in the newspapers that a casual reader might conclude that southeastern Europe was largely populated by brigands. He would not be far wrong, for in that part of the world banditry is an ancient institution with firm roots in the customs of the people, and if every one is not a bandit, all are at least potential bandits.

"Once upon a time there was a bandit." It is with this phrase that most of the bedtime stories in the Balkans begins. The bandit is also the hero of innumerable folk-songs. At the village feasts, when the wine starts flowing, tales of his strength and bravery are chanted to the monotonous tones of reed pipe and drum.

The boys of Sofia, Monastir, Saloniki and Athens do not enviously read of superdetectives like Nick Carter or superathletes like Dick Merriwell. The thin, paper backed volumes which they cleverly hide in their geographies and readers and ravenously devour while an unsuspecting teacher thinks they are following the lesson contain stories of superbandits. Athletes like Babe Ruth, Red Grange, Jack Dempsey and Paavo Nurmi would mean nothing to the Balkan youth who dreams of emulating the exploits of Condylis or Todor Alexanoroff. Condylis rose from a comitadji chief, fighting the Turks and Bulgars in Macedonia to minister of war in Greece, and Todor Alexandroff, although only a bandit leader, made and unmade prime ministers in Bulgaria.

Some Are Political Heelers.

In truth, banditry ranks high as a profession in the Balkans. Its practitioners win power, wealth, fame and sometimes death. They are ubiquitous and of two distinct types—political and non-political. The former are usually members of revolutionary committees and are called comitadjis, which means committeemen. They are especially active in border provinces and usually receive secret support from the various Balkan governments. There are different groups with different political ends, but all plunder unmercifully the native peasants, shepherds and merchants.

In many parts of Macedonia they carry on an underground government, levying taxes, dispensing justice and conscripting recruits. Those who refuse to submit to their dictates are punished by instant death. Therefore they inspire fear in the hearts of the populace. An experience I had on my way across the Balkans to Turkey vividly demonstrates this fact.

At Trieste in the spring of 1920 I boarded the Orient Express for Constantinople. The country we rode through still bore the signs of war. The bridges were blown up and temporary structures of wood had been built to take the place of the old steel or stone. Passengers were ordered to get out and walk across these, as there was doubt that the trestles would bear up the loaded train.

On the second day out of Trieste, when we had left Nish behind and were passing through the heart of Macedonia, the passengers were just rising from their berths when the train suddenly stopped. My companion, an Armenian merchant of Saloniki, looked out the window and gazed down along the track ahead. He immediately drew in his head, and, greatly excited, shouted, "Comitadjis!"

Hurriedly he took a wallet from his coat pocket and hid it under the mattress of his berth, and opening a suitcase he removed a packet of papers which he threw into the washpan of the washbasin.

A Knock on the Door.

Wondering what had so terrified my fellow-traveler, I looked out myself and saw massed before the locomotive a group of men in ragged uniforms and armed with rifles—unshaven and fierce looking fellows. I recalled reading only a few weeks before that the Orient Express had been held up in Macedonia by a band of Bulgarian comitadjis, the passengers robbed and a number of Serbs taken off and held for ransom; and I was silently thankful that, except for a few French francs to pay for meals in the dining car, all my funds were in a letter of credit negotiable only by myself; that my watch was of the dollar sort, and that I was not a promising candidate for ransom.

The train began to move, the comitadjis scrambled aboard. Train-robbing tactics in Macedonia, I decided, differ from those in vogue in America. Dim memories of Jesse James and the more recent impression of the movies told me that the standard American method was to line up the passengers along the track and go through their pockets. Also a special detachment of bandits, I recalled, usually went aboard the halted train and rifled the baggage.

The train rapidly gained full speed, and my companion and I sat down on the lower bunk of the compartment and waited for the comitadjis to come and search us. In a hoarse whisper he said: "They are terrible men! They may kill us!" There came a knock on the door. The merchant was speechless with fright. "Yes! What is it?" "Petit dejeuner est servi," came back the reply. The dining car porter was announcing breakfast.

Smoke-Room Gossip Not Fanciful.

Out in the corridor was a dapper Serbian lieutenant with monocle and riding stock. He greeted me with a pleasant "Bon jour," and said he was commanding the detachment of Serbian soldiers which had just boarded the train and would accompany it to the Bulgarian frontier. The government at Belgrade had taken this precaution against comitadji attacks ever since the express had been held up two weeks before.

On hearing this the Armenian merchant, smiling sheepishly, took his wallet from under the mattress and put it back in his pocket, and removed the packet of papers, slightly damp but otherwise uninjured, from the waste pan. His mistake was natural, as the roles of comitadji and soldier in this corner of Europe are often interchangeable.

During the remainder of the journey to Constantinople the passengers talked of nothing but bandits; bandits who had become generals, provincial governors, and even prime ministers, and a Serb boasted that his king was the descendant of a famous brigand of the early Nineteenth century whose name was Kara (Black) George, from whom the ruling family of Yugoslavia takes its name of Karageorgavic. Kara George fought the Turks with much the same tactics as the Bulgarian comitadjis use against the Serbs in Macedonia today. Every passenger seemed to have had, at least one experience with bandits.

All had been shot at, some had been wounded, abducted, ransomed. Not to be outdone, I told them of the exploits of the gunmen of my native New York and let them believe that I was personally acquainted with the most notorious. All this talk, instead of making the bandits seem more real, made me feel as if they were of the same nature as ghosts. On arriving at Stamboul, however, news that two Near East relief workers whom I was to visit in Cilicia had been murdered a few days before by Turkish chettahs (brigands in peace and irregulars in war) made the bandits again realistic.

Kingdoms for Strong Arms.

It is only a few months ago that the Greek island of Samos, off the west coast of Asia Minor, fell into the hands of two notorious brigands, the Gagades brothers, and their followers. This exploit brought to mind the days when any daring adventurer could have had a kingdom in the Aegean for the courage and skill to seize it.

In the Fifteenth century, before the Turks won control of the whole eastern Mediterranean, all the islands in this corner of the world, as well as the greater part of what is now Greece, were ruled by so-called barons, counts, dukes and princes, who usually were nothing but glorified brigands, often fugitives from justice in their native lands in western Europe.

Still earlier many a farm lad who had come to the Levant as a Crusader remained to rule over an opal isle or a rocky peninsula. And even under the Turk a few intrepid souls succeeded in maintaining their supremacy in remote places where the sultan ruled nominally, but where his officials never penetrated to return alive.

This tradition of banditry, built up through centuries, still lives in the Aegean, although the modern bandit is seldom able to carry out an exploit in the grand manner. The Gagades brothers succeeded in holding Samos for only a few days. Two Greek battleships were sent from Piraeus to oust them. Faced with ten-inch guns, the brigands were forced to take to the mountains with all the occupants of the local jail, whom they had liberated on their first day in power.—New York Times.

Museum Gets General Miles' Indian Relics

New York.—The Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation, has just received a gift of the remarkable collection of Indian war relics gathered by the late Gen. Nelson A. Miles, famous Indian fighter and commander of the United States army during the Spanish-American war. It contains several objects of great historical value, including the guns of the warriors Sitting Bull, Geronimo, Rain-in-the-Face and Chief Joseph.

The collection was presented to the institution by the daughter and son of the general, Mrs. Samuel K. Reber and Maj. Sherman Miles, U. S. A. From the museum's standpoint the gathering forms a priceless record of Indian life during one of the most sensational epochs in American Indian affairs.

General Miles fought the Indians from the '60s to the early '80s and found an opportunity to gather many Indian objects from the Sioux, Apache, Nez Perce, Cheyenne and other tribes.

Boiler Blast Kills

TEMPLE BUILT IN MOSES' DAY FOUND

Explorers Believed Edifice May Have Been Erected in 2000 B. C.

Philadelphia.—Further discoveries within the temple of Ashtaroth at Belsan, the Bethshan of the Bible, are reported in a cable dispatch received by the university museum from Alan Rowe, field director of the museum's Palestine expedition. A statement issued by the museum says that, according to Mr. Rowe's dispatch, the expedition has discovered beneath the foundations of the lately found temple of Ashtaroth the ruins of an older temple of the same divinity.

"Within this older temple Mr. Rowe reports the finding of a golden image of the goddess," the announcement says. "The brief cable dispatch gives no further details, but it is evident that this discovery of an earlier temple of Ashtaroth underneath the later one is of great historic importance.

Find House of Ashtaroth.

"It will be recalled that during September the expedition announced the discovery on the citadel of Bethshan of a temple of Ashtaroth, the first shrine of this goddess of the Philistines ever brought to light. This proved to be the very 'house of Ashtaroth' mentioned in 1 Samuel, 31, where the Philistines placed Saul's armor as a king in battle on Mount Gilboa. Inscriptions and documents found within the temple and imbedded in its foundations prove that the edifice was still standing at the time of David, about 1000 B. C.

Built in Time of Moses.

"The new discoveries which reveal the existence of an older temple underneath are conclusive proof of two things:

"First, that Bethshan must have been destroyed at some date prior to 1000 B. C., when this older temple was laid in ruins, and that it was later rebuilt.

"Second, that this older temple was more significant than the later one, indicating a more powerful civilization. The fact that the image of the goddess was made of gold is, in itself, significant.

"As to the actual date of the building of the older temple, there is nothing in the present dispatch that would serve as data for its determination. There are, however, some indications that it must be as early as 1500 B. C., the time of Moses. It is indeed not unlikely that the progress of the excavations may show that the Temple of Ashtaroth at Bethshan was a center of worship for the Canaanites and the Philistines at the time when Abraham was a sojourner in the land of Canaan about 2000 B. C."

Uncover Skeleton in Sahara Goddess' Tomb

New York.—The Franco-American expedition in the Sahara headed by Count Byron Kuhn de Prorok has disinterred the skeleton of a personage buried in the tomb of Tin Hinan, the legendary goddess and ancestress of the Tuaregs, says a dispatch to the New York Times from Abalessa Hoggar in the Sahara desert.

The bones of a well-built person about six feet in height whose fine features resemble those of present-day Tuareg nobles were found resting on an elaborate couch sunk in solid rock, the dispatch stated.

It is thought possible that the expedition has found the body of the ancient heroine who is the root and whole structure of Tuareg mythology. Garments of a dignitary were found in an anteroom of the burial chamber. Beads, carbuncles, garnets and objects of gold and silver were dug up in the mound covering the skeleton.

South Americans Best Dancers, Jury Decides

London.—South Americans are the best ballroom dancers in London, in the opinion of an impartial jury made up of Italian, French, Spanish and English dancing masters.

The South Americans are seen in the west-end ballrooms nearly every night, and are eagerly sought in society as well as for private affairs when hostesses vie with one another to have plenty of good dancers on their lists.

The South Americans have the rhythm of the North Americans and the style and deportment of the English dancers, the judges decided. The English are too stiff, the jury agreed, and dancers from the United States, while doing splendidly, are inclined to put a little too much vigor into their movements.

Striped Umbrellas for Men Urged in London

London.—Variegated colors to replace the universal black for men's umbrellas are being urged here. The idea is to make London brighter during the dreary, rainy months of winter. It is cited that golfers wear cheerful costumes and many persons contend that men as well as women should do away with black where possible. Gayly hued umbrellas for men would raise the British spirit, defenders of the movement maintain, as London's streets are dull and somber enough in December and January, when the sun is seldom seen.

What Jewett Means by a "New-Day" Car

It means a car with instant acceleration—a flashing "pick-up" that shoots you through traffic quick as thought.

But it means, also, equally quick "stopping"—the instant, unfailing, cushioned stop possible only with Paige-Hydraulic 4-wheel brakes.

It means, too, wider, freer, clearer vision than any former car has ever had—almost complete elimination of the deadly "blind spot."

It means an ease of steering and control that makes your car seem responsive more to your wish than to your touch.

It means an uncanny ability to slip into parking places unbelievably small.

It means a generous interior roominess—roomy comfort rivaling that of the biggest sedans. And it means, too, a quality Sedan, Paige-Built.

THERE have been speedy cars before this—economical cars—comfortable cars—easily steered cars—quickly accelerated cars—but until The New-Day Jewett there never was one car embodying every last one of these essential qualities! Three minutes after you take the wheel of this New-Day Jewett-Six—you'll know that Jewett, and only Jewett, has built such a truly new-day car!

LOOKS LIKE A LOSING FIGHT TO US

William Montgomery Brown, deposed bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church, is moving the New York courts to order his reinstatement. For this action the former bishop has an interesting explanation. He is not fighting the church he says; he is fighting for it. His purpose is "to force the doors of the church open to whatever we find to be true."

The former bishop probably has a long fight on his hands. Forcing open the doors of an organization from the outside always has been an undertaking of some difficulty, and never more so than to one who has been thrown out after failing to force them open from the inside.

Somehow it is very hard to convince an organization you are not fighting it when you are attacking the things it stands for and even going to law to compel it to change its views to conform to your own. Human organizations are not broad enough to understand that when you do that you are fighting their battles for them. They are likely to form the hasty conclusion that you are against them.

It seems to be so with the Protestant Episcopal church. Confronted with the alternative of changing its own views so Bishop Brown could stay in, or retaining its own views so it could throw him out, it chose the latter.

That this fight which the church and Bishop Brown are making for each other will terminate satisfactorily to both we cannot believe. What is found to be true by one will not be found to be true by the other; the church's doors and the doors of Bishop Brown's mind are both strongly defended and both from the inside. Nor are courts of law likely to be helpful to either side in the contest. They probably are not competent to say what is true for both, and probably not even for one. But we shall watch Bishop Brown's fight for the church and the church's fight for Bishop Brown with interest, because we have never yet seen a fight like that won and must wonder, naturally, if times and human nature have changed any since such a fight was last put up.

WAR DEBT DIVISION

Senator "Jim" Reed, of Missouri, who has never seemed to have a kindly feeling toward any foreign country except Germany, is up in arms against the agreement for Italy's war debt settlement. Having discovered that Italy is paying 9 per cent on a new loan from J. P. Morgan, Senator Reed announces in clarion tones that if Italy can do that, "then Italy is not bankrupt; Italy can pay, and so far as I am concerned, Italy must pay"—the whole of the two billions she borrowed from the United States, instead of a little more than one-fourth of it, as has been agreed. Perhaps the Missouri Senator thinks that deceitful Italy still has the greater part of the two billions and is drawing 9 per cent on it, and that the dealing out of soldiers' rations, the explosion of shells, the creation of devasted areas, etc., after all, was not a very expensive business, and the plea of hard conditions is only part of a shifty creditor's shady game.

The Senator ought to look in on that remarkable "movie," "The Big Parade," see what modern war is like and find out something about its manifestly enormous costs. If he did, he might conclude that Italy and France have not the ghost of a lira or of a franc left of what they borrowed and that they—especially France—spent many millions besides. He might also get a glimmering of the truth that the more money they spent and the more lives they lost, the less of both we had to sacrifice when we finally sent our soldiers to help put an end to the monstrous world tragedy.

Mr. Reed's fustian may please the unreflecting gallery, but the hard-headed business man, as well as the man of patriotic and generous impulse, is likely to be more impressed by what Secretary Mellon said recently to the Ways and Means Committee of the House, in part as follows:

"Europe Is our largest customer. Unless the finances of Europe can be restored * * this country will not be able to dispose of its surplus products of food, materials and goods. We have learned the folly of imposing indefinite and impossible terms. The entire foreign debt is not worth as much to the American people in dollars and cents as a prosperous Europe as a customer."

If this view, based on enlightened self-interest, was regarded as applicable in the case of Italy, Belgium, Latvia, Esthonia and Roumania, why should it not be regarded as applicable in the case of France, the chief suffer from the outset, the hardest hit in the end, and—to continue the purely commercial argument—also a large customer of the United States?

SECRETARY MELLON

Fortunate is the country which can command, in the adjustment of its finances during a crucial period, the services of such a man as Andrew W. Mellon. The magnitude of his service to the nation will perhaps never be fully appreciated, for he has done his work with no brass band accompaniment.

It means something financially to a man of Mr. Mellon's large interests and unquestioned financial genius to turn his back upon private business affairs and give his time solely to the national service. The earning power thus sacrificed over a period of several years runs into big figures.

Secretary Mellon has his reward, it is true, in the esteem of millions of level-headed patriotic Americans who realize the stupendous size of the task Secretary Mellon confronted when he took charge of the nation's disorganized finances at the beginning of the Harding administration, and that the benefits of the stability and prosperity which has ensued has extended to every citizen of the republic.

But such service, too, for a man of Secretary Mellon's size, carries with it its penalties. He has become the target of the demagogue, whose political stock in trade is outcry against "the rich." These political scavengers have sought to find some crevice in the Mellon armor through which they could throw their javelins of defamation.

The fact that Mr. Mellon as Secretary of the Treasury has run his office in the interests of the whole people rather than for political ends, has drawn attacks not only upon Secretary Mellon but upon all the business enterprises with which he was actively connected before he assumed his office.

That a man of the Mellon quality is willing to accept high office in the face of certain assault by the muckrakers, the scandal mongers, the politicians of small calibre who think of no public problem except in terms of votes, is a testimonial to his partiotism and his pure Americanism.

When the story of the war period and the events following has been written by the impartial historian, the name of Andrew W. Mellon will no doubt stand forth as that of one of the greatest financiers this or any other country has ever produced. When his traducers have been forgotten his name will be remembered and honored hy a grateful people.

THE GREAT HOME INFLUENCE

Two years ago there were few ready-made radio sets on the market. Today there are about 140, ranging from crystal receivers selling as low as $4.00 or $5.00, to the elaborate super-heterodynes, costing hundreds of dollars.

Mr. F. M. Steers, president of the Magnavox Co., says, "Radio as a necessity for the home is recognized. A home without a receiving set will soon be rare indeed. The missing of broadcasts by day or night will he considered as serious an injury to the American people as failure to read newspapers, magazines and books. Manufacturers are spending large sums of money for research and experiments to perfect the receiving set and gain simplicity of operation. The great advancement of the single dial over the endless number of dials and other operating devices of the earlier sets, is an example of what has been done in radio engineering. It is now possible by a simple turn of one dial to get a station. This advancement is a wonderful advantage to people not blessed with eyesight, as well as to those in out-of-the-way places where service and instruction are not available, as it enables them to operate their sets to the best advantage.

"Our children, long before they read or write, will understand the spoken message from radio receivers and gain a foundation for an education that their parents had no opportunity of securing. This will mean a hetter education for the coming generation and will be due directly to the radio and its simplicity of operation.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 24, 1926.

JESUS AND THE SAMARITAN WOMAN.

John 4:1-12

With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation.—Isaiah 12:3.

THE PURPOSE

Why does John put this story in his Gospel? Was it because is showed the method by which He made His approach to folks? Was it in the witchery of the story itself? John was preaching in Ephesus and using material for the preacher's purpose of winning men to acceptance of his Jesus as Lord of their lives and John's primary purpose is always evangelistic. If an outcast woman of Samaria could find a new life thru Jesus then there was hope for any one in Ephesus. If He took advantage of such wayside opportunity then the Christians of the city should not hesitate about offering salvation to the throngs that pressed on every side, many of whom were as needy as she.

But John was doing more than preaching, he was writing a book and in this section was gathering up the manifestation to all classes of folk that his Lord made of Himself as the basis of the chapters showing the growing belief and disbelief among the people. And he must have chuckled a little to himself as he placed the immaculate rabbi of Jerusalem side by side with the dishevelled woman of Samaria. It was respectability beside disrepute, orthodoxy beside heterodoxy, the pink of propriety against the scarlet of a pariah; there was, certainly a boyish grin on his face as he penned the lines. But the eyes were wet with unshed tears as he saw his loved Lord loving them both alike and offering to both abundant life. Mountain and valley appear much the same to the man in the moon and to the Man of heaven differences that bulk large in the thinking of the world lose much of their significance.

What took Jesus to Samaria? He had learned to listen to the name of Jerusalem even before his baby lips could frame its sounds. He had caught its stories in the days of childhood, He had seen it as the fulfillment of a boyish dream when within its temple He had found His Father's house. Its history was a part of His very life and He loved it with a passion that transcended His feeling for any other town. Naturally as a flower to the sunlight He turned to Jerusalem with His first message of love and redemption. Seething with political unrest it was beginning the course that ended its beauty and power and with all His passionate love He strove to turn it from its suicidal mania that left it an utter waste of ruins. But He came unto His own and they received Him not. Then He tarried in the region for months hoping for a recall but none came. Then John was apprehended and He turned away, temporarily it is true, but went with crushed heart. Like a wounded deer He fled from the face of those who knew Him and buried Himself in Samaria. Yet here He found an open well from which He drank water of refreshing and found meat for His own strengthening so that Galilee received Him "in the power of the (refreshed) Spirit."

THE PROCESS

What we are watching here is the way in which Jesus brought a soul into new life. He made the advance. That is the obligation of power in whatever field it is. He who knows is expected to bring truth to the ignorant. The strong must bear the burdens of the weak. There is vastly more than an even balance in industrial disputes and the operators owe it to their own capacity to find a way of peace earlier than the workers find it. Purity must stoop to impurity, holiness must bend beneath the sin, and the cross is the only way by which love can redeem its world. They two were alone. Our Lord's great words were given to individuals usually and we will find that the face to face contact is our own best means of expressing His truth. The disciples needed numbers for protection among hostile folk and Jesus was dejected and weary. The woman came, possibly, at this hour to escape the jibs of other women who have small care for the feelings of a deserter of social standards. He began by asking a favor instead of conferring a gift, her self-respect must be wakened before any advance could be made. She must be lifted to an equality where she would feel a matching of needs. While her tones are flippant it is pretty certain that she gave the drink. There followed the wakening of her desire that found His faith in her being big enough to serve a Jew, a trellis upon which it swiftly climbed to beautiful flowering in acceptance of Himself as the Messiah who would tell her all things and set right her world.

THE PRAISE

Jesus always expected the best of folks and they rarely disappointed Him. His very attitude was a subtle compliment that could not be evaded. And His praise was always true but revealed the remarkable capacity for discerning the secrets of others desires. Peter and Nathanael had both succumbed to its witchery in wonderful fashion. What could there possibly be in this woman of the street that He could commend. Searching back into her tawdry life He unearthed the secret shame of it. "I have no husband" said the woman. "Fine," responded Jesus, "That's the truth," and swept her completely into His net. Fully transformed she fled without her water pot as the disciples returned, probably feeling their antagonism that was in contrast to that gentle courtesy she had been experiencing. But she was now an ambassador for the Messiah and was eager to face folks at home with her sense of commission that effaced her slinking thru the back streets of yesterday, or the shrinking approach to the fountain at the noon hour.

THE PROMISE

Jesus was so strangely stimulated that the disciples thought He must have had a full meal. But it was the thrill of spirit that had refreshed Him and prepared Him for the going among men again with an attempt to approach Jerusalem from the side of province popularity. His vision was lifted again to the fields in which there were race differences but there was the showing of a possible harvest that would surprise those who were willing to attempt the task. "You shall be reapers," was the promise to these followers. The high joy of the harvest festival was to be theirs. The promise does hint at the drudgery of sowing but it is submerged in the joy of seeing the return in great sheaves of gathered grain. And it is true that for every worker with life, the return far outbalances the labor, joy outweighs the tears, and the promise has been kept across all centuries since.

CHERRY MEADOWS

Our new road from Mr. Jonas Knox's farm over to the Barr property on the State road, is well on the way, so get out these cars.

In going just about a quarter of a mile a few days since a young lady lost her way in our woods and was obliged to return to her starting point and try it again.

Messrs. Paul and Playford Glotfelty are now working at Cassville, W. Va.

Our school is doing nicely with Mr. Harmon to "teach the young ideas how to shoot."

A sled load of our young people attended the spelling bee last Wednesday evening at McHenry. On leaving the school house the sled capsized and the load of people were rolled in a nice bed of snow. No one was injured.

We believe that Miss Smith will soon have a supply of newly painted valentines.

His "Strawfoot" Dodge.

With fingers weary and worn
With eyes that are tinted blue,
Virgil sits in his patched up truck
Studying what to do.
Work, work work!
Besmeared with oil and dirt;
And work, work, work;
And no one to help him through,
So with a voice that bemoans his luck
He sings his song of a truck.
Work, work work!
While the cock is crowing aloof,
And work, work, work!
'Till the stars shine thro' the roof;
It's oh! that I had a new tire
For this tireless truck of mine;
A filling of straw proves dire—
Strawfoot staggers as if it were "shine."
Work, work work!
Say, isn't this truck a "bum?"
Work, work work!
But no one calls him dumb.
With four new tires and rim,
His strawfoot Dodge will go
If Virgil's at the wheel,
His truck you'll surely know.
Work, work work!
As he rumbles on the bridges;
And work, work, work!
He [illegible] o'er sunny ridges.
[illegible]
And [illegible] from Cupid's quiver—
Beware, O Virgil, of a skid;
Less you lose your heart and liver.

So with fingers weary and worn,
With eyes that are tinted blue,
Virgil sits on his strawfoot truck
Studying what to do.
Honk, honk, honk!
We hear his truck horn blow,
Honk, honk, honk!
Now he's made old strawfoot go!

Buy across the Counter

WHEN you buy across the counter in the stores of this town, you are using good business judgment. Why? There are many reasons, but one of the most important is this:

You can buy what you want at the price you wish to pay! You are not obliged to accept "something just as good," because you are in a position to compare values and make your own selections.

When you trade at home you are helping your friends to help you! And there is no finer thing in life than neighborly co-operation. It always pays—in happiness and satisfaction as well as dollars and cents.

The Hotel Stenographer

By Roe Fulkerson

"KELLY," asked the Hotel Stenographer, "why don't you run for alderman in our ward?"

"Aw, I dunno," said the House Detective. "If they want me, let 'em ask me."

"Kelly," suggested the girl, "that's a fat job. The fatter the job the less likely it will be to run after you. Fat jobs, like fat people, get winded easily and they never chase any one very far.

"I do not know what this town is coming to, Kelly. Last year four aldermen on the city council were not Irish. The next thing we know they will elect Chinamen or something.

"It is high time that stalwart Americans were aroused to their sense of duty to the republic and took office again. So long as we Irish can control the contracting business and be aldermen we need not worry about who writes the nation's songs.

"But sitting still and waiting for a fat job to drop in your lap like Dead Sea fruit, as the poet put it, is the bunk. At the Battle of Waterloo, Napoleon said to his guards, 'Up guards, and at 'em', and they upped and atted 'em. That's the way to get things, Kelly, and it's getting things that counts, not just wanting them.

"I have known girls who went dippy in the bean over some John and sat around and waited for him to ask them while some other girl pouped and jorged, by hustling for him and not waiting.

"But I guess there are people just born to be cops and get fallen arches, while others whose destiny is to be horn of honest Irish parents and grow up to be alderman and wear a two quart hat on St. Patrick's day. Maybe you are right in not going after it for you certainly would look funny in a high hat."

Mother's Cook Book

From four things, God preserve us; a painted woman, a conceited valet, salt beef without mustard, and a late dinner.—Italian.

MUTTON AND SAUCES

MUTTON is one of our most wholesome meats and would be far more popular with every one if the skin were carefully removed before cooking. The wooly flavor which is so objectionable is found in the skin.

One of the important things to remember when serving lamb or mutton is that it should be served platter hot, as the fat hardens so quickly that it leaves an unpleasant taste on the tongue. All serving dishes and platters should be kept piping hot.

Casserole of Rice and Mutton.

Line a mold, slightly greased, with steamed rice. Fill the center with two cupfuls of finely-chopped cooked mutton, highly seasoned with salt, pepper, cayenne, celery salt, onion juice and lemon juice; then add one-fourth of a cupful of cracker crumbs, one egg slightly beaten, and enough hot broth or water to moisten. Cover the meat with the rice; cover the rice with a buttered paper to keep out the moisture while steaming. Steam 45 minutes. Serve unmolded on a platter surrounded with tomato sauce.

Soyer Lamb Chops.

Broil lamb chops until well cooked. When cool cover with a thick white sauce to which a spoonful of chopped ham has been added, with the proper seasoning; cool, dip into egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat just before serving time. Keep hot in the oven. French chops are best served this way.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

THE TRUE VICTORS

AFTER all that is said and sung about those oft heralded persons whose names appear with frequency on the most conspicuous pages of our newspapers and magazines, it is questionable, whether in the stern battles of life they are true victors.

While they wear their laurels with becoming modesty, you will find, if you question them in their more serious moods that they are not at all satisfied with the distinction which is so generously accorded them.

The glare of the lime-light hurts their sensitive eyes and destroys their peace. It robs them of the sweet quietude of home which to them is dearer than praise.

At a change of the wind or the burst of a storm, their names sometimes wither like leaves in the frosty air of autumn.

Some were cast for leading parts, but the great majority forget their lines, faltered and failed at the crucial moment, though clad in fine linen and royal purple.

It is not the man who succeeds in attaining wealth, or the woman who excels in dressing her hair and encircling her shapely neck with priceless diamonds and pearls who shall sit in the cool of the day among the true victors, but the lowly who have striven to make others happy and through trial and tribulation kept the faith.

The gentlefolk, the charitable and kindly are the true victors.

Their names are not blazed before an applauding and forgetful world. But instead, the good they have done, the heavy burdens they have lightened for fellow travelers have blazoned their remembrance in imperishable letters in myriad homes and hearts and made life for the unfortunate a perennial spring.

Possibly you may be on speaking terms with such persons, but if you are not seeking them out, cultivate their companionship and imitate in so far as you are able their adorable attributes.

You will know them by the light in their eyes, the smile on their faces, their gentle demeanor and their softly modulated voices that never irritate or hurt.

The best snow for sledding and for sleighing thus far this season, lay in this section last week, but now it is melting away under a fall of rain, which began early on Sunday.

The first reports of the mine explosion which occurred at Farmington, West Va., some days ago, told of the escape of all the men from this section who were employed in that mine except Allen Stanton, but later a telegram brought tidings that Mr. Stanton had also been saved, much to the relief of his relatives who reside here.

Mrs. Katie Ann Miller, of Daisytown, Pa., who was reported to be in a critical condition some days ago, has so far recovered as to be removed to the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Yommer, near Jennings.

Rev. E. E. Camphell, of this village, was called to the bedside of Mr. J. L. McRobie in the North Glade settlement one day last week. Mr. McRobie has been ill for some time but at last reports was said to be somewhat improved.

Dr. N. R. Davis, of Grantsville, was called to this village last Friday to attend Mrs. Walter Fazenbaker, who is quite ill.

Don't Neglect That Stubborn Hacking Cough

It is not only dangerous but entirely unnecessary to let a persistent, hacking cough rob you of sleep and strength. For through a very simple treatment you can get almost instant relief, and very often break the most stubborn cough completely in 24 hours.

This treatment is based on the famous prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take one teaspoonful at bed-time and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of night coughing. So the coughing quickly ceases and you sleep right through undisturbed.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, sore throat, hoarseness, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children as well as grown-ups—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

An overhauling during the winter months—new piston rings—valves ground—ignition tuned—carbon removed—all oil cases cleaned and refilled—fender dents ironed out—then ,when spring breakes, the old engine will be humming as of yore and you'll be all ready for another summer of pleasure.

Midwinter Care of Your Baby.

Speaking of the care that is necessary to keep the well bahy well, in midwinter—the season of coughs and colds and pneumonia—Dr. J. H. Mason Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, said: "Many young mothers breathe a sigh of relief when the hot summer season passes, because of the popular opinion that with it has passed the time of greatest danger; and that when the cool weather sets in, their fears for their children can be put aside. The truth of the matter is that within recent years so much improvement has taken place in the care and feeding of the baby in hot weather that this season has lost much of its terror.

"In the cold weather disturbances of the respiratory tract such as the 'common cold', tonsilitis, influenza, bronchitis, pneumonia and other infections are much more prevalent than in the summer. In fact, in many communities they may destory more lives in the winter than the intestinal diseases do in the summer.

"Moreover, the respiratory infections are more difficult to combat. Much, however, can he done, by increasing the child's resistance to disease and by avoiding infection.

"Resistance to disease can be increased in the following ways:

"First by proper food. In the winter when green vegetables are hard to secure and the milk is from cows fed on grain, it is important to supplement the usual diet with a small quantity of cod liver oil, one to three teaspoonfuls about one half hour after two meals.

"Second, by plenty of sunshine. Make the most of all the sunshine there is by having the children out in good weather when the sun is high.

"Third, by plenty of fresh air, day and night. Windows should be open at night, but keep the child protected from drafts. If the child develops a cough close the window and provide ventilation from the next room. Do not have the day-time temperature of the child's room over 70 degrees.

"Fourth, by dressing the child according to the weather. Have additional clothing on when the child goes out. The amount of clothing should be determined by the temperature not by the season. The baby's feet should be kept warm at all times.

"Fifth, care in bathing. A cool sponge and rub afterwards with a coarse towel are stimulating and helpful.

"We cannot over emphasize the importance of protecting the children from infections. Most infectious diseases common in infancy and childhood are spread through the secretions of the nose and mouth. Therefore, a baby should be protected from this danger by keeping him away from those who have colds, coughs and fevers. A little vaseline in the nostrils at night is helpful in the winter. It is especially important that those suffering from colds or the various infectious diseases should be careful that they do not cough, or sneeze, or speak so that the droplets of saliva will reach well children.

"People who are convalescent from an infectious disease may carry the infection in the discharges from the nose and throat for several days after they feel well and so spread it to others with whom they come in contact.

"The winter is the time when children are brought in closer contact at home and in the schools, consequently the occurrence of respiratory infections is highest in cold weather.

"Summing up these suggestions—to keep the baby or young child well through the winter—feed him properly so as to avoid rickets, and build up his resistance to disease; dress him according to the temperature; keep the house well ventilated and take the baby out in the fresh air and sunlight as the weather permits; give him a cool sponge and a vigorous rub down every morning; keep him away from everyone who has a cold or other respiratory infection."

PEERLESS

Miss Mary Yencensky, a student in the Kitzmiller high school, is slowly improving after having been ill for a week.

"Billy" Harvey is able to be out again after an illness of some time.

A brief consultation was held with the trustees of the Peerless school at the school house last Friday for the purpose of considering some important matters concerning the future welfare of the school.

Bad road conditions make traveling very difficult in this part of the district.

Several residents of this section have been attending the services held at the Pentecostal church in Kitzmiller the past week.

"What's in a Name?"

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

HULDAH

THOUGH some etymologists claim that Huldah, the prophetess of the Old Testament, should not be identified with the Swedish Huldr, the evidence seems almost conclusive in favor of the assertion that they are one and the same name in different forms.

The old mythical Holda, or Huldr (the faithful or the muffled) was a white spinning lady, who makes her feather bed when it snows. According to the legend, she brings presents at the year's end; rewards good spinners, and punishes idle ones. She is supposed to have a long nose, wear a blue gown and white veil and drive through the fields in a car with golden wheels.

In the Scandinavian countries, where she is very popular, they call her Huldr, the propitious. Germany prefers Holda. Often she is confused with Hilda. Though the latter name has great vogue in England and also in this country, Huldah is equally prevalent. Its Scandinavian ancestry is almost lost sight of here, though it is noticeably more prevalent in Swedish communities, and for some reason has quite a bit of popularity in the South.

Amber is Huldah's talismanic gem. It will protect her from disease and give her great physical strength. Friday is her lucky day and six her lucky number.

The clubs that will be represented at this meeting and institution of the local club will include those located at Meyersdale, Pa.; Piedmont, W. Va.; Keyser, W. Va.; Grafton, W. Va.; Terra Alta, W. Va.; Kingwood, W. Va., and Morgantown, W. Va.

The Oakland Rotary club was formed principally through the efforts of George Stern, of Frostburg, past president of the Frostburg club. The local club had its inception at a meeting held at the William-James Hotel on August 28, 1925, which was attended by business and professional men of Oakland and the following members of the Frosthurg club: G. M. Gillette, W. E. G. Hitchens, Thomas Elias, Rudolph Nickel and George Stern. Rev. L. O. Leavel, of Ripley, Tenn. ,was also present at this meeting.

The club, which had its beginning at that time, was elected to Rotary International in December. Dr. H. W. McComas is president of the Rotary Club, and James A. Towler is the secretary. The other members are L. M. Fraley, Wade H. Hinebaugh, Floyd C. Stahl, B. H. Sincell, A. R. Martin, P. B. Naylor, Dr. B. F. Selby, Charles W. Ream, A. T. Matthews, H. L. Miller, Joseph E. Harned, Henry Lauer, Edward P. Kahl, H. A. Loraditch, C. A. Deffinbaugh, F. E. Rathbun, Arthur Lawton, Guy Yutzy, Rev. Archibald Moore and Roland R. Gilbert.

The affiliation meeting tonight gives promise of being a gala affair, consisting of the usual welcome address and club singing, as well as the responses from the visiting Rotarians which are usually and in this case will be well delivered and exceptionally well received by the local members.

The local club goes into the family of Rotary International with the club at Frostburg receiving credit for the addition. Since its organization the Frostburg club is credited with the establishment of new clubs at Piedmont, W. Va., and Oakland, and with the consequent extension of Rotary in these communities.

George Stern, first president of the Frostburg club, has represented Governor M. Ward Fleming in making all arrangements for the affiliation meeting, and G. Marshall Gillette, who is president of the Frostburg club, is assuming responsibility in having the Frostburg club largely represented at the meeting in Oakland tonight.

The management of the William-James has made preparations to entertain not less than a hundred guests at the banquet. The menu is quite elaborate and the service will be excellent.

Valentine Tea at Grantsville To Be Held by Community Club

The Community Club of Grantsville will have a valentine tea party on Wednesday, February 3rd. In the afternoon a demonstration on frozen deserts will be given with a discussion of balanced menus. In the evening, there will be a demonstration on table service and party arrangements. Later refreshments will be served that have been planned to carry out a definite color scheme.

On Thursday afternoon, February 4th, at 2:00 o'clock, the Accident Community Club will hold a meeting in the home economics laboratory in the high school. After the election of officers for the year, a demonstration of short cuts in sewing will be given. This will include the making of bound button holes, set in pockets, machine hemstitching, binding, tucking, etc.

The work both at Grantsville and Accident will be under the direction of Miss Lola Belle Green, County Home Demonstration Agent.

DIED.

JOHN E. GNAGEY.

John E. Gnagey, for more than half a century a resident of Garrett county, having been born at Grantsville in 1847, the son of Emanuel and Eliza Livengood Gnagey, died at Milledgeville, Illinois, last Tuesday morning following an attack of appoplexy at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Fike, with whom he was spending the winter, having gone to Milledgeville last fall. Mr. Gnagey was one of a family of twelve children. Following his marriage in 1870 to Susan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Beeghley, the couple moved to Accident where Mr. Gnagey engaged in the mercantile business and also conducted a farm. In both enterprises he was very successful. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Gnagey, seven of whom survive. Mrs. Gnagey died several years ago at West Milton, Ohio, to which town the couple moved from Accident nearly twenty years ago and where a son and daughter now live. Mr. Gnagey enjoyed the confidence and esteem of a very large circle of friends in Garrett county. His integrity was above question in business and as a churchman he subscribed and adhered to all the doctrines of the German Baptist faith. He was elected one of County Commissioners' board in this county in 1874, taking office in January of the following year and with his associates, Isaiah Boucher and William Winterberg, contracted for and saw the first court house in Garrett county completed. Mr. Gnagey was appointed postmaster at Accident by President Arthur and again by President Harrison. Under the administration of Governor Lloyd Lowndes he was Fish Commissioner for the Western Shore of Maryland for a full term of four years. In 1882, Mr. Gnagey was appointed School Commissioner of the county by the late Judge William H. Hoffman, but declined the appointment. After residing at Accident for many years, Mr. Gnagey disposed of his interests there and moved to West Milton, Ohio, where he continued to live a retired life until last fall when he went to visit his daughter at Milledgeville. Mr. Gnagey's funeral occurred last Friday with interment at West Milton.

FRANK W. CHASE.

Frank W. Chase, aged 72 years, remembered by many Oakland and Garrett county people as manager of the Preston Lumber Company's farm at Red House, died at his home near Media, Pa., Saturday afternoon, Jan. 9, 1926, following an attack of appoplexy which he suffered the preceding evening. His funeral occurred Tuesday, Jan. 12. Mr. Chase was born at Lime, New Hampshire. His parents later removed to Lynchburg, Va., where he married Susan B. Lee of that town. Coming to Oakland about 1910 he remained in the county for several years when he moved to Chester county, Pa., where he assumed the management of a large estate. He is survived by three daughters and two sons.

New Cabooses to be Used on B. & O. Railroad.

Fifty new late model B. & O. Railroad cabooses, being built at the company's shops at Washington, Ind., will be used on freight trains operating between Cumberland and Grafton.

The new cabooses are a great improvement over the old style cabooses now in service on the Cumberland division. They have four-wheel double trucks instead of the single trucks on the old cabooses; are longer than the old type and are thoroughly equipped for the comfort of trainmen. They also have steel underframes and are solidly built so that they can be pushed over the mountains where helpers are required. It is necessary to put the old type caboose on the rear of the trains when helpers are used so as to keep them from being crushed, and this practice necessitates considerable extra switching.

STATE SCHOOL PROPERTY VALUED AT $33,623,000

Counties of Maryland Spend the Largest Sum In History for Plants and Equipment.

Maryland public school property on last July 31 was worth $33,623,000, according to an estimate by the State Department of Education made public recently.

Of this amount the estimated value of property in use by white pupils was $30,447,000 and by colored pupils $3,176,000. Property in the counties which was used by white pupils was valued at $14,104,000 and that used by colored pupils $843,000. In Baltimore the worth of property used by white pupils aggregated $16,343,000 and by colored pupils $2,333,000.

Is Increase Over 1922.

The valuation of $33,623,000 for public school property throughout the State last year is an increase of $13,-169,354 over the 1922 figures, the Department of Education records show.

The last national compilation of data on public school property for the year ending July, 1922, it was pointed out, showed an average value of school property per pupil enrolled in the United States as $129. Maryland ranked thirty-fifth among the States in this ranking, with a valuation of $82 worth of property per pupil.

During the last three years the value of public school property in this State increased sixty-five per cent. the records show. The average per pupil for Maryland in 1925 was the same as the average for all the States in 1922.

County Average Is $121.

The average value of property per pupil used by white students "belonging" in the counties was $121 last year, the amount ranging from $249 in Allegany county, to $18 in Dorchester county. (The term "belonging" is used by the Department of Education to designate pupils exclusive of the transient pupils, as well as those outside the legal age. The term comprehends only those pupils for whom the department is "responsible.")

For the county colored pupils "belonging," the average value of school property was $32, ranging from $256 in Allegany, to $14 in Dorchester county, and to $8 in Howard county. The latter counties rent much of the property used in the education of colored children.

In Baltimore city the value of property used by white pupils "belonging" was $199 and by colored pupils $139. The value of school property per pupil in Baltimore was exceeded in the counties only by Allegany.

County Expenditures Large.

During the year ended July 31, 1925, capital outlay expenditures in the counties reached $2,528,000—the largest amount ever expended by Maryland counties in any year.

In Baltimore the amount disbursed —$3,225,000— was less than the amount expended in either of the two preceding years.

By July 31, 1925, between one-half and two-thirds of the funds available from the school loans voted in Baltimore were expended.

In the counties $99,700 was expended for land, $2,250,200 for new buildings and their equipment, $173,300 for alteration and equipment of old buildings and $4,700 for other capital outlay costs. The purchase of land in Baltimore cost $224,000; new buildings, $2,996, and equipment, $1,035,-000.

Outlay Detailed.

Of the total county expenditure $1,-217,500 was used for white elementary schools, $1,170,100 for white high schools and $110,500 for colored schools. The larger elementary schools having at least three teachers required $1,0007,000 of the expenditure for white elementary schools, leaving $165,000 for two-teacher schools and $46,000 for one-room buildings.

Teachers Protest Dancing Ban.

A storm of protest has been raised over at Bayard, a dozen miles from Oakland, and in West Virginia, over the action of the local school board in putting a ban on teachers dancing. This rule affects local teachers only, while those from adjoining districts in the same county and State attend dances at Bayard and take part in the pleasure. Bayard teachers say they are made "wall flowers" by this old-fashioned and out-of-date restriction and that the school board should remove it or else the ban as far as the teachers are concerned, should be State-wide.

RITCHIE'S NAME HISSED AT DRY LEAGUE MEETING

Representative Cooper, of Ohio, Calls Governor's Chicago Speech Travesty.

The name of Governor Ritchie was hissed generally Sunday afternoon at the twentieth annual meeting of the Maryland Anti-Saloon League at the Lyric, Baltimore, when Representative John G. Cooper, Republican, of Ohio, condemned the Governor because "he said the Eighteenth Amendment and Volstead act can't be enforced."

The demonstration against Governor Ritchie followed closely on a suggestion from a man in the gallery to hang all Americans who do not observe the dry laws. The remark was made in answer to Mr. Cooper's question: "What shall we do with Americans who do not observe the law?"

Woodcock Ill At Home.

Amos W. W. Woodcock, United States District Attorney, was to have spoken. However, George W. Crabbe, superintendent of the Maryland Anti-Saloon League, announced that Mr. Woodcock was ill at home in Salisbury. Last night relatives of Mr. Woodcock said he was confined to his bed with an attack of grippe.

Mr. Cooper created another demonstration when he said persons breaking the liquor laws were worse in his estimation than Bolshevikes and anarchists.

Scores "Smart Set."

"And yet these lawbreakers, many known as the smart set, some of whom have never worked in their lives, are cheating and robbing their Government," he declared. "They are the most dangerous persons in this country. They say they need liquor for pep. If they went out and did an honest day's work they wouldn't need this pep.

"Recently an effort was made in the House of Representatives to have Governor Ritchie's Jackson Day speech, delivered in Chicago, inserted in the Congressional Record. The effort failed there, but Senator William Cabell Bruce, from this State, had it inserted in that branch of Congress.

Speech Called Travesty.

"What a travesty it is when the executive of a great State like Maryland tells an audience that the liquor laws can't be enforced—and this is from a man whose oath of office demands that he enforce all the laws. If he won't enforce them he ought to be made to enforce them.

"The policy of the new organizations rising up to oppose the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act is to urge that each State put its own construction on the Constitution. A Senator from Maryland recently introduced an amendment to the Eighteenth Amendment, proposing to legalize the sale of beer and wine. The passage of this amendment would mean the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Repeal it and the country would be left without power to enforce any amendment.

Also Assails Aliens.

"The man who buys or sells liquor can not expect to find morality in his fellow-citizens, his employes or his family. What, also, will be done with the aliens who reap the benefits of living in this country, but will not become citizens but who break our laws? I believe in sending them back to the country they came from.

"But, more important, what shall we do with the American who was born here but who will not observe the laws?"

"Hang him," yelled a man high up in the gallery as Mr. Cooper paused to acknowledge another demonstration.

Cites Brotherhood Stand.

Mr. Cooper, a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and himself a locomotive engineer before he entered Congress twelve years ago, told his audience that this labor organization "had been dry long before the churches took up the fight."

Labor, he said, had benefited by the prohibition laws. There are now sixteen labor banks to one six years ago; there are fewer strikes, and homes and automobiles have replaced the saloon, formerly the laborers' club, he declared.

Despite assertions to the contrary by Capt. William H. Stanton, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, the liquor laws will not be modified by this or the next Congress, Mr. Cooper said.

Urges Election Of Drys.

Mr. Crabbe also referred to Governor Ritchie when he advised his audience to advocate the election of only dry candidates next year, "so that when we leave our homes and go into other States we can tell who our Governor is without being ashamed.

Mr. Crabbe made a lengthy appeal for funds "to carry on this fight," explaining that associations opposed to the law were gathering funds and that the Anti-Saloon League needed the money to continue its activities.

Upshaw Sends Telegram.

A telegram of congratulations from Representative William D. Upshaw, of Georgia, was read. Mr. Upshaw asked the people to support Mr. Crabbe, who, he said, was one of the greatest leaders in this country and one of the greatest men in Maryland.

Mrs. Wayne B. Wheeler, wife of the general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League of America, sang two songs, one of which was written for and dedicated to her by William T. Pierson. Mrs. John Engle was at the piano.

Goitre Prevention Planned in Cumberland.

The city and county health authorities at Cumberland are making arrangements to conduct a goitre prevention campaign in Cumberland the first week in February. About three years ago the school children of Allegany and Garrett counties were examined by physicians employed by the Public Athletic League of Maryland. Among other defects it was found that a large number of children were suffering from simple goitre. This condition is due to the lack of iodide salts in the water supply. Prevention consists merely of adding iodide salts to the diet, which can be accomplished in various ways.

Knights of Pythias Activities

Members of Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias, who failed to occupy a seat at Castle Hall last Friday night missed a rare treat indeed. From a fraternal standpoint, it was a gala occasion and enjoyed by all present. The much heralded and efficient degree team conferred the rank of Knight upon a class of candidates. The candidates thus honored received a lasting impression of the effectiveness and perfect functioning of the team. This team is coached and directed by capable leaders of untiring energy-men socially prominent and fraternally active in the community. The team is composed principally of young members of the lodge and bids fair to uphold the traditions of Garrett Lodge—that of doing things. The work of the military auxiliary of the team is nothing short of marvelous. Military movements are executed with precision and skill, and reflect credit on the personell. The members have given of their time and talents in perfecting their work. The support of the lodge is essential to the success of this team, so encourage them by your presence at every session.

Various committees have been appointed to serve throughout the coming year. Men serving on them have been selected according to their respective qualifications, who will discharge their duties impartially and with dispatch.

The Annual Pythian Anniversary banquet will be held at Castle Hall, Friday night, February 19th. A more comprehensive report will be given next week. Watch for it.

The rank of Page will be conferred upon a class of candidates on Friday night, January 29th. Two educational lectures will be given at this session so do not fail to be present. The title of the first will be, Sunlight and Electricity As Aids to Health. This lecture will be chiefly the summing up of the amazing results due to scientific discovery and medical research. It will be given by Dr. Adolph Lorenz, the renowned exponent of bloodless surgery, nor will he be present. It will be given, however, by a man of medical prominence and scholarly attainments, Dr. Henry W. McComas.

This will be followed by a lecture by Edward P. Kahl, who has selected for his theme, The Importance of Lumber Products in Commercial Life.

Show the officers of the lodge that you are vitally interested in their work. The officers and members extend a cordial welcome to all members; even the Master of Finance will be glad to see you.

In Jail Charged With Serious Crime.

John Coddington, of Friendsville, is being held in the Garrett County Jail charged with having committed a criminal assault upon the twelve-year old daughter of J. W. Fisher, of Selbysport, this county.

RODEHEAVER AND LAWSON RELEASED UNDER BOND

Two Preston County (W. Va.) Men, Held In Local Jail, on a Charge of Murder, Out.

Judge Albert A. Doub, of Cumberland, spent last Saturday in Oakland where he was engaged during the day hearing a number of matters, the most important being the habeas corpus proceedings instituted for the release from the Garrett County Jail of Homer Rodeheaver and Joseph Lawson, two Preston county (West Va.) young men who have been in prison here since December 23rd last on a charge of murder in connection with the death of Andrew Matthews, another Preston county youth, caused, it is alleged, by the administration of a drink of moonshine liquor given the victim a few days prior as the parties concerned were on their way home from Friendsville, Md., where Matthews had hauled a load of lumber and which town it is claimed Rodeheaver and Lawson secured the poisoned liquor.

It is alleged that Matthews drank the liquor while yet on Maryland soil and that his death occurred shortly after he had crossed into West Virginia with his companion, who was also engaged in hauling lumber from a saw mill in West Virginia to the railroad at Friendsville for shipment.

In the case before Judge Doub on Saturday Messrs. E. R. Jones and J. C. Renninger represented Rodeheaver and Lawson and by order of the Court they were relased from custody after furnishing bonds in the sum of $3500 for their appearance at the June Term of the Circuit Court.

Peter Wilt, convicted at the December Term with Fred. Green on a charge of assault, and who was not sentenced at the time by the Court owing to the illness of members of Wilt's family, was before the Court for sentence Saturday afternoon. Instead, however, of passing sentence Judge Doub placed Wilt under a bond in the sum of $500 for his appearance at the June Term.

Marriage Licenses.

Marriage licenses for the week ending Tuesday at noon have been issued to the following applicants at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland:

Forest Reed Stuart, 21, farmer, of near Philippi, W. Va., and Ruth Virginia Corley, 18, student, Clarksburg, West Va.

George Mengle Rigg, 21, mining, Altoona, Pa., and Rachel Lucille Blattenberger, 19, stenographer, Roaring Spring, Pa.

John Martin Tiscus, 33, mill worker, and Eleanor Aldrich, 21, clerk, both of Wheeling, West Va.

Patsy Toreh, 30, tin plate mill, employe, and Pauline Genevieve Davis, 32, both of Clarksburg, West Va.

William Glenn Foley, 23, trackman, and Ada Gertrude Dove, 19, both of Morgantown, West Va.

One applicant was refused a license while four were marked "don't publish."

Senator O. E. Weller Offers Rare Field Seeds to Farmers of The State.

Senator Weller, in keeping with the interest he has always shown in the farmers of Maryland, has arranged to obtain from the Department of Agriculture a few packages of rare field seed which he wishes to distribute for test purposes.

For the information of those who may desire to take advantage of the opportunity which the Senator is making possible in this connection, it may be stated that each package of the seeds contains a sufficient quantity for a satisfactory field test and that the following varieties are available: Kansas-grown alfalfa, Korean lespedoza, Virginia soybeans and Sudan grass. All requests should be addressed to Senator O. E. Weller, 227 Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

As the Senator was able to procure only a limited number of these seeds and since they are all intended for early spring planting, it is suggested that all interested parties let him hear from them by March 20th.

John Felda, aged 13 years, of Wilson, was sentenced to the Maryland School for Boys by Justice West on Tuesday following his conviction on a charge of assaulting a young girl living in the Wilson section of the county.

WILL FIGHT BAN ON CORN SUGAR

Bill to Solve Crop Surplus in Congress.

Washington.—Asserting that they have the backing of more than a million farmers and business men of the corn belt, Iowa congressmen have begun a determined fight to solve the corn surplus problem by removing restrictions on the sale of corn sugar now imposed by the pure food act.

In this way they hope to build up a new market which will consume millions of bushels of corn each year and eventually take over the entire annual surplus.

There are no restrictions now on the manufacture of corn sugar, but under the pure food act, all products in which corn sugar is used must be specially branded and labeled to show that corn sugar and not beet or cane sugar was used.

This restriction, it is asserted, has proved a great handicap to the marketing of corn sugar, as the enforced labeling is asserted to carry with it "the stigma of inferiority."

In order to remove this restriction a bill has been introduced in the senate by Senator Cummins (Rep., Iowa) and in the house by Representative Cole (Rep., Iowa). The bill provides for amending the pure food law so that corn sugar products will be added to the list of articles that are not deemed misbranded if not specially labeled.

To the farmers of Iowa and Illinois, who have been forced to accept low prices for corn, largely because of the surplus, increased manufacture of corn sugar would offer a new market for larger quantities of corn. Already thousands of letters have been sent to mid-western congressmen and to the Department of Agriculture urging the immediate passage of legislation which will remove the present restrictions on the sale of corn sugar products.

"If the restrictions are removed and corn sugar can be marketed in large quantities, it means that the total yearly surplus of corn will be sold to food manufacturing plants," Mr. Cole declared. "This undoubtedly would mean increased prosperity for the whole corn belt."

The Department of Agriculture is not so sure that the proposed change in the pure food act would be a good thing. Secretary of Agriculture Jardine is giving close study to the problem, and while anxious to see the sale of corn sugar exploited, he is undecided as to whether changing the pure food law is the best way to do it.

Boy Walks 25 Miles to School; Pays With Bull

Oneida, Ky.—J. R. Burns and a few associates founded an institute here a few years ago, where educational opportunities were few.

When the school opened this fall, Burns says, a boy walked from Leslie county, 25 miles away, leading a two-year-old bull, which was all he had to pay his tuition and other expenses. The institute accepted him.

Later a six-year-old girl rode a mule from her home in the same county 42 miles from the school. She had nothing to offer as payment for her schooling except the promise of a pig that would be given to the institute.

A fourteen-year-old girl walked six miles to the school, where she explained that her father did not believe in education, but she wanted to learn to be a teacher.

Bible 400 Years Old Found in Seminary

Lancaster, Pa.—A copy of one of the rarest Bibles in the world—the Ulrich Zwingli Bible—the printing of which is said to have taken four years, has been discovered in the library of the Reformed Theological seminary here.

The Bible, according to its title page, was printed by Christopher Froschauer in 1529. Four years before that time the first section of the volume, which is in six sections, was printed. The text was compiled by Zwingli and several other preachers of Zurich who were associated with him, and a greater part of the German text was translated from the Latin by Martin Luther. The Bible, according to historians, at the time of its publication corresponded to the popular-priced editions of today.

Boy Uses Dynamite in Game of 10 Pins

San Francisco.—For an hour one morning recently, eleven-year-old John Hickey played a game of 10 pins with 10 sticks of dynamite. The explosive was part of 50 sticks of dynamite stolen by small boys from a construction camp. Policeman Nels Miller, instructed to locate the stolen explosive, found young Hickey playing with the sticks in a lot, promptly halted the game and took the dynamite away from the boy. Other officers recovered more of the stolen dynamite.

MAYAS READ STARS ACCURATELY 530 B. C.

Checkup of Calendar Shows Advanced Civilization.

Cambridge, Mass.—The mystery of the Venus calendar of the ancient Mayas of Central America has been solved and a correlation made between this strange and wonderful time count and the true astronomical positions of the planet Venus in the Sixth century before Christ. The results are in complete agreement with those reached for the annual calendar of the Mayas and for dates in their day count, according to the correlation with modern chronology announced by the Peabody museum of Harvard university two years ago.

At that time it was shown by Dr. Herbert J. Spinden, curator of Mexican archeology on the Harvard museum staff, that the first definite date in the history of the New world was August 6, 613 B. C., when the Mayas began to give each day its consecutive number and to keep a sharp record of celestial events, and that the perfected annual calendar was inaugurated at the winter solstice of 580 B. C. Doctor Spinden is now able to prove that the Venus calendar of the Mayas was put in final working order between two risings of Venus as morning star in conjunction with the summer solstices of 538 and 630 B. C.

This demonstration adds to our knowledge of the remarkable science of the Mayas, who must be awarded the palm of civilization among American nations, and it also adds luster to Quetzalcoatl, a Toltec conqueror of more recent times, who now appears to have been made god of the morning star for solving a problem in astronomy. With the deciphering of the Venus calendar several previously unknown hieroglyphs yield up their meanings, and the ancient art and religion of the Mayas gain new interest.

Venus a Nimble Planet.

The Venus calendar depends on the fact that Venus, holding an orbit inside that of earth, makes 13 revolutions around our central orb in about two days less than eight years. But since Venus is viewed from the moving earth she seems to make only five revolutions, these being the five laps which are gained over earth in an uneven race. To gain a lap the nimble planet first swings out through space and passes behind the sun, where she is lost to view at the end of the phase as morning star. Then, to overtake, she again swings wide and turns in between the earth and the sun. Approaching the end of her race, Venus is a brilliant object as evening star going down into the west soon after sunset. At the finish she is lost in the sunlight at inferior conjunction only to emerge before sunrise as morning star.

After the invention of a time count and a system of hieroglyphic writing had given them means to accurately record, the Mayas discovered the double life of Venus as evening and morning star, and they carefully plotted all her mysterious comings and goings. They found that Venus disappeared for eight days between the last glimpse of her in the west and the first glimpse in the east. This was close observation, possible only in the short twilight of the tropics. They also found that the same phases of Venus come back in about 581 days on the average, so that five Venus years are practically equal to eight ordinary years.

Took Close Calculation.

The adjustments made by the Mayas in forming the Venus calendar are all the more remarkable when it is pointed out that Venus years actually vary in length by over eight days, while the average length of both Venus and tropical years must be carried into difficult fractions of a day. But five times 584 exactly equals eight times 365, which is enough to insure a return to the same position in the Mayan month after the completion of five formal Venus years. When the peculiar Mayan method of naming days by a permutation of 13 numbers and 20 names, giving a cycle of 260, is brought into this complex, the Venus calendar becomes a time machine whose dial covers 104 civil years, or 65 revolutions of the planet.

The Mayans were highly logical and did not use a make-shift intercalation in any of their calendars. Therefore their month moves forward in the natural years by the same amount that we offset by inserting extra days in leap years. Nevertheless they knew exactly where they stood at any time in the true year of nature. Similarly they did not modify the formal structure of their Venus calendar by adding or subtracting days, but they knew exactly how many days should be added or subtracted to reach the true places of the planet. The meanings of the Mayan month names and the symbolism of the month signs agree with the original setting in the natural year 870 B. C. and, in a similar way, the evidence in regard to the Venus calendar calls for an original setting where the calendarical places of Venus coincide with the actual appearances of the planet.

MAY TURN TO BLUE FOR ARMY UNIFORM

Not Enough Olive Drab to Clothe Soldiers.

Washington, D. C.—A careful survey of American resources for the manufacture of khaki breeches has convinced army officials that if it became necessary to put a force of two million men into the field in less than eight months, most of them would have to fight in their shirt tails.

Faced by this appalling possibility, the industrial mobilization wing of the national defense planning machinery started a study of its own. It found that it would be entirely possible completely to uniform two million men from head to foot in 17 days provided blue cloth instead of khaki was used.

The trouble with the khaki outfit is that not enough cloth of that color is in ordinary civilian use. There are ample stocks of blue and gray, both wool and cotton fabric. The result has been the working out of a tentative blue training uniform which could be supplied in ample volume for a mobilization, to be discarded as units completed their preliminary preparation and moved out for final training near the zone of operations.

By that time complete khaki outfits with tan leather trappings would be ready for them, giving them the necessary degree of low visibility in the field.

The contemplated blue training uniforms would consist of a four-button blouse, dressed with red shoulder knots to give a military touch; blue cloth overseas caps; blue breeches, tan canvas leggings of the lacing variety and black shoes. Tan shoes would be preferable, but the survey disclosed only a limited quantity of tan Munson last shoes in the market while there are always plenty of blacks to be had.

The matter has not passed as yet beyond a study stage in the War department.

Iron Chain of Civil War Unearthed by Landslide

Hickman, Ky.—Buried under a bluff since the site was surrendered by Confederate soldiers in 1861, part of the mile-long chain, composed of 19-pound iron links that was stretched across the Mississippi river by soldiers of the South to prevent the passage of Union gunboats, has been bared at Columbus, Ky., 20 miles from here, by a landslide that hurled two acres of ground into the stream.

Sixty feet of the chain were exposed by the slide. The anchor to which the Kentucky end of the chain was attached has been dug out. Its shaft is 16 feet long and the arms 7 feet.

Roller-Bearing Trains on Concrete Beds Seen

Chicago.—A new age of transportation with crack passenger trains running safely at terrific speeds on concrete roadways reinforced with steel trusses was predicted by Frank H. Alfred of Detroit, president of the Pere Marquette railway, at the meeting of the American Railway association.

Cars of the new trains will run on roller bearings and their speed will be almost as fast as airplanes.

Mr. Alfred, with the assistance of Paul Chapman, engineer, has worked out the plan.

"To the airplane theory, our answer is 'safety.'" said the Pere Marquette president. "The new roadbed and bearings will give railroad trains speed comparable to that of the planes and the superior safety of the rails will continue."

CONGRESSMEN GET STRANGE REQUESTS

Appeals Often Test the Wit of Legislator.

Washington.—Your congressman's mail, which attains considerable volume during the season, is an odd assortment of letters, containing everything, from facts to fiction, from truth to trouble, from nuggets of suggestion to "nut" requests. If the legislator has a sense of humor he may come to enjoy the latter; the difficulty lies in knowing whether the writer really meant to be funny. Here is a letter that came to a certain legislator:

"I urge that a commission be appointed to go to Germany and lay the matter before the authorities there, pointing out that the surrender of Bergdoll by the Germans would aid very materially in smoothing out the feeling engendered by the late war. Upon Germany's surrender of Bergdoll to the United States, I would have him shown at theaters in different parts of the country and the proceeds taken in at the door applied to the care and maintenance of some invalid overseas veteran. If such proceedings are contrary to any laws or treaties now existing, would suggest that such treaty action be taken as will make this possible."

Wants Male and Female Fish.

This letter happens to mention the slacker Bergdoll, although it might refer to any topic under the sun. One congressman tells of "an old fellow who wrote asking for a male and female fish, so that he could go into the business of raising fish, and he also wanted a law compelling people to eat fish at least once each week." Many a legislator is asked for a lock of the President's hair to be raffled at some entertainment for charity.

"The funniest I've ever had," said this congressman "is from an ardent peace advocate, who wanted us to obtain from the barber of the secretary of state some hair trimmings. In this instance the secretary of state was Hughes, and the trimmings wanted were whiskers."

"I keep in a separate file the letters making odd requests," said another congressman. "Among them is one from a man in my state, although not a resident of my district, informing me that he wanted to come to Washington in order that he might settle a dispute. He was a stakeholder for two of his friends and wanted to know if it were possible for me to obtain him a railway pass, inasmuch as I had been discussing railroad legislation. He naively stated that he had no other reason for coming to Washington, that he was not particularly interested in what congress was doing, but he did want to settle the bet between his friends fairly and without prejudice. The subject of the wager was whether one of the paintings in the rotunda showed an Indian with five or six toes on one of his feet! At first I thought that it was a josh letter, but found out later that the man was regarded as a sort of a Solomon in all disputes in the section in which he lived, and that he had written in good faith.

Answers Them All.

One legislator, instead of paying no attention to peculiar requests, takes pains to answer every one. "I make it a point to answer them because they might not seem as absurd to the writer as they do to me," he explained.

A congressman who has delivered lectures on patent law says that "not a week goes by without requests from inventors. The latest one asked if it is possible to patent a device that will prevent the juice from a grapefruit from squirting on one's shirt front. Since radio has become such a fad I have received more than a hundred letters asking if I could have the Navy department furnish sets free of charge.

"We don't get as many letters as we used to from persons who claim to have solved the problem of perpetual motion, but we have dozens of requests for recipes for home brew.

"About a year ago we received a most peculiar composition. We puzzled over it, then sent it to a decoding expert. He found it contained a request for flower seeds and for the Congressional Record. After we had complied with his request the writer explained that he had written in code 'to see if his congressman was mentally keen enough to decode it.' Now he declares that his congressman is the brightest man in the country.

"Another letter suggested that the money owed to the United States by the allies be used to construct a bridge across the Atlantic ocean."

HANDLING TEN MILLION DOLLARS DAILY IN THE U. S.

It Costs That Amount a Day to Run Our Government and the Writer of this Article Handles The Money.

By Frank White, Treasurer of the United States.

The Treasurer of the United States is charged with the receipt and disbursement of the government's public moneys. The income of the government from its various sources is deposited in the Treasury and in government depositories to the credit of the United States. The Treasurer is the redemption agent for national bank notes, federal reserve bank notes, and federal reserve notes; is trustee for bonds held to secure national bank circulation and public deposits in national banks, and bonds held to secure postal savings in banks; is custodian of miscellaneous trust funds; is fiscal agent for interest on the public debt and for paying the land-purchase bonds of the Philippine Islands, principal and interest; is treasurer of the board of trustees of the Postal Savings System, and is ex-officio commissioner of the sinking fund of the District of Columbia.

The work of the Treasurer's office naturally divides itself into six divisions for the handling of its various operations, which may be described as follows:

The Division of General Accounts maintains the Government General Treasury ledger accounts of the general fund; the various trust funds; the reserve fund; the gold settlement fund; the accounts of the classified assets and liabilities of the government; the issue and redemption accounts of the paper currency of the government; the individual ledger, and individual transit accounts of the paper currency of the government; the individual ledger, and individual transit accounts of Treasury offices, federal reserve banks and branches, national banks, and foreign depositaries. It keeps the accounts of the payment and reissuance of all government obligations. It prepares and issues the daily Treasurer's statement of the United States Treasury, the monthly preliminary statement of the public debt, and the statement of the classified expenditures of the government. It publishes the monthly statement of the outstanding paper currency of the government. It furnishes various statistical reports from Treasury accounts relative to the condition of the finances of the government and maintains the accounts upon which it compiles the figures for such statements and reports.

The Accounting Division handles the checks drawn by disbursing officers on the Treasury to pay the various government obligations. Each department of the government gets an appropriation from Congress, designates one or more disbursing officers for that department, and authorizes a credit on our books to such disbursing officers; such credit being charged against its appropriation. The Treasurer's office gives the account a number and furnishes the disbursing officers with the uniform government checks. The checks drawn by disbursing officers come to the Accounting Division for final settlement. Each check must be carefully examined for amount, signature and indorsement. The checks are finally charged to the disbursing officers account at the end of the month. A monthly statement of each disbursing officer's account is rendered. During the last fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, the number of checks paid aggregate 21,267,000, or over 100,000 checks each working day. The figures of this division show that we paid out during the last fiscal year for the general expenses of the government, and interest on the public debt, on an average of $10,000,000 a day for each working day of the year. This is what it costs to run our goverment. About ten per cent of these checks are paid in cash through our Cash Division. About ninety per cent come to us through the federal reserve banks and are charged to our accounts with said banks.

The Cash Division of the Treasurer's office makes payment on all Treasury warrants, disbursing officers checks, interest checks and interest coupons that may be presented in the Treasurer's office. This division is in charge of the cashier. He makes collection of all drafts and checks made payable to the Treasurer of the United States for credit in the various accounts. He prepares estimates for paper for the United States currency and directs the printing of the required amount and desired denominations. He receives such currency from the Bureau of Engraving and printing and stores it in reserve vaults until required for issue. He issues in the name of the Treasurer all gold certificates, silver certificates and United States notes.

The Division of Securities of the Treasurer's office makes payment of all public debt items which mature and are presented for payment. During the fiscal year 1925 there was paid on account of the principal of the public debt, such as, certificates of indebtedness, Treasury notes, Treasury bonds, war savings securities, Treasury savings securities, Liberty bonds, loan of 1925 and other public debt items, a grand total of $3,818,030,000.

The money to pay the above public debt items was secured by the refunding of something over $3,000,000,000 of government securities, from the sinking fund and other debt retirement items, and from the surplus in the general fund. The net reduction of the public debt during the fiscal year ending June 30,1925, was $734,-619,101. The total of all public debt items outstanding on June 30, 1925, amounted to $20,516,193,888. There was also paid through this division interest coupons and checks amounting to $850,000,000. The Division of Securities also pays interest and principal, when due, on Porto Rican and Philippine obligations. It collects the tax on national bank currency. This division in custodian of all bonds held by the Treasurer to secure national bank currency, the deposits of public moneys, postal savings and various other bonds and securities deposited by the Secretary of the Treasury and other public officials for safe keeping. The total of bonds and securtiies so held amounts to more than $12,000,000,000.

The Redemption Division of the United States Treasurer's office is charged with the redemption of the unfit and worn-out United States currency. This currency consists of gold certificates, silver certificates and United States notes. These notes are carefully examined as to their genuineness, are counted and finally destroyed. This money is destroyed by passing it through a machine called a macerator. This macerator has a chemical in it which takes all the inking out of the paper and also has knives that grind it up into a very fine pulp. This pulp is sold to manufacturers of paper. A great deal of burnt money and pieces of notes are also received. When three-fifths or more of a bill is received full value is given; if less than three-fifths but greater than two-fifths half value is given. The burnt money received is in all stages of incineration, from the smallest recognizable fragment of a burnt bill to whole notes that are merely charred. There must always be enough of a burnt note intac, even though it be burned and charred almost beyond recognition, to identify it as to kind and denomination. The amount of unfit currency redeemed by this division during the past fiscal year was $1,178,636,294 or 566,652,692 notes of the several denominations. Of this vast bulk of money there were 474,766,556 one-dollar bills alone. The average life of a one-dollar bill is about nine months.

The Treasurer of the United States is also charged with the redemption of the circulating notes of the national banks and the federal reserve banks, and is the custodian of the redemption funds of gold and lawful money deposited by such banks for the redemption of their notes. This work is performed by an organization in the Treasurer's office commonly known as the National Bank Redemption Agency. There are now 216 employes in that organization and their salaries together with all other expenses, in connection with the redemption of circulating notes are reimbursed to the government annually by the banks. During the fiscal year 1925 the agency assorted and redeemed over 550 million dollars in national bank notes and over one billion, three hundred million in federal reserve currency. The total number of pieces assorted and redeemed by the agency during the fiscal year was approximately 206 million pieces.

Five kinds of paper currency are now issued and in circulation. The gold certificates are secured by a deposit in the Treasury of 100 per cent gold reserve. The silver certificates are secured by 100 per cent of coined silver dollars. United States notes have a gold reserve of forty per cent. Federal reserve notes have now a reserve of a trifle over eighty per cent of gold and twenty per cent of commercial paper. The national bank notes are secured by government bonds deposited by the banks with the Treasury equal to the amount that is issued.

The Treasurer's office functions like a large bank and must have its accounts in balance at the close of each day. The maximum of care, accuracy and reliance is exercised by the many faithful employes of the office.

GORMAN

Although our little community's happenings have not been given any publicity recently, we want to let the rest of the county know that we still live in a thrifty section of Garrett county.

Mrs. John Alexander and son "Monty" have returned to their home in Frostburg after spending a few weeks with friends here.

Miss Dorothy Dilgard, of Uniontown, Pa., is spending a few weeks at her home here.

The merry jingle of sleigh bells has been heard since the old north wind paid us a visit and leaving all the snow behind, which has made us all very happy.

The fires at the tannery at this place were drawn from beneath the boilers one day last week, which fact throws quite a number of men out of employment. The night watchman is the only man retained about the large plant.

C. H. Vossler, of Keyser, W. Va., was in town one day last week attending the meeting of the stockholders of the First National Bank.

The Maryland Bureau of Mines has opened a school here. The class is conducted by Prof. L. C. Hutson, of the Maryland Mining Commission, and State Mine Inspector John Watkins. Many mine employes of Bayard, W. Va., are enrolled and make the trip weekly to this point, coming by horse and sled or otherwise.

Mrs. Delia Rider, who has been very ill, is now recovering.

Quite a number of people of our community attended the basket ball game at Bayard, W. Va., Thursday night.

Mr. Kenneth Miller, of Gorman, is spending a few days at Elkins, West Va., with friends.

Mrs. D. J. Butts has returned to her home here after spending a few days with her son, Mr. William Butts, of Hartmansville, West Va.

Most of the people of this community who have ice houses to fill, have them stocked with ice about six inches thick, which was cut on the river.

No Car of Recent Years Has Aroused Such Interest

There is no parallel in our entire experience—or in all the 17 years of Paige and Jewett success—to the keen and universal interest shown in The New-Day Jewett Six!

Already this car has been viewed by a greater number, we believe, than have attended the introductory showing of any automobile. Throughout the country, many thousands purchased New-Day Jewetts during the first two weeks—more actual sales, we believe, than have ever been made in a like period on a new car.

Such interest is natural, for The New-Day Jewett is a most unusual new car. It is truly a new-day automobile—designed for today's motoring needs and admirably fitted to meet them.

To gain full appreciation of the remarkable results fine Paige engineering has attained in new-day driving ease and brilliant performance, you must not only see this beautiful Jewett, but ride in and drive it. If you have not yet been able to do this, delay no longer!

FIGHTING TAX REDUCTION.

The dean of a college of journalism notes a great change in the tone of some metropolitan newspapers that have become entirely plutocratic.

This is instanced in several states where popular governors are trying to put over economy programs, leading to substantial reduction in rates of taxation.

For instance, in one large city in a state where the governor is backing a retrenchment program, the two largest dailies of opposite politics, fight his entire reduction program in the interest of the taxpayer.

The metropolitan press which derives its main support and circulation from the common people, too often sides entirely with extravagant educational institutions that conduct hundred-thousand-dollar football games and emphasizs such sports as golf, polo and more or less aristocratic social functions.

All these combined interests fight a chief executive who seeks to curb professoinalism at the expense of the taxpayer and who believes it is the purpose of public education to increase the number of efficient producers from the soil and to develop citizens in the common walks of life to be mose efficient in industries and in ability to support homes and families.

TYRANNY OF COMMUNISM.

"Much has been heard in this country of the paradise for wage earners which communism has created in Russia," says the Mansfield, Ohio Journal. "Soviet missionaries to the United States have been singing the praises of this government of, by and for the workers with which the Russians are now blessed.

"But how do the Reds reconcile this description of sovietism with the verified report of a strike of dock hands in Leningrad? A group of Russian workers, while loading a ship, went on strike for higher wages. The government rushed a detachment of Red soldiers to the wharf and drove the strikers back to work. Instead of getting their wage increase the workmen were compelled to labor 75 hours without pay.

"In 'capitalistic' America labor has established its inalienable right to 'collective bargaining.' The striking wage earner in this country is beyond the reach of government or law, as long as he resorts to no violence. This is the sort of protection labor enjoys under a government which soviet leaders call 'capitalistic.'

"American labor has its grievances, but, at its worst, its lot was better than that of Russian labor under communism. Such tyranny as that at Leningrad was never known in the United States. Than class government or communism, there is no greater tyranny."

Men Seem To Be Born To Differ In Opinions.

To the Editor of The Republican:

Henry Ford has become a theosophist, Luther Burbank and infidel.

Men who have spent most of their lives making gas engines ought to be qualified to teach others about their specialty.

Other men who have specialized cross-breeding Holsteins and Jerseys have come nearer to learning nature's truth about animal life than the man who has spent his time making autos.

Luther Burbank is a great man in his line of work and study and no man knows better than he how to make a poor potato into a perfect one, or how to grow two kinds of fruit from one tree.

But if he should try to inform us on internal combustion engines, the majority of men would prefer Mr. Ford's judgment.

Now, a well-meaning writer of religious editorials talks as follows: "Know the truth and it shall set you free." "But how is one to know the truth?" "For the search after truth is like the search after perpetual motion, or trying to square the circle." Again he says: "It is not given to many to know but a particle of the truth and that particle while true today may be false tomorrow."

He certainly has not specialized in the study of what constitutes truth enough to define it. If truth is like the discovery of perpetual motion, then it is unknowable to men.

If only a few can learn the truth and find it true today but false tomorrow, then it ought to be plain that we did not find the truth at all.

Truth is that which is fundamental, changeless. If it is truth today it always has been and always will be. If you find it here you will find it in China, France, England.

Five times two make ten—make it everywhere. This is a mathematical truth.

Josh Billings said that people learn a great deal that is not so.

Knowledge is based on truth. All that we learn that contradicts truth is the negation of knowledge—a self-delusion.

All that men has ever learned he has learned directly or indirectly from the study of nature. When you stop to study man's achievements, be they social, industrial or governmental, you will find that they are based on our imitation of natures way of doing things.

Truth never makes us free until we know and accept it as our guide to conduct. Then it becomes a priceless posession.

Because it dissolves our doubts and fears, frees the mind of mental prejudice and the false theories of others that have been taught us.

We find that man's beliefs and opinions differ only while they are ill-informed—while thought is in a state of flux, they accept many theories unthinkingly and without evidence.

Truth is that which can always be verified and proven by someone, sometime. Nature never fools us like man does. If we observe her facts and follow her laws we can't go wrong—we can't miss the truth.

Mr. Ford believes in reincarnation, though he has not specialized in the philosophy of it. Mr. Burbank disbelieves in re-incarnation and in the immortality of the soul. Both men have a right to their opinions. But what do creeds and opinions amount to until they can be verified by some law of nature.

Nature reveals the truth and only the truth as fast as man is able to discover her laws. All other revelations are man made and have a bias or a motive to foster and are valueless as a guide in life unless grounded on some basic truth of nature.

The universe is a unity in its life, its force, in mind and matter. A truth or a law that governs on planet earth, governs on all the suns and stars of space.

As men's intelligence is developed many of nature's now hidden truths, laws and resources will be revealed to him.

The Creator expresses His ideas of beauty in the lily and the rose and in a picturesque landscape; but in these His expression is limited by the type, the materiality of the thing created.

Be it a begonia, a bird, or a beast, so man, as a vehicle for the highest expression of divine mind, is limited by his capacity for understanding truth and the laws of nature.

Thus while nature has revealed much for man's benefit, it does not yet appear what, in the fulness of time, man may become.

BITTINGER

During the first days of last week we heard reports that robins in considerable numbers were seen in the wood land near this village and we began to congratulate ourselves upon the near approach of spring, but before the week ended the mercury fell to zero and we have experienced the coldest period of the winter and we pity the robins which ventured north prematurely.

It is said that one night last week, some species of wild beast from the mountains entered the stable of Mrs. Daniel Hoover, near Jennings, and attacked a cow tied in the stable, tearing and lacerating the cow to a considerable extent.

A few days ago Albert Hetrick, the district constable, and Clarence Swauger, a young man living near Jennings, were shooting mark with a revolver and somehow Hetrick shot Swauger through the arm, inflicting a painful wound. No details of the accident are available.

GRANTSVILLE

On Tuesday, the 19th inst., the new American-LaFrance fire truck for rural service was delivered to the Meyersdale Fire Department, for which negotiations and means of financing has been under way for nearly a year. The people of this community are particularly interested in this big, modern fire apparatus since nearly six hundred dollars have been contributed towards its purchase by our good people. Immediately upon officials acceptance, the truck will be placed in service for Meyersdale and all the adjacent towns and farm buildings that are accessible. This brings modern fire fighting equipment to everyone in this community, as the truck is the finest and fastest built by the manufacturers. It has a minimum pumping capacity of 400 gallons per minute; is equipped with pneumatic tires and has a body sufficient to accommodate over 1500 feet of hose, along with other accessories that go to make modern fire-fighting equipment complete. The citizens of Grantsville and community are to be commended on their progressiveness in co-operating so generously toward bringing about this great step. Locally, the movement was sponsored by the mayor and town council. The supply of water in case of need, has been provided for at a point in the east end of town where a reservoir of several thousand gallons' capacity was erected during the past summer.

Mr. and Mrs. C. U. Edwards were Oakland visitors last week.

Mrs. Paul Brown, of Aeostia, Pa., is here as the guest of Miss Maude Bevans.

Mrs. W. C. Locchel has been very ill the past week.

Mrs. J. J. Bender has returned from a week's visit with friends in Cumberland.

CRELLIN

The Stanley Coal Company at this place is operating its mines every day as usual. They are mining and shipping from seven to eight hundred tons of coal per day and still have room to employ fifteen or twenty additional diggers if they were available.

John T. Dewitt's little girl, Sylvia, who has been ver ill for some time, is reported improving.

Mr. George D. Browning was a business visitor in Crellin Tuesday.

The revival meeting at this place, which were joined in by both churches and were under the supervision of Rev. Bailey, of Mt. Lake Park, closed here Sunday night.

Quite a wreck occured on the Preston Railroad Monday, when four coal cars were derailed just beyond Crellin toward Hutton. It was feared this would handicap the mines the following day but by strenuous effort everything was ready to go off smoothly Tuesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lee were the guests of Charles Ream one day last week.

Mr. Richard DeWitt, who was severely burned on the foot about three weeks ago, is still on crutches but able to be around town now.

All the houses in Crellin are occupied at the present time and the people are busy and contented.

The Stanley Supply Company is doing a nice business. Their sales are increasing from month to month. They have a large stock of up-to-date merchandise and their store is gradually taking on the appearance of a city store.

The Freeport Coal Company is operating their mine regularly and expect to increase their production from week to week.

The Yough Coal Company is now operating their mine near the concrete road at this place.

The Crellin school is progressing nicely with four able teachers on the list.

The Crellin Boy's Band has been practicing regularly two nights each week all winter and they will have a better band next summer than ever.

Charles Ream spent a portion of last week in Parsons, West Va.

Mr. Lester Yutzy, the head bookkeeper for the Kendall interests and the Stanley Coal Company, has been wearing his usual congenial smile owing to the increased production of the Stanley Coal Company which has kept him very busy in the office and has prevented him from going coon hunting.

The Union Sunday school of this place is well attended. Mr. Homer Shaffer is superintendent. It is the desire of the officers and teachers of the Sunday school to make it bigger and better than ever.

The Democrats will start a tariff fight. Well, anything that is legitimate is far more impressive than the system employed by the would-be Democratic leader, Tom Walsh, who used questionable witnesses to fasten something on a member of the administration. While the Democrats will get nowhere with their tariff position, their desire to throw off unreliable sensational actors is to be commended.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 31, 1926.

JESUS FEEDS FIVE THOUSAND MEN.

John 1-71.

Read Matt. 14:13-36; Mark 6:30-56; Luke 9:10-17.

Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall not hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.—John 6:35..

A BUNDLE OF NEEDS.

More than a year has passed since we watched the woman beside the well. The Galilean ministry had been in full swing, the twelve have been selected, parable teaching has been begun, lines of cleavage are beginning to be strongly marked, the disciples have been sent out on their teaching mission, John the Baptist has been beheaded and in these spring days that mark the peak of the popularity of the Great Teacher the twelve come hastening back, fearful of the next stroke of Herod's sword, but eager to pour into the listening ears of Jesus their experiences on the road. The clear insight of their Master was never better revealed than during these experiences which are related by all the Gospelers. He was first of all a teacher and gave Himself to the class as to no other group, for upon their understanding of Him rested the whole outcome of His mission to earth. Their teaching experiences needed to be checked over, their fears quieted, their weariness rested and their grief assuaged so the desert call became insistent and they crossed the lake in order that the class might have uninterrupted converse. But disappointment awaited them in the crowds that outran the slow-moving boat and thronged them so that the desert became as populous as the city. Forgetting Himself and His sorrow over John, whose death foreshadowed His own, He turned to the meeting of the needs crowding upon Him.

There were the disciples, first in His thinking. They had come for a review lesson, but a new text was set in the throngs. They urged the sending the crowd away—a quite natural thing and one in which we would have been likely to share. They were just as selfish as you or I. But if they could not abide the crowd their need, pressing more insistently than their leisure, was sympathy for that group and it was to this lesson that the Teacher set them.

Primarily the crowd's need was not bread. Not one of them would have starved if Jesus had not provided a meal. Towns were within easy reach and the pilgrims to the Passover who made a large part of it would have been sadly careless travelers if they had not planned for food for their journey. They needed shepherding. As a soldier said of the boys facing the battle, "They need their mothers." That tender touch of understanding spirit was what their hearts really hungered for and it was that that Jesus planned to give. Finely John makes it all a symbol and uses it as the first Communion from which all later ones have sprung instead of from the meal in the upper room, which he omits entirely. The boy needed the strengthening of the spirit of sacrificial loyalty so that it would become the passion of his life—could his name have been Stephen? Jesus needed to get away from the shadow of the cross flung over Him by the death of John, He needed the clear-seeing of the drift of His popularity so that in fellowship with His Father He might fight through again the old temptation to accept a temporal instead of an eternal Kingdom.

THE MEANS.

How magnificently your Lord flung aside the plea of the people that He accept a crown. On the rugged hills with God, lashed by storm and buffeted by wind and wave He strode into immortality by refusing to give what men asked and by presenting what they needed instead. For His disciples Philip had the first test. How familiar it sounds if we translate his dismay into the words, "If we only had the money." We all have said it many times over and the Church of Jesus has faltered because we have lost sight of Jesus in our intentness on costs. Andrew was different. He knew they had what the crowd needed, but "America First!" The lesson of Jesus is still unlearned that he who would be greatest must put himself last. Then He dared them to an impossible thing, the feeding of the throng. They must have looked at each other in amazement at His order. They would be laughed at if they invited the folks with only five loaves and two fishes. But He had told them to do it. Where God orders, it is always safe to go. But we hesitate, falter, disobey and the world waits still its living bread. They rose to it—all honor to their faith—and when the church dares as greatly our world will be ready for His crowning. Then they were told to gather up what was left. Why when He could provide fresh loaves? Because faith that fails to care for supplies is sheer folly in expecting God to do what we haven't sense enough to do for ourselves. Out of the sacrifices of many we squander the money in competing church buildings and expect the old miracles over again. The crowd learned that organized grouping is necessary for getting things done and the world will find thru the organized church the best distribution of supplies. And it all grew out of a boy who was willing to sacrifice to the limit and go partners with the Almighty. The hope of the world is in the hands of its lads and lassies whose gifts of life are being freely offered to their Lord today.

THE MESSAGE

John's purpose in telling the event is to find in it the suggestion and reason for the message that followed it in the Capernaum synagog. Here Jesus faced the same who had clamored for His crowning the day before. He charged them with self-seeking in their demand and sought to lift their sight above the symbol to the reality, from material to spiritual kingdoms. That he carried them as far as He did is a great achievement. But they refused to see in Him the living bread that God provides for all men, to understand that only as one feeds on His word and assimilates His life can he in the fullest sense live. He is not the dessert but the full meal. The people followed their accustomed mode of thinking that works were the things God desired. Jesus replied that it was not an act but an attitude; that the real work is the attitude of belief in Him. They leveled the Carpenter below the Law-Giver. Jesus took them into the realm of accomplishment—if it "Giveth life unto the world" then one has proof of its coming from God. Men would say, "If he lives in a monestary he must be a priest; Jesus would reply, "If life is holier where he is, he is a priest." Men are "long" on pedigree, God on service. The people refused to follow Him into the world of spirit, the disciples also wavered, and the period of loneliness began for Him whose life is bread of all fulness of life.

The TALE of KIDDIE KATYDID

By Arthur Scott Bailey

A GREAT SECRET

WHOEVER Katy was, and whatever she might have done, nobody in Pleasant Valley knew anything about her except Kiddie Katydid and his numerous and noisy family.

To be sure, many of the wild folk—and the people in the farmhouse, too remembered hearing her name mentioned the year before.

But they had quite forgotten about her, until August came and Kiddie and his relations brought her to their minds once more.

Had the Best Time When Making the Most Noise.

Each night the Katydids' rasping chant was repeated again and again: Katy did, Katy did; she did, she did! But since in any crowd there are always a few that want to be different from the rest, now and then some member of Kiddie's clan insisted that Katy didn't—somewhat in this fashion: Katy did, Katy did; she did, she didn't!

However, there were always so many others to drown any such puzzling statement with their shrill clamor that Katy really did do it (whatever it was!) that nobody paid much attention to those who didn't agree.

On warm, dry, mid-summer nights the Katydids all made a terrific racket. But there wasn't one of them that outdid Kiddie. He always had the best time when he was making the most noise. And since he liked to station himself in a tree near Farmer Green's house, his uproar often rose plainly above that of the other Katydids.

Lying in bed in his little room under the eaves, Johnnie Green sometimes wished that Kiddie would keep quiet long enough to let him go to sleep in peace.

To be sure, the balmy breezes wafted many other night sounds through Johnnie's open window. From nearby came Chirpy Cricket's cheerful piping. And in the distant swamp the musical Frog family held a singing party every evening. Johnnie Green liked to hear them. But he objected strongly to the weird hooting and horrid laughter of Solomon Owl, who left the hemlock woods after dark to hunt for field mice.

As for Kiddie Katydid, he paid little attention to any other of the night cries. No matter what anybody else said, he solemnly hurled back at him that never-ending refrain, Katy did, Katy did; she did, she did!

You would have thought, if you had heard Kiddie, that somebody had disputed his statement. But such was not the case at all. Since no one except the Katydids knew anything about the mysterious Katy, nobody was able to say truthfully that she didn't do it. In fact, the whole affair was a great secret, so far as outsiders were concerned. And one night Johnnie Green even thrust his head out of the window and cried impatiently:

"All right! All right!! I admit that Katy did it. And now do please keep still!"

Of course, his plea failed to silence Kiddie Katydid. But it relieved Johnnie Green's mind and made him feel better, anyhow.

Kiddie told his own people about Johnnie's outburst. And they all agreed that it was a rude thing to do.

"Doesn't he know," they asked, "that the night belongs to us?"

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

TOUCHING FOR WARTS

IN A BIG bank, in a big eastern city, there is a porter who has a reputation all through local banking circles of being able to cure warts by "touching" them.

Now and then is found a man who is thought to possess the same curative powers of touch which are accredited to the bank porter of the big city. It appears as if to certain favored individuals had descended the miraculous power which formerly, and for many centuries, were supposed to be possessed by the Kings of France and England—especially of England—when they "touched for the King's evil," otherwise scrofula. The custom of "touching for the king's evil" in England can be traced back to Edward the Confessor definitely, and is probably of a much older date. It was continued by the British monarchs up to and during the reign of Queen Anne and the ritual for the "touching" was retained in the English Prayer Book until well toward the middle of the Nineteenth century.

The "touching" of the bank porter and his congeners is apparently an echo of this old-time royal practice; upon investigating the methods of the porter in effecting his "cure" it was found that his "touching" consisted in rubbing the warts with his fingers from right to left—or sunwise, which action clearly indicates a survival of sun-worship. The chief value of a study of modern superstition is in patching out our imperfect knowledge of the past, says Maspero, and as in the touching of the bank porter for warts there is clearly a lingering remnant of sun-worship; the facts point to a similar origin for the royal touch to a similar origin for the royal "touching for the king's evil."

COME on Black Care! I shall not put you off.
Come on and do your worst to me—I'm here.
All fearless of your barb and sneering scoff,
As long as I've for allies Faith and Cheer.

Come on! I'm ready for you, with no mind
To put you by until some other day.
I'll take you as you come, whate'er your kind,
Nor let you wax the stronger for delay.

My weapons are but laughter and belief
That I am Master of my Soul's Domain
Not you, and as its Sovereign Lord and Chief
Hold all usurping Woes but rebels vain.

Quick Way to End Dangerous Cough

Why let a dangerous cough hang on when you can, through a simple treatment, get speedy relief and often break it up completely in 24 hours?

This treatment is based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You take just one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. It has a double action. It not only soothes and heals irritation, but also removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. So the worst cough quickly disappears.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

AN ABBREVIATED STORY

TALKING LADIES

"WHAT do the Earthwomen talk about?" wondered Jazzbo, the man from Mars. "It would be impossible for me truthfully to reflect the life on this planet in my forthcoming book unless I gain an accurate impression of the distinction in the conversations of its various classes of women. I will start at the bottom."

And he betook himself to the poorest section of the great city and he hearkened eagerly as Mrs. Hardfist conversed with Mrs. Fernjaw across their mutual back fence.

"I don't know what we're comin' to a-tall, with servants gettin' so impudent and independent," Mrs. Hardfist was saying. "Would you b'lieve it, Mrs. Fernjaw, the little hussy says to me only this morning, she says, 'Mrs. Hardfist,' she says, 'I know Mr. Hardfist gets $4.50 for every 20 bricks he lays now, and I won't come in and help you with the dishes any more for less'n a dollar an evenin'," she says.

"Most interesting," reflected Jazzbo. And he hied himself to Mrs. Van Booster's sumptuous drawing room where an informal tea party was in progress, just in time to hear Mrs. Peyster-Liggs remarking, "Rully, ladies, what the end of it all will be, I rully don't know. My maid Celeste demanded another increase of $10 a week yesterday, rully."

"Odd, very," thought Jazzbo, and wafted himself to a meeting of the Ladies' Browning and Shakespeare club, where Mrs. Highbrow-Specks, the president, was saying, 'The situation is one not to be lightly dismissed, you know. My cook gave notice today because I refused to give her $5 more a week and the use of the automobile."

"I think I'll omit that chapter," said Jazzbo apologetically to himself, and went to take a lesson to change the subject.

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

AT 21—George Gibbs, the Novelist, Decided Definitely to Abandon the Real Estate Business.

"AT THE time I began the really serious business of working every night at an art school, seeking the equipment I long needed to make an artist of me.

"Before this I had been a midshipman at the navy academy, because my father had been a surgeon in the navy. After I spent three years working laboriously at football, verse and pen sketches, with accidental moments of mathematics and chemistry, I was permitted to resign.

"My second endeavor was obviously to plumb misfortune to its depths, for I can imagine no other reason for entering the real estate business, or in studying international law, the one too concrete, and the other not concrete enough to avoid the wars into which my country was successfully plunged.

"When I decided to enter the art school I bade a long farewell to real estate without regret. Instead of great artistic success however, there followed success as a writer of special articles. After this a studio, illustrations for the magazines and an invitation to move to Philadelphia and work on the staff of a well-known magazine.—George Gibbs."

TODAY—Mr. Gibbs is a famous American novelist. He wrote his first book when he was thirty-one. It was called "In Search of Mademoiselle," and by a neat coincidence he actually found her at the same time in Philadelphia and married her. Some of Mr. Gibbs' novels are, "The Bolted Door," "Sackcloth and Scarlet," "The Splendid Outcasts," "Fires of Ambition," "The Yellow Dove."

An overhauling during the winter months—new piston rings—valves ground—ignition tuned—carbon removed—all oil cases cleaned and refilled—fender dents ironed out—then when spring breakes, the old engine will be humming as of yore and you'll be all ready for another summer of pleasure.

David J. Lewis says President Coolidge demanded his resignation in blank before he would name him a member of the Tariff Commission. That boy in the White House is the real article. He and other Presidents have had experience naming men to positions who later used the same to injure the administration. Getting the resignation in advance is a darn good idea.—Chicago Tribune.

ROAD WORKER SUSTAINED FRACTURE OF HIS SKULL

Lloyd M. Alexander, of Flatwoods, Victim of Accident last Thursday Afternoon.

Lloyd M. Alexander, aged 25 years, employed as a road worker on the Accident-Keyser Ridge section of the State road, was badly injured last Thursday afternoon when he suffered a fracture of his skull by being struck by an automobile at a point on the road just south of the Sebold curve, fifteen miles north of Oakland. The injured man was taken into Accident by County Agent W. C. Jester, who was passing at the time and by direction of his attending physician young Alexander was rushed to the Western Maryland Hospital at Cumberland where he was immediately operated upon. His condition at this time is favorable and unless complications occur he will be restored to his usual health in a short time.

While there were several witnesses to the accident none of those who saw it give the same version of the occurrence. Alexander was employed with the crew of men at the point where the accident took place and was standing alongside a truck or snow plow when a passing car skidded and the handle of the door of the vehicle struck him in the temple.

The driver of the car, a traveling man named Max Weinberg, of Baltimore, was arrested later and at a hearing before Justice West he was released upon bond for his appearance at the June term of the Circuit Court.

OAKLAND ROTARY CLUB RECEIVES ITS CHARTER

Parchment Delivered By M. W. Fleming, Governor, In Presence of Fifty Rotarians.

At the William-James Hotel, Oakland, last Thursday evening, with only half the number of guests expected on account of a storm prevailing at the time and with the mercury standing at zero or below, M. Ward Fleming, Governor of the Thirty-fourth District, Rotary International, presented the charter to the Oakland Rotary Club in an address pleasing in manner, genteel and full of good advice and counsel.

The charter was received by Dr. Henry W. McComas, president of the local club, who responded briefly but to the point.

Other speakers were Jed Robinson, Governor of the 33rd (Grafton) District; Charles S. Catherman, who brought greetings from the Cumberland Club; G. M. Gillette, representing the Frostburg Club, and L. F. Everhart, of the Terra Alta Club. On account of the road conditions Kingwood, which had expected to be present in large numbers, telephoned regrets early in the afternoon that no members of that club could possibly reach Oakland. However, fifty Rotarians surrounded the banquet tables and an evening's enjoyment and good fellowship resulted. The spirit existing among the Rotarians present will spred to every one in the communities represented if the principles of the organization are observed, and they will be if expressions heard on every side and in the addresses of the speakers are conscientiously carried out.

The Oakland Rotary is the result of the efforts of George Stern, past president of the Frostburg Club, who met with a number of business men at the William-James Hotel last August when the formation of the club was discussed. Mr. Stern was accompanied at that time by G. M. Gillette, W. E. G. Hitchens, Thomas Elias, Rudolph Nickel and others of the Frostburg organization. The Oakland Club was elected to Rotary International in December of last year and has held weekly meetings, on Friday, since.

Rotarians present from Frostburg at the affiliation meeting were George Stern, W. E. G. Hitchens, Conrad Hohmg, Rudolph Nickel, W. H. Denner, Clifton D. Jeffries, R. H. Hitchens, G. M. Gillette, J. Glenn Beall, E. I. Pritchard, A. C. Frey.

From Piedmont came Charles Connell, Wm. B. Gold and H. G. Combs.

Cumberland was represented by C. S. Catherman.

Jed Robinson was the sole representative of the Grafton Club.

Terra Alta, always to be depended upon, was here with a large number, including Sam Utt, Dr. W. A. Welton, Dr. M. M. Harris, Don Webster, B. C. Fraley, H. Paul Shaffer, L. F. Everhart, C. T. Kelley, W. O. Whitehair, "Dutch" Parsons, J. M. Wolf, Dr. Moser and Lloyd Taylor.

The affiliation was a gala affair from the start to finish, and aside from the speeches, all of them good, consisted of singing and eating a delicious dinner.

The local club has on its roster the names of twenty-two members, representing the business and professional life of the community. This list will be enlarged as opportunity presents.

Dr. McComas is president, and J. A. Towler is the secretary. Other members are L. M. Fraley, Wade H. Hinebaugh, Floyd C. Stahl, B. H. Sincell, A. R. Martin, Paul B. Naylor, Dr. B. F. Selby, Charles W. Ream, A. T. Matthews, H. L. Miller, Joseph E. Harned, Henry Lauer, Edward P. Kahl, H. A. Loraditch, C. A. Dellinbaugh, F. E. Rathbun, Arthur Lawton, Guy Yutzy, Rev. Archibald Moore and Roland R. Gilbert.

OAKLAND HISTORICAL IN THE FAMOUS WAR POEM

"Stonewall Jackson's Way"Having Been Written At The Old Glades Hotel Here

By VANCE W. MARSHALL, Williamsport, West Va.

For many years after the Civil War there had been considerable dispute as to the authorship of that famous war-poem "Stonewall Jackson's Way" which was not definitely settled until later. It may be a surprise therefore, that it was from the pen of a Baltimore, Maryland clergyman, who had penned this stirring war time song famous throughout the Southern states. This poem was undoubtedly written by Dr. John Williamson Palmer, who was born in Baltimore, Md., in 1825, and was educated there and studied medicine under Dr. Dunbar of that city. It is stated that Dr. Palmer was for several years a physician and surgeon in the British East Indian service and was in California during the gold fever. During the Civil War he was war correspondent for the Richmond Dispatch and other southern papers. After the war he went to Baltimore, where he resided for a short time, then he went to New York City, devoting his entire time to literatary work, writing a number of poems and contributing to the numerous magazines of that city, hut later returned to Baltimore where he died in 1906.

In the New York Sun of some years ago it gave the account of how he came to write "Stonewall Jackson's Way," which will prove interesting to readers of Allegany and Garrett counties, Maryland, as well as the general public:

"In September, 1862, I found myself at the Glades Hotel, Oakland, Md. This mountain hostelry had long enjoyed a peculiar celebrity, dating from a time before the war, when its register was rich in names of tourists more or less distinguished, who came thither led by love of wild scenery or wilder sport. The house was as famous for a cosmopolitan company of guests as for versatility of experience and accomplishment and various charms of entertainment had not their like in any caravansary between the two oceans. Early on the 16th, was a roar of guns in the air and we knew that a great battle was on, yet carriages and saddle horses were waiting to take us all to an Arcadian picnic in the woods above the Cheat river. The hearts of others were beating, but they went. I alone made excuse and remained in the deserted house, while the guns roared on, and my heart was full of the mystery of apprehension and longing. I knew that Stonewall was in it, whatever it might be; it was his way—'Stonewall Jackson's Way.' I had twice put that phrase in my war letters and other correspondents, finding it handy, and quoted it in theirs. I paced the piazza and whistled a song of Oregon lumbermen and loggers that I had learned from a Californian adventurer in Honolulu. The two thoughts were coupled and welded into one to make a song and as the words gathered to the call of the time I wrote, "Stonewall Jackson's Way," with the roar of those guns in my ears. On the morrow I added the last stanza and the completed lines were first read by that winsome rebel, Miss Mary Dailey.

"On the 17th, the wires brought us from Cumberland, Md., Lee had joined battle with McClellan at Antietam creek. Stonewall Jackson had captured Harpers Ferry on the 15th, with its garrison of 12,000. Then he had started by one of those swaggering forced marches, which were his 'way,' to join Lee at Sharpsburg, where he came up in time to take command of the left wing for the bloody doings of the 17th.

"On one of the first days of October six gentlemen, including myself, and two ladies took leave of Oakland, went by train to a point opposite Hancock, crossed the Potomac river there in small boats, took a carriage at Hancock, drove through Fairview to Hagerstown and thence south to Antietam creek and Sharpsburg. On the battlefield we traversed the 'Bloody Lane' and the ground that death had plowed when McClellan had hurled upon Stonewall Jackson's thin lines the legions of Hooker, Sumner and Mansfield. Then we took to the carriage again, to make our way to the Railroad. "As we labored over the stony road, torn in desperate ruts by the artillery and the baggage trains, the men in our party climbed out and in again and again to relieve the horses, and in one of these struggles I lost my copy of the song. I had thrust it carelessly into the breast pocket of my coat, where it protruded and finally worked out somewhere on the road. So the original draft of 'Stonewall Jackson's Way' was dropped in the very midst of the grave-yard he had helped to make, and was probably found by those who were prepared to appreciate its significance. In Baltimore I told the story of the song to my father, and at his request, made immediately another copy of it. This was shown cautiously to certain members of the Maryland Cluh, and a trusty printer was found who struck off a dozen slips of it, principally for private distribution. That first prited copy of the song was headed, 'Found on a Rebel Sergeant of the Old Stonewall Brigade Taken at Winchester.' The fabulous legend was for the misleading of the Federal Provost Marshal, as were also the address and date: 'Martinsburg, September 15, 1862.' This poem was suppressed in the North, but its entry in the South by the way of an underground current, together with the details of his own work and imprisonment in the South during these events, complete Dr. Palmer's interesting story of the birth of this famous song which pictured the strong character of "Stonewall" Jackson and concluding all doubt as to the real authorship.

Thomas Jackson was a poor boy, born beyond the Alleghenies in Clarksburg, W. Va., January 21, 1824, and who managed to get to West Point, and later a professor at the Lexington Military School. The first few years of the life of Stonewall Jackson were filled with adversity. On March 20, 1826, his father died, his oldest sister a few days before, and the young widow left with very meager means. In 1830 his mother married again and removed to Fayette county, where she died the following year. The children in the meantime had been placed with relatives, Thomas going to the old home place at Jacksons' Mills near Weston, in Lewis county, then occupied by his step-grandmother and several uncles and aunts. The summer of 1837, Jackson was employed on the old Parkersburg and Staunton turnpike through the heart of Western Virginia and the winter of 1839 was spent in school under the noted Alexander Scott Withers, author of "Border Warfare," and in 1840 Withers was a justice of the peace and he sought the services of Stonewall Jackson for constable, a sort of a deputy sheriff in those days. But this did not last long for Jackson was aiming higher and in 1842 it was announced that an appointment was to be made at West Point of a cadet-ship and the preliminary examination is said to have taken place at the "old Bailey House" in Weston, and there four applicants were present, among this number being Jackson and the late Johnson N. Camden,(United States Senator) however one was selected "conditionally" but the outlook was not attractive to the one selected and he returned to Weston and told Stonewall Jackson of his disappointmnt in the pualifications, so Jackson again took hope and was admitted to West Point on July 1, 1842 and two years later he graduated with the brevet rank of second lieutenant of artillery, and August of that year found him on his way to Mexico, where he was advanced to first lieutenant for gallant conduct in the siege of Vera Cruz in March; to brevet rank of Captain for conduct in battle of Contreas in August; and to brevet rank of major for heroic conduct at Chapultepic in September. In June, 1848, Jackson returned to the United States from Mexico with Scott's Army and was stationed at Fort Hamilton, New York, until 1850, when he was transferred to Florida. During 1851 he resigned from the army to take effect the following year and was then appointed an instructor at Virginia Military Institute, Lexington, Virginia. Jackson's ten years at Lexington are marked with the most interesting events, and on April 21, 1861, Major Jackson left Lexington with the cadets in the very opening of the Civil War. On April 27th, he received the appointment of Colonel of Virginia volunteers; assigned to command of First Brigade in June; and engaged in skirmish at Falling Water July 2. On July 4th, he was made a brigadier-general, and led First Brigade in the first battle of Manassas. Here, Lee, in rallying his men, exclaimed, "See there stands Jackson like a stonewall!" thus applying his name which is better known around the world than the Christian name given him at his birth. On January 1, 1862, Jackson left Winchester, driving the Federals from Romney across the Potomac, and entered upon the famous "Valley Campaign." During this period, the old Stonewall Brigade covered itself with glory which will "live in song and story" so long as there is a remnant of the Southern history.

MOVIE CAMERA AS HELP TO JUSTICE

Detroit Court Brings Solomon Up to Date.

Detroit, Mich. — King Solomon's methods revamped for the movies, were adopted by Circuit Judge Vincent M. Brennan as a means of aiding him in deciding to which of two women he should award a three-year-old girl. Instead of threatening to dismember the child with a sword, Judge Brennan announced he would award the child to neither Mrs. Julia Przbyla, natural mother of baby Irene, nor Mrs. Irene Goosen, her foster mother, formerly Mrs. Przbyla's sister-in-law. Instead, he told the women, the child would be placed in an institution.

At the very instant he made this statement a moving picture operator stationed behind the judge's chair trained his camera on the two women.

Judge Brennan said he would employ psychologists to aid him in studying the film, and he would award the child to the claimant whose features showed the greatest grief.

As the movie lights were flashed on, Mrs. Goosen burst into tears and, bending over, clasped the child in her arms. Mrs. Przbyla made no demonstration.

Triplets, Born Puny, Thrive on Spaghetti

Hoboken, N. J.—Too frail to live? Fanny, Frances and Jake Ferreri, fourteen-months-old triplets, sat up at the table and snickered over their spaghetti. They made no comment on their extraordinary gain in health and poundage since the night 14 months ago when doctors doubted the three puny babies would live. Frances and Jake can walk now, and Fanny is learning to walk, but her weight is a handicap.

The youngsters are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ferreri. New Year's day they paid their first visit to New York city, stopping to eat spaghetti and other adult delicacies with an uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Calvatore Costa, at their home in lower Manhattan.

Fanny, who weighed three and a quarter pounds when she was born, now tips the scales at 15. Jake has added 16 pounds to his original six, and Frances, who started out at four and three-quarters, now has achieved 20.

They have not been brought up exclusively on spaghetti, but they eat a lot of it, and have, according to their parents, since they were weaned from the bottle four months ago.

MUST KEEP HER HAIR

Mrs. Morris Wallach of New York city probably has the longest hair in the eastern states, and caring for it has become so burdensome to her that she wants to [illegible] it. But Mr. Wallach is proud of his wife's tresses and will not permit her to have them cut off.

Luther's Home, Built in 1483, Given to Church

Berlin.—A quaint cottage at Eisleben, in which Martin Luther was born in 1483, has been transferred by the city to the Evangelical church.

The cottage is in a remarkable state of preservation. Though owned by the city of Eisleben, the Prussian government has been appropriating funds for its upkeep since 1817. The church now assumes the responsibility of keeping the property.

The city council has voted to add the word "Lutherstadt" to the name "Eisleben."

Diet Tests to Find Teeth Decay Cause

Baltimore, Md.—Johns Hopkins specialists are conducting experiments which they believe will have a "profound influence on the breakfast table of the nation."

They are seeking the cause of decay of the teeth. Through the feeding of rats in a laboratory, Dr. Clarence J. Grieves already has determined that diet is one of the chief factors of decay, but the fundamental reason still is unknown.

No one knows what is the chemical or other agency which first breaks through the enamel and starts the trouble. If it is a chemical it is not known whether it is taken into the mouth from the outside; produced by a germ, or is a product of the body itself.

TURTLES RAISED ON FARM BY DOUGHBOY

Got Idea to Breed Snappers in Monte Carlo

Fertile, Iowa.—Some 20,000 snapping turtles now lie buried beneath the boggy acreage of the hill country of north Iowa, enjoying their long winter sleep, because the World war broke out in Europe in 1914.

Europe is a long way from Fertile, but it is where Dana Johnson, youthful soldier, got his idea for the establishment of a turtle farm that supplies a large per cent of the turtle flesh that eventually finds its way to the dining rooms of America's foremost hotels.

Johnson was a doughboy in the Eighty-eighth division of the A. E. F. In September of 1917 he obtained a leave of absence and wandered down to Monte Carlo, of gambling fame. One night a wealthy American, a steel manufacturer, invited Johnson and a number of companions to dine with him at the Grande cafe near the Casino. Chelonia taydas broth, a soup made from the flesh of a species of West Indian turtle, was served. The check for it was large.

Sees Business Chance.

Johnson reasoned that if wealthy men paid without protest such high prices for mydas broth, it would pay to go into the business of supplying the market. Thus was born the idea of Fertile's turtle farm, the plans for which Johnson put into effect after he came home. Five years ago Johnson began his work by leasing ten acres of river bottom land, making a success of the venture from the start.

Mr. Johnson derives his chief revenue from the sale of eggs and choice breeding stock. He also has a good income from the sale of turtle oil, supplying many large hospitals. During the winter months he supplies a great many eastern hotels with choice table stock, fed and fattened throughout August and September on sweet potatoes and buttermilk.

Bettered by Cross Breeding.

The first 700 turtles were placed on the farm in 1920. They were a species known as the "snapping turtle," a reptile despised by fishermen. They were taken from the streams and lakes of north Iowa. Placed on the farm, they have been greatly improved by crossing with a species of chicken tortoise somewhat resembling the leatherneck. The resulting strain is a grotesque creature resembling, in some respects, the chelydes and matamata reptiles of South America. However, their flavor is appetizing. Of the 20,000 turtles now on the farm, possibly 1,000 are of the new hybrid species.

On the farm itself there are ten low-lying acres of hummocks and bog, and nothing more. There are no buildings of any kind, except three dams of stone and wastewood thrown across a rill of mound-spring water that trickles toward a larger stream skirting the south border of the farm. Wavering rows of post tops mark the underground fences encircling the three ponds formed by the stone and wood obstructions in the little stream.

Flutes in Audience Drown Opera in Berlin

Berlin.—Invasion of the dignified Prussian state opera house in Berlin of an ancient custom of German theatergoers of blowing whistles when they are dissatisfied with the performance has resulted in many protests against the habit. The average German carries many large keys, hollow at one end, which he can use as a whistle when what is offered on the stage displeases.

The effect of 100 key flutes in action is more pronounced than hissing or hooting.

This was all right in ordinary theaters, but when the opera was invaded many persons concerned about the national manners began writing to the papers. Presentations of a jazz-classical symphony by the English composer, Lord Berner, recently were practically drowned out by the key flutes in the audience.

Invents Way to Alloy Aluminum With Metals

Berlin.—The discovery of a method for alloying aluminum with other metals, which will produce materials for automobile bodies which will not show scratches and will have both color and finish "built in," is claimed by B. Jirotka, a German electrical engineer.

He has demonstrated his discovery to a commission of metallurgists of the German Institute of Chemical Technology.

He is said to have made alloys of aluminum and more than a dozen other metals, producing materials of many different colors. Aluminum alloys made by Herr Jirotka include those with copper, manganese, cobalt, zinc, lead, chromium, tin, gold, silver and nickel.

Belfort, France.—The city council hopes to increase the birth rate. Three hundred francs will be paid on the birth of the third child and 100 francs for each arrival after the first three.

TURKEY PLANS ON BIG FARMS

Republic Will Make Agriculture a Science.

Constantinople.—The Turkish republic is going in for agriculture on a scale the like of which the country previously has never witnessed.

Recognizing the principle that there can be no enduring prosperity in a nation of oppressed and unwilling producers, the government has made numerous changes ameliorating conditions under which the peasants lived.

The feudal system which obtained during the rule of the sultans has been abolished. The overlords, who claimed vast stretches of land and used the peasants as serfs, have been executed or exiled and the land divided among the people. With the departure of the sultans went the tax on the peasants which took one-tenth of their profits.

To create a body of expert managers, the bureau of education has established 13 agricultural schools for which there were 2,000 applicants this year, and also is sending students to farm colleges in Europe and America.

The department of agriculture is encouraging scientific farming through the dissemination of information, distribution of seeds and institution of tractors and other modern machinery. It has elaborated upon a program, to extend over the next ten years, for the intensified production of tobacco and the "three whites" of Turkey—cotton, sugar and wheat.

As for President Kemal, he is so keenly interested in the development that he is running an experimental farm of his own on the outskirts of Angora.

Patrolmen Save a Woman After Leap Into River

New York.—Her hands clasped as if in prayer, a gray-haired woman, about fifty-five years old, plunged from the bridge at the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad ferry slip at Twenty-third street into the Hudson river.

A throng in the waiting room saw the woman disappear in the icy water. An unidentified young man sprang to the rescue. As the crowd watched, he dived and brought the woman to the surface.

Patrolmen Young and Morrison lowered a ladder into the slip, but found it was three feet too short. As the watchers cheered, Morrison held Young by the ankles and swung him down until his hands grasped those of the rescuer.

Assisted by several men, Morrison and Young hauled the two ashore. The rescuer shivered a few seconds, shrugged his shoulders and disappeared before police could learn his name. The woman, identified as Mary Kegan, fifty-five, unemployed and homeless, was taken to Bellevue hospital to be treated for submersion.

Young Men of Pennsylvania Town Losing Their Hair

Kittanning, Pa.—A strange malady, which so far has defied diagnosis by physicians and scalp experts is rapidly denuding the heads of the town's young men of hair.

According to a local newspaper, physicians at a meeting here announced that they had received more than 300 applications for treatment for premature baldness from men ranging in age from nineteen to thirty in the past two weeks.

Live 13 Days Without Food or Even Water

Bellaire, Ohio.—After being imprisoned in the Webb mine for 13 days without food and water, three horses and a mule, forgotten while efforts were made to recover the bodies of nine miners who lost their lives in an explosion, were led from their living tomb and treated to fresh air and sustenance. There was great rejoicing among the townspeople and miners when the faithful animals were reported safe.

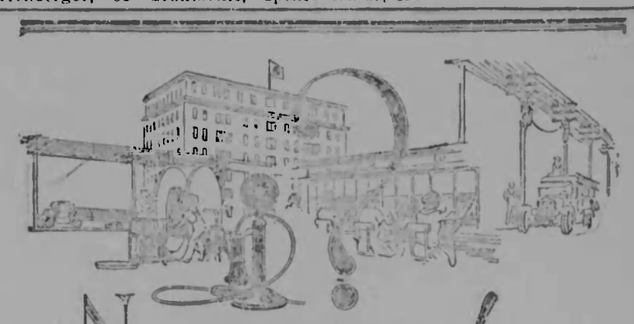
Night Coughing Quickly Stopped



New Way Simple But Very Effective

Night coughing, with its distressing loss of sleep and dangerous sapping of strength and vitality, can now be almost instantly checked through a simple but wonderfully effective treatment that is economical, too.

This treatment is based on the famous prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. For astonishing relief make this test tonight before retiring:—Simply take one teaspoonful and hold it in the throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of night coughing. So with the cause removed, coughing stops quickly and you sleep the whole night through.

The Dr. King's New Discovery prescription is for coughs, chest colds, sore throat, hoarseness, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children as well as grown-ups — no harmful drugs. At all good druggists. Ask for

"The Store of Dependable Merchandise"

MEDINA CENTER OF MOHAMMEDANISM

"Second Best City in World" to Faithful.

Washington.—Medina, Arabia, "second best city in the world," to millions of Mohammedans recently fell to the forces of ibn Saud, ruler of the fanatical Wahabis of central Arabia. The town is the subject of the following bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Mecca and Medina, the two holy cities of Islam, have been first in peace, first in war, and first in the religious devotions of Moslems the world over for 13 centuries," says the bulletin. "The fact that Mohammedanism was planted in Mecca, but made no growth until transplanted to Medina, mirrors the physical differences between the two towns. While Mecca is set down in a steppe which is almost a desert, and while its inhabitants, ever since the place has been known, have made their livelihood as merchants (and caravan raiders), Medina is situated in an oasis and has always had strong, agricultural ties. Its valuable groves produce 139 varieties of dates, some famous throughout the Near East.

Flight "Made" Medina.

"Although a town had long existed on the site of the present Medina it was small, and the hegira or flight of Mohammed 'made' Medina almost as truly as the trek of the Mormons made Salt Lake City. This moving day of Mohammed and his little group of Meccan followers is of such importance to Moslems that it was made their year one, and on it their calendar is based. This was in 622 A. D. of the Christian system.

"From the year one to the year ten Mohammed lived in Medina where he dictated his revelations to a scribe, completing the Koran, the Bible of Islam. During these ten years, too, he conducted, from the Medina base, expeditions of his militant followers against Meccans and other Arabians, thus beginning the spread of Mohammedanism by the sword, a practice that was to remake the map of much of the world. From Medina, Mecca was captured; and because its Kabah had been the object of heathen pilgrimages for ages, the city was made the spiritual center of Mohammedanism, and the old pagan shrine was dedicated to Allah.

"Medina remained the temporal capital and Mohammed continued to live there and preach in the Medina mosque. He died in the year ten in the house of one of his wives adjoining the mosque and was buried beneath the floor where he died.

"The mosque is not an imposing structure. Only in its main gateway is there any pretense at decoration. In the courtyard, beside the grave of Mohammed, is that of Abu Bekr, his father-in-law and his immediate successor as caliph. Near-by also is the grave of Omar, the second caliph after Mohammed; and at a little distance is the resting place of Fatima, the prophet's favorite daughter. The burial plot of the three caliphs is surrounded by a high fence of iron and brass network so closely woven that the streams of pilgrims who file by catch only glimpses of the interior. Only mosque officials and great dignitaries ever enter the sacred precincts.

Non-Moslems Barred.

"Medina, like Mecca, is forbidden ground to non-Moslems, and before the Great war it was actually less known to the outside world than the spiritual center of Islam itself. Capture by the British of a detailed Turkish map and photographs of the city and the surrounding country furnished the first authentic information since the making of a sketch by Burton 70 years before.

"Medina preserves its inviolability in spite of the fact that it is the terminus of a more or less modern railway. This, the famous 'pilgrim railway' from Damascus into the Hedjaz, was built by the Turks between 1900 and 1908, largely with contributions from the faithful. Practical Western diplomats, however, saw marked military value in the line, and their judgment proved to be correct during the Great war. Because of the road, Turkey was able to hold Medina against the Arab rebellion until 1919.

"Before the war Medina, like Mecca, profited greatly from pilgrims from all parts of the Moslem world. While a visit to Mecca was practically compulsory, the trip to Medina was voluntary, but gave additional merit. A drawing factor is the assertion by Mohammedans that 'one prayer offered in the Mosque of the Prophet is worth a thousand elsewhere.'

"Many thousands of pilgrims from northern Syria and Asia Minor, bound for Mecca, passed through Medina because of the railway, and many more came from Africa because the city is especially holy to their sects. In addition many of the pilgrims who went directly to Mecca made the additional pilgrimage to the second holy city, and to Medina's profit these were often the more wealthy travelers. Hundreds of pilgrims remained in Medina each year and its pre-war population was exceedingly cosmopolitan.

"The war greatly injured Medina. The Turkish garrison deported nearly three-fourths of the population during the siege by Arabs, reducing its numbers from 40,000 to about 10,000. Many houses were pulled down so that their beams might be used for locomotive fuel, and inroads were made into the valuable palm plantations near the city for the same purpose."

SPANS OF YORE VANISHING FAST

Wooden Bridges Give Way to Modernism.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Hundreds of old covered wooden bridges, many of them built before the Civil war, have stood staunchly despite their builders' lack of knowledge of many of the present-day principles of structural engineering, according to William S. Titus, chief engineer for the state department of highways.

Despite the highway department's efforts to replace the old covered bridges with modern steel and concrete structures more than a hundred of them remain in use.

While the old covered wooden bridge is not confined to Indiana it is probable more of them were built here than in any other state, Titus said. Timber was plentiful and there were many small streams to be crossed.

From records it is believed the first wooden bridge was built at Dublin in 1834. It was razed a few years ago for a steel structure. The Paroka bridge, on the road between Evansville and Vanderburg, replaced two years ago, was in use 70 years and scores of other bridges stood more than 60 years. The stone in the abutments of the Dublin bridge was Bedford limestone, and as there were no railroads in 1834, it is reasonably believed that it was hauled overland by oxen 150 miles.

Probably the longest covered bridge in the state is at Matamora. Two of the best preserved bridges are at Rushville and Connersville.

Engineers of pioneer days had a two-fold purpose in covering their bridges, Titus said, explaining that the covering prevented rain, water and snow accumulating in the bed of the bridge, and increasing the deterioration of the floor, and to provide a shelter for persons caught on the highway during heavy rain or snow storms.

Romance and tragedy are woven into the lore of the old bridges. In their shelter lovers out buggy riding stopped for a kiss, and many a lone wayfarer was beaten sometimes to death, and robbed by highwaymen who lurked within the cavernous passageways.

It is significant that all the covered bridges were built to cross the stream at right angles, and this accounts for the almost invariable bend in the roadways approaching covered bridges. By building directly across the stream instead of at an angle the builders saved material and expense. Direct traffic lines are necessary today and sometimes a bridge is built at a very pronounced angle across the stream.

Mother's Vow Results in Miniature Church

Cresco, Iowa.—The mother of John Gaertner, a French explorer, who was with Napoleon's forces at the burning of Moscow, vowed that if God would safely return her son she would build a church.

The son returned, but his mother, because of financial difficulties, was unable to carry out her plan. Her granddaughter, Mrs. Mary Anna Huber, however, took up the work, and the result was the building in 1885 of St. Anthony's Catholic chapel.

The church is of native lime rock. It is 11 feet wide and 17 feet long. It has four stained-glass windows, a tall belfry, a cross, four pews, a center aisle, a main altar and two side altars. It seats eight persons.

The tiny edifice, dedicated to the memory of John Gaertner, was maintained by the Huber family until 1924, when St. Anthony's Chapel association, formed by 65 grandchildren of Mary Anna Huber, took over its care.

Horse Meat Is French Luxury as Costs Soar

Paris.—Horse meat, formerly "the poor man's beefsteak," has become a French luxury. Scarcity of butcherable animals is given as the cause of its enormous increase in price.

One pound of choice horse meat at the local markets recently was quoted 9.50 francs—about 40 cents. Pork chops could be had for 8.50, roast beef for 9 and mutton for 7.50.

Besides the gradual disappearance of horses "on the hoof" available for the markets, a tax of 1 franc 25 centimes per pound placed on the meat was said to have influenced higher prices.

Horse meat is recommended by physicians for persons suffering from tuberculosis and all diseases of anemia of the blood.

Grocer's Clerk Must Know His Onions

Olympia, Wash.—Every grocer's clerk will have to know his onions if Representative Moran's bill, which proposes to license these merchants, passes the legislature now in session. Every clerk a dietitian, every clerk a linguist, every clerk a public accountant. Such is the grocery utopia as pictured by the official. His bill provides that no one shall be licensed as a grocer's clerk unless he has had three years' experience working in such a store, and over the age of twenty-one. A grocer's apprentice shall be eighteen years and must possess both affidavits as to good moral character and certain educational qualifications.

Among the NOTABLES

EDWARD JUDSON

EDWARD Z. C. JUDSON was an adventurous soul, whose ability for getting himself out of trouble was only surpassed by his ability to get into it again.

He was born August 1, 1822, into a perfectly proper Philadelphia family; and his father, being a lawyer, expected the son to follow in his footsteps. But young Judson upset those nice plans by running away to sea when he was thirteen. And it wasn't so long after this when, single-handed, he rescued a boat full of people who had been run down by a ferry. He was stationed on a ship in the East River, N. Y., at the time. His bravery got such a stir he was appointed a cadet by President Van Buren. Out of trouble, you see, and a hero.

Then into it again. The other midshies, being Annapolis graduates, wouldn't eat with a fellow who had been an ordinary seaman—caste was very important then—so Judson challenged the whole bunch to a duel and came away unscathed and with the reputation of being the best shot in the navy. Out of trouble again, and getting famous.

He turned his hand to writing, and had a story accepted and was made a magazine editor—then was arrested for inciting a riot in the city. When he got out of that scrape, he began writing sensational serials for newspapers, turning out some four hundred thrillers. And then he began another political party, a semi-secret society called the "Know Nothings" (because that was their answer to all questions about themselves). Judson served through the Civil war as a scout with the Indians, was wounded 20 times, and was made a colonel. He ended his career in 1886.

Rules for Health

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE rich are not the rich in wealth,
For richer he who's rich in health.
Whatever goods you buy or sell,
Who would stay rich must first stay well.

Man learns no wisdom in the schools
More wise than these ten simple rules:

1. Who works indoors, outdoors, must play,
   And walk at least a mile a day.
2. Closed windows always are a sin,
   So let a little outdoors in.
3. And, if indoors by day you keep,
   Then out-of-doors you ought to sleep.
4. The hours to spend in slumber then
   For elders eight, for children ten.
5. Eat slowly, not too much of meat,
   And something rough as well as sweet.
6. Use water freely, it's about
   Our greatest boon, inside or out.
7. And walk and stand and sit erect;
   It helps your health and self-respect.
8. Breathe deeply, keep your mind serene,
   And keep both mind and body clean.
9. Avoid the folks who cough and sneeze
   Or violate such rules as these.
10. The tenth rule is of all the gem:
    Be moderate in all of them.

WHO SAID

"Nothing is so oppressive as a secret"?

JEAN DE LA FONTAINE, the author of the words quoted above, was born in a place that of late years has become peculiarly dear to the memory of the American people. That place was Chateau-Thierry, the scene of some of the greatest American sacrifices during the late World war.

La Fontaine was born July 8, 1621. The early part of his life was spent in his native town; the last 35 years allotted to him were spent in Paris. The work done by La Fontaine during the years 1668 to 1673 constitute the foundation upon which rests his claim to fame. In that period he produced his famous "Fables."

As a youth La Fontaine was deeply religious. He then drifted away from the church and led a somewhat gay life and wrote many fables that were questionable in their character. The last two years of his life he spent in doing penance of various sorts for these works.

Boileau, the poet, was a great friend of La Fontaine's and in 1684 the two were signally honored by being made members of the celebrated French academy.

The death of La Fontaine occurred April 13, 1695.—Wayne D. McMurray.

Good Health For All Maryland

"Good Health for All Maryland," will be discussed at a series of regional conferences that have been arranged by the State Department of Health, and that will be held in different parts of the State during the next six months. The subject will be considered with special reference to the work of the Deputy State Health Officers, who in each county constitute the county board of health, the superintendents of schools, the local public health nurses, and other county and town officials.

The opening conference will be held in Frederick, Wednesday, February 10, and will bring together the representatives of Montgomery, Carroll, Howard and Frederick counties. The next will take place Wednesday, March 10, at Baltimore, and will be attended by representatives of county and town activities of Baltimore, Harford and Cecil counties. The conference in April will be held at Cumberland, Wednesday, April 7, for Garrett, Allegany and Washington counties. Upper Marlboro has been selected as the meeting place for the conference for Anne Arundel, Calvert, St. Mary's, Charles and Prince George counties, which will be held Wednesday, May 12.

The first of the Eastern Shore conferences will be held at Centerville, June 9, and will include Kent, Queen Anne, Talbot and Caroline counties. The conference for Dorchester, Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset counties, will be held at Salisbury on Wednesday, June 7.

Special attention will be given in the programs to the importance of full time county health service; to the work of the deputy State health officers, and to the activities of the public health nurses in each of the districts represented. The provisional program for the conferences shows that 10 full time health officers, that is Deputies or Assistant Deputy State health officers, are in charge of the work in the counties, with whom are associated 46 public health nurses. The nurses are stationed in the counties as follows: Allegany county leads with 6; Baltimore has 5. Anne Arundel and Washington each have 3. Carroll, Howard, Harford, Prince George, Talbot and Wicomico each have 2, and each of the remaining 23 has one public health nurse.

COMPULSORY VOTING

Serious consideration may well be given to a ballot reform inaugurated in Australia through the passage of a law penalizing the non-voter. A fine is imposed under this statute upon those who fail to perform the most important peace-time duty of citizenship—that of voting. Surely a government which has the power to conscript every citizen in time of war, has the right to penalize the citizen who fails to participate in elections which are the very basis of government by public opinion.

At the last general election in the United States only half of those of voting age and possessing the qualifications of legal voters, went to the polls. It may be argued that government will be better off if those not sufficiently interested to exercise the franchise should stay at home. On the other hand it is true that those who have some selfish interest at stake, or who are moved by fanaticism of some sort, more generally go to the polls than those who are inspired by no such destructive motives. It was discovered at the first election held under the Australian law penalizing the non-voter, that the conservative or constructive cause made far greater gains than the radical or destructive cause.

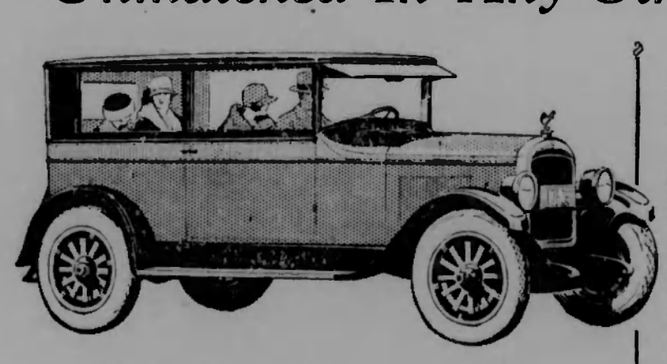
Good government is menaced not so much by the mistakes of the wrong headed or destructive elements, as by the indifference of citizens who, right at heart, are not stirred to action by the aggressive methods used in urging destructive and radical elements to the polls. It is always easier to stir up enthusiasm for a destructive than for a constructive program.

It is to be hoped that one or more of the states of the Union will lead the way in legislation requiring voters, under penalty, to register and to vote. The penalties thus assessed would pay the cost of elections. It would ensure the more representative character of election decisions. It would greatly lessen the cost to which political organizations are put in "getting out the vote;" voters would not have to be hauled to the polls. It would place a proper legal odium upon civic indifference.

CARELESS NIGHT PARKING IS REAL ROAD MENACE

THE congested condition of most highways these days is at times accentuated by failure of the motorist to use care in selecting his parking place. This is especially true at night. It is a disconcerting experience to make a sharp turn around a blind corner and find yourself bearing down on the tail-light of a parked automobile. Still more confusing is it to have a pair of bright headlights suddenly burst upon you as you round a corner, and, because of the fact that the car is not moving, you find it difficult to decide quickly what to do.

Whenever a car is parked, parking lights should be turned on. Occasionally roadside mishaps make a stop necessary at a point which is certain to cause inconvenience to other motorists, and many collisions have been caused by the blinding headlight glare from a parked car.



In the absence of other lighting facilities, careless motorists sometimes make tire repairs with their headlights as the source of illumination. This is a most dangerous practice, the moving figures before the headlights adding to the confusion. A more satisfactory and convenient light for roadside repairs, which causes no confusion to the drivers of passing cars, is a flashlight. This enables you to have the light where you want it and where you need it. It makes it unnecessary to wheel the tire to the front of the car and back again for inspection. Nor do you have to fumble with the jack and hunt for rim nuts in the dark.

Some flashlight cases are equipped with clips, so that they can be attached to the belt. This leaves both hands free, with plenty of illumination for repair work. The flashlight also comes in handy when backing across a narrow road so as to avoid the ditch, and in leaving the darkened garage after the car is put up for the night.

REBUILDING OF THE OLD "SENECA TRAIL" URGED

Garrett Countians As Well As West Virginians Interested In The Project.

To the Editor of The Republican.

We desire to call attention, through the columns of your splendid paper, to a matter of vast importance to the citizens of Garrett county which has been sadly neglected.

Six years ago there met at the Gnegy church a large group of citizens from various parts of Garrett county and from points in West Virginia. The purpose of this meeting was to bring pressure to bear upon the proper officials to use their influence to the end that that ortion of the road known as "The Seneca Trail" and extending from Gortner to the State boundary line at Gnegy church be graded and surfaced at the earliest possible convenience.

Up to the present time,however, the completion of this project has been delayed upon one pretext or another, resulting in a direct loss to the citizens of this county of many thousands of dollars not to speak of the inconvenience to the citizens of adjoining States.

"The Seneca Trail," it will be remembered is that road having its beginning at the intersection of said road with the National Highway at Keyser's Ridge and leading Southward via Accident and Oakland, crossing the State boundary line at Gnegy church; thence through Thomas, Parsons, Elkins, and other towns and finally connecting up with the great highway system of the South, thus affording a great North to South highway, and forming, as it will, the main artery of traffic in Garrett county, Maryland.

Pressure is now being brought to bear upon the proper officials and it is hoped that favorable action will be taken and that this summer will witness the completion of one of the most important road projects in the State of Maryland.

In the interest of good roads, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly,
ERNEST G. GNEGY.

Oakland also Has a Model Jail, Which Fact is Attested by Some Who are in a Position to Know.

The following is a copy of a letter which appeared in the Sunday Sun and is self explanatory:

To the Editor of The Sun—Sir: Having read an article in the Cumberland News today about Commissioner Supplee saying there are only three jails in Maryland fit for prisoners to sleep in, we should not forget the little town of Oakland, sixty-five miles west of Cumberland, Md. It has a small jail that holds about seventy-five prisoners and I guess Commissioner Supplee forgot all about a few Baltimore boys being sent to Oakland.

We are all very glad Baltimore City Jail is overcrowded. We will lay a bet with Mr. Supplee if he can find any jail in Maryland cleaner, healthier or which serve food any better than Oakland County Jail. Let us know; we would like to be sent there.

2702 MILES OF NEW ROADS IN SEVENTEEN YEARS

Growth in Maryland Is Due To Policy of Present Needs, Says Chairman.

Maryland has rounded out seventeen years of uninterrupted highway improvement. The record is one that is matched by no other State in the Union. Some States may have gone faster at times, but none has moved forward with such steady persistence.

In making a program f road work and sticking to it as made, Maryland is in position to challenge the national family as a whole.

The amount expended on the Maryland roads in 1925 was $6,500,000. New construction received $3,000,000, while repairs and improvements were carried on at a cost of $3,500,000.

The mileage increase for the year was represented by seventy-five miles of concrete, twenty-five miles of gravel and five miles of resurfaced macadam, aggregating 103 miles.

These are the figures furnished The Sunday Sun by John N. Mackal, chairman of the State Roads Commission.

"Did Not Just Happen."

The record prompted the chairman to dip into the past and size up the Maryland road program from its modern beginning, in 1908. Since that time, the new road construction of the State has produced a total of 2,702 miles.

"This growth did not just happer," explained Mr. Mackall. "It has been the result of adherence to a single policy—the policy of building roads to suit the traffic of the immediate present.

"There has been no attempt to build in anticipation of an unknown future. Each highway has been built as required at the moment. For future needs we have learned to depend upon widening the roads as originally constructed.

"This has saved much expense."

"The policy has been well worth while. It is a program that has kept us from creating too great strain on the taxpayers. To this factor I attribute the entire success of the State program of road improvement."

"Not All So Fortunate."

"Not all the states have been so fortunate. Elsewhere I have seen heavy expenditures along the line of building for the needs of the future.

"The plan does not always work. Heavy expenditures for the construction of roads exceeding immediate requirements have been followed by vigorous reaction on the part of taxpayers. Voters have refused to sanction further outlays and the result has been interrupted development.

"This is a complication from which Maryland has been altogether free.

"Take a glimpse at the actual working of our policy. Under our system of accounting and practice, the maintenance fund cares for the widening of roadways as well as for ordinary repairs. This makes it possible for us to widen highways out of annual income, instead of being forced to charge the cost to capital account, as would he necessary if we attempted. at the outset, to build for future requirements.

Operation of Policy.

"The year just ended gives figures which illustrate the operations of this policy. In the matter of maintenance we have proceeded along the line of expecting the motor vehicle, as the chief user of the highways, to make reasonable contribution toward the cost of efficient upkeep. This is accomplished through the collection of registration fees and the 2-cent-a-gallon tax on gasoline. In 1925 the State received from these sources $4,861,400 up to a time near the close of the twelve month period.

"From this amount came deductions for the cost of maintaining the Automobile Commissioner's office and for the expense of the Traffic Court, with a further deduction of $430,000 paid into the city treasury of Baltimore.

"These charges left us with a maintenance fund of $3,500,000, from which we were able to provide widening of roadways as required."

Individuality is found in the State's policy of maintenance as well as in the program of construction. Chairman Mackall points out that Maryland is the one State in the Union which protects its highways by a system of rigid regulation of the loads that may be hauled.

In this line of activity the authorities have pursued a policy which is credited with important results.

"Prevention of wear and tear Is an essential factor in adequate maintenance," said Chairman Mackall. "The highways must not be subjected to loads which exceed their carrying capacity.

"To accomplish this protection, Maryland maintains permanent scales at fixed points along important thoroughfares. The truck that looks suspiciously heavy is piloted to the scales. If the weighing prosecc establishes the presence of excessive weight, the surplus load is removed from the truck before the vehicle is permitted to proceed.

"In this way we make certain that the roads are not subjected to greater strain than that for which they were built.

"In 1918, during the period of railroad congestion and freight embargoes, the whole country suffered from highway destruction through the prevalence of trucks that were heavily overloaded. In Maryland this condition is now unknown."

PYTHIAN BANQUET

Annual Event Will Be Held To Commemorate Founding of The Order.

The committee in charge of the banquet announce that plans have been formulated and arrangements are well under way to make the banquet a success and worthy of the purpose for which it is to be held—to celebrate the founding of the order of Knights of Pythias sixty-two years ago. The date is held in high esteem by all true Pythians. The committee also wishes to announce that a slight departure from the heretofore prevalent custom of it being a stag affair. They have decided that the ladies are entitled to special recognition, and their presence is necessary to make this event what it should be. Every Knight is requested that he be accompanied by his "ladie fayre."

Let us deviate slightly from our topic and interrogate ourselves concerning the ladies. Have they not had a part in contributing toward the success of the Knights of Pythias? Have they not remained at home while the husbands and fathers carried on the fraternal affairs, and during team rehearsals, who kept the home fires burning? Do the members of the fair sex play an important part in the spiritual, social, civic and economic life of the community? Such a mighty shout of aye should ascend as to reverberate throughout the hills of Garrett county. Hence, aside from being a Pythian celebration, it is also planned to give the ladies an evening of entertainment. A palatable menu is promised, while an enjoyable evening is assured. The membership will be instructed by letter how to make reservations. Be sure to answer promptly when you receive your letter.

The rank of Page was conferred upon a class of candidates last Friday night. Dr. Henry W. McComas could not be present to give his lecture as announced, while Bro. Edward P. Kahl was confined to his bed with an attack of illness, so that we were denied the pleasure of hearing either of these speakers. Dr. McComas expects to deliver his lecture on Friday night, February 5th.

Fulogies seemed to be in order at the last session of lodge. One valiant Knight was so affected by complimentary remarks that he forgot his lunch-box. The Good Fellowship Club wishes to express their thanks for the exeeflent luncheon he so generously served. PUBLICITY COMMITTEE.

Rev. A. J. Torrey, who was rector of St. Matthew's P. E. church in Oakland for the past year or more, conducted his final service as such on last Sunday morning, at which time members of Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of Oakland, attended in a body. The scouts were dressed in their uniforms and presented a fine appearance. Until recently Rev. Torrey was scoutmaster of the troop as well as having organized it. The presence of the youths at the final service conducted in the local church was a fine testimonial of the regard in which he is held by the Scouts. He leaves this week to take up other lines of church work in New York.

The Republican completed the reprinting of the three prize essays on the subject, "Ways In Which a Parent-Teacher Association Can Serve Our Schools and Community," in pamphlet form for the Board of Education and which will be distributed by that body to teachers parert-teacher associations and others interested in school activities in the county. Dawson, cashier of the First National Bank of Oakland, and first published in the columns of The Republican in its issue of December 3rd last. The pamphlet comprises sixteen pages and cover. Copies may be had by applying at the office of the School Board.

The Oakland Public Library Needs Your Help Now.

A food sale for the benefit of the Oakland Library will be held in the store of F. A. Smouse, Saturday, the 13th inst., at 2:00 o'clock p. m. The Library needs help. All those interested are urged to make the sale a success. The entire community should be interested in the welfare of the Library and yet comparatively few help in its support.

The Library Board is coming before the public to ask for a more permanent method of financing, through a canvass for one dollar memberships, these to be paid annually.

Suppose the Library was compelled to close its doors for the lack of funds? The children would miss it more than the grown folks. Shall we not save it for the sake of the children who are forming a taste for good reading through the use of the Library?

Mr. and Mrs. E. Z. Tower returned to Oakland Sunday night from a brief visit to New Orleans, La. Mr. Tower is somewhat improved in health as a result of his trip south.

The Oakland Public Library is in need of funds to maintain it as a going enterprise of benefit to the youth of the community. The library was established on a small scale many years ago and with very little outside help it was operated almost entirely by voluntary contributions from less than a dozen men and women who saw the possibilities for service in the growing generations at that time and grasped the opportunity to serve faithfully. Later control was taken over by others and the work has been carried on with varying success. The Oakland library is an asset of more than passing value to the community and it would be an everlasting shame to the good name of the community if is should he compelled to cease to function. All will have an opportunity to help by patronizing the food sale advertised in The Republican today or by making a contribution in cash to the fund necessary to keep the library operating.

JESUS HEALS AND SAVES A BLIND MAN. —John 9:1-41.

I am the light of the world: He that followeth me shall not walk in the darkness, but shall have the light of life. —John 8:12.

THE BYSTANDER

John had been preaching on the Light of the World, now there is the selected illustration of the transformation in a darkened world by its coming into the life of an individual. Just now the power to pardon vested in our Governors is under fire because of its sometimes indiscriminate use by a Blease or a Ferguson. Jesus seems to have been rigorously selective in the making of cures. The porches were packed at Bethesda but only one walked away in full vigor. There were many sick but the cured can be recorded. Blindness is the most common of afflictions in the East, you can count on your fingers those whose eyes were opened by Jesus. The cripple at the Beautiful Gate was comrade to this blind beggar but Jesus passed him by. "He saw a man"—character seems to have been the secret of our Lord's selecting. Others saw a beggar and the disciples discerned a problem but beyond both Jesus sensed manhood. No disguise of rags could dim His clear seeing of what lay beneath and it is significant that in enough of the healed there is witness to the quality of life to give an inkling of the purpose of our Lord. He was a man-maker first and built bodies only to minister to that inner person. God could abolish sickness now but have we reached the place where we can administer universal health? Certainly the witness of 10,000,000 crosses raised above the heads of the physically fit is proof of it. Certainly the 12,000 annual folk crushed by the cars each year can not be counted nor the 125,000 injured in our industries—all from the lists of the strong. In response to the question of the disciples Jesus pronounced this man an innocent bystander. It was not any sin in a past existence, nor a bad strain in his heredity that had caused his trouble. He did not say that sin was not at the root of it but it was that of others who were no more intimately linked with the man himself than is the typhoid victim from a water supply tainted because an inefficient inspector had been appointed thru a political deal. Nor did He charge it up to God. Change the punctuation—John did not use any—and see the result. "Neither did this man sin nor his parents. But that the works of God should be made manifest in him, we must work the works of him that sent Me, etc."

THE MAN

The man that Jesus had seen beneath the trappings of rags and beggary emerged into the light. And he was good to see tho he was a surprise to the beholders. They could not believe their eyes for they were blind see-ers as Jesus later labeled them. And it was the man they did not recognize. If he had come back still a mendicant they would have welcomed him with open arms and have piled his cup with coins. Probably he would have been offered a job among the keepers of cows in the Temple courts. They knew how to deal with beggars. There was no discrediting the cure, there were witnesses enough to make that sure. But it had been done on the Sabbath and they could not see the cure for the crime. My, but there were hurrying messengers and hasty consultations! What did Jesus mean any way by coming where He had no business and raising all this confusion? So unable to invalidate the cure they ordered the man to repudidate the Cur-er. There was the hiss of a whip lash as they did it for they threatened to excommunicate him, to cast him out of the Synagog. It was no child's toy either for it meant social ostracism that would make him a man without a country, a social leper who must be shunned and with whom no dealings were to be held. It hissed and it could sting—they knew what the beggar would do; but Jesus had seen a man. And it was the man who stood straight and strong and seeing, and flung their words back with a bit of biting sarcasm mingled with them. He had never seen Jesus but he had felt His touch that loosed his bonds to darkness in every form, material, political or churchly; and he would stand by his Helper. The whole Sanhedrin could not suppress him. The whip might bite but his voice would not be stilled. Like Henly his head might be bloody but it would be unbowed.

THE INSTITUTION

Jesus was lighting up that old world wonderfully. The nominance of the institution that ultimately wrought His own death was being illumined. The family went down under it. Even mother love stepped aside from her boy at its behest. Jesus migh be able to open his eyes but they needed the money he had been making. Maybe they had another boy who could beg and the Sanhedrin handed out the permits. But in any choice between a holy institution and a holy Man, the Man tho He be the Son of God, must get out of the way. The laws it had made were not open to investigation or criticism even in the interest of folk. The outery of the liquor crowd holds a suspicion of profits in its noise. Personal liberty is such a holy thing that all else must be suppressed. But the light is shining and some eyes are seeing. When the church comes to be merely an institution it is time for it to go out of business. Loyalty to the truth is the crown of the Christian. Devotion to an institution as an institution is the device of the crowd and a self-seeking crowd at that.

THE CHRIST

That must have been a great day in this man's history when he walked alone with no person daring to approach within six feet of him under peril of a similar sentence and suddenly found some one beside him. What a rush of warm feeling would stir every bit of emotion within him at the contact that had been missed for days. Even his mother held aloof. Somebody cared enough for him and his loyalty to truth to be willing to stand with him even tho it meant outcast-hood also. No wonder he worshipped this Man who had removed an evil and now willingly shared a condition that was intolerable. When the Church of Jesus follows His example there will be no longer a need to question the attitude of the masses toward it. Sharing the shame of the oppressed, the degradation of the outcast, the pain of the overborne, will find the same bowing in worshipful wonder on the part of those whose lot is shared. That explains the hold of Jesus upon the heart of the world thru the centuries tho many find Him handicapped by the civilization that we attempt to glorify by calling it Christian.

BAYARD

The sport-loving folks of Bayard had the opportunity Thursday night of witnessing a double bill of basket ball played on the local floor. The Elk Garden high school girls and the Davis high school boys were both here. The Bayard high school girls added another laurel to their name by defeating the Elk Garden visitors by a score of 21 to 6. Barger and Dulin were the chief cagers for Bayard,each having five goals to their credit, while the guarding of Curry and Speicher was very commendable. The Bayard players were Dulin, Barger, Dilgard, DeWitt, Speicher and the Elk Garden line-up was composed of Norman, Willis, Kilroy, Jones, A. Burdock. The substitute player was M. Burdock.

The game between the Bayard and Davis boys was hotly contested, Davis holding the lead until the very last quarter, when the Bayard team staged a strong rally and won by a score of 8 to 7. The playing of Henry on the Davis team was spectaculer, being the fastest man that has ever played on the local floor, in the opinion of many. Best and Kisner played their usual good game and all around good playing marked the game at every stage. The Bayard team was composed of Rexroad, Raymond Kisner, R. Best, Winters and Swartz; substitutes, Ray Kisner for Rexroad. The Davis players were Henry, W. Reese, Harper, R. Reese, Arnold.

PEERLESS

Miss Mildred Harvey has been on the honor roll for the past five months of school which means she has been neither absent nor tardy.

This correspondent has been asked to announce publicly that "Short" Wilson put in a full week at the mine last week, which is something very rare and unusual. Good luck to him; may he keep it up, is my wish.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

The occasional zero weather that we had during the month of January gave us a splendid crop of ice on the lake and the large ice house by the lake side and other smaller houses in the Park have been filled to capacity. Thus far only two carloads have been shipped away. The Baltimore and Ohio Railway Company now makes ice for consumption along its line, so the Park will not participate in harvesting its product at this source in the future. The revenue derived by the sale of ice to the railway company in former years approximated thousands of dollars.

Rev. Henry E. Friend is quite ill at his home in the Park. His condition has been critical for several weeks. He was recently visited by his son, Mr. Lloyd Friend, of New York, and at present another son, Mr. Lemuel Friend, of Morgantown, is with him.

Mr. Edmund Harvey, who sold his farm along Deep Creek to the hydro-electric company, is now a resident of the Park. We trust that he will make this his permanent home.

DEER PARK

Little Sophia Welch, daughter of Mrs. Laura Welch and of the late Carl Welch, died from an attack of membranous croup at her home here on Saturday morning at an early hour. The funeral was conducted on Monday by Rev. Brown. The mother of the child has the profoundest sympathy of the people of Deer Park and community. Interment of the remains was made in the Oakland cemetery.

Revival services in the M. E. church here will be continued through this week with Revs. Brown and Anderson in charge. An invitation is extended to everyone to attend.

For Comfort's Sake

The Better Buick offers every ordinary motoring comfort, and many that are exclusively Buick: Easier starting—a new, high-speed starting motor does it. Smooth running from the go—Automatic Heat Control is an exclusive Buick feature. Easier steering—Buick's 5-control-surface steering gear is the most expensive and most efficient type today.

For Safety's Sake

His word is his bond!

A "personal guarantee" means very little to you unless you know the man who makes it.

Ninety per cent of the things bought for your home are selected by the lady member of the firm. She is the purchasing agent. Most men admit that she is a capable buyer, and the reason is this: She must be shown — convinced by proof — that an article is what she needs and is worth the price!

For that reason, she sees the advantage of dealing with a local merchant — a man whose "personal guarantee of satisfaction" means just what it says.

She knows that what he advertises in this paper is entitled to her consideration. Because she has confidence in her neighbor—the local dealer—she can safely invest the family funds in what he guarantees.

RUSSIAN PEASANTS FLOCK TO SEE GEMS

Gaze in Wonder at $250,000,000 Collection.

Moscow. — Russian workers and peasants are flocking by the scores of thousands to enjoy the dazzling splendor of the crown jewels of the Romanoffs, now the property of every poor citizen of this Communist republic. This collection of gems, the estimated value of which is $250,000,000, has been turned into a source of revenue by the Soviet government, which has placed it on exhibition at the Soviet trade union house in Moscow, formerly the Club of the Nobles.

The regal collection represents the accumulated treasure of ten different Russian royal families, and includes crowns, scepters, coronets, emblems, tiaras, diadems, necklaces, bracelets, rings and gems of many other kinds.

Charge Admission.

The general public is charged an admission fee of $1, but members of the trade unions and Communist organizations pay only 25 cents. The collection has proved a strong drawing card to the workers and peasants, who manifest the deepest wonder and admiration as they stand spellbound before the sealed glass cases.

Extraordinary precautions are taken against theft. Armed soldiers are stationed throughout the building.

The object of greatest curiosity among the gems is the huge imperial crown of all the Russias, a magnificent dome-like patriarchal miter, containing more than 4,000 carats of diamonds of the first water and carrying on its summit a cross of diamonds and rubies of exquisite beauty, the whole valued at $52,000,000.

Next in interest comes the coronet worn by the slain Empress Alexandra, perhaps the most beautiful mass of diamonds ever brought together in a single ornament. Another object of great attention is the famous imperial scepter of power used by the last czar, which is surmounted by the world-famed Orloff diamond, as large as a bisected egg and containing 189 carats. This slender, graceful, emblem is valued by the Bolsheviki at $30,000,000.

"Shah" Diamond.

The "Emblem of the Imperial Realm," a globular object of gold surmounted by a cross of diamonds, sapphires and rubies, and valued at $24,000,000, comes next in interest. Among the single unmounted gems, the so-called "Shah" diamond, of 89 carats and appraised by the Soviet authorities at $14,700,000, is probably the most striking. It is a unique memorial of the respect entertained for Imperial Russia by her Mohammedan neighbors in the days before the Bolsheviki took power, the great stone being a gift to the emperor of Russia by the shah of Persia.

Cannibals Discuss Proper Methods to Cook a Man

London.—Sir Hubert Murray, governor of Papua, the British island possession north of Australia, in which cannibalism still is practiced, has just published a new book, "Papua of Today," in which he gives a sidelight on cannibalistic cooking.

While Sir Hubert was investigating a case of cannibalism the question of cooking methods arose. One Papuan witness objected to the testimony of another native, because, he said, "Jasi Jasi is a poor cook."

"If you cook a man on an open fire I agree that he will be tough," this witness continued, "but cooked on hot stones and covered with leaves the stringiest old man will be tender. Why should he be any tougher than a bush pig?"

Sir Hubert is the brother of Sir Gilbert Murray, noted as a classical scholar.

Daughter of Midgets to Be Normal Size

Los Angeles, Cal.—The child of a midget mother and father, brought into the world by a Caesarian operation, Norma Louise Fox, three days old, is reported as doing nicely at the Osteopathic Sanitarium hospital.

Perhaps the most remarkable thing about it, Dr. Norman Sprague, house physician at the hospital, said was the baby at birth weighed six pounds and three ounces and would grow to normal height and weight despite her midget parents. Doctor Sprague said that midgets were caused by glandular disarrangement, and investigation has proved the baby normal in every respect.

The parents of the child are both circus performers, and both are slightly more than three feet in height.

School Head Quits as Dance Protest

Meriden, Conn.—Because jazz music of today's dances tends to demoralize boys and girls, David Gibbs has resigned as superintendent of the Meriden schools. He handed in his resignation after the board of education agreed to a trial dance at the school.

The board's rules provide that no dances shall be held in the school without the sanction of the principal and superintendent. Doctor Gibbs believes there has been no change in dancing conditions since three years ago when high school dances were stopped because of unruly conduct. He says that in a near-by town the janitor collected many empty whisky bottles after a high school dance recently. Doctor Gibbs has held his office 15 years.

REAL CHINA DRAGON AMERICA WOULD KILL

Toll on Goods in Transit Is Cause of Trouble.

Washington.—American representatives have laid before the great powers and China a proposal to free China from foreign restrictions on tariff levies in return for abolition of the "likin."

"The real dragon of modern China, is the 'likin,' in the opinion of foreign traders and many Chinese," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C. "The abolition of a similar tax by the Constitution of the United States helped save the Union. The Americans at Peking may be doing for China what George Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Franklin and others did for the colonies at Philadelphia in 1787. It was not until 1870 that the 'likin' was abolished within the German Union.

Taxes Levied in Transit.

"The nearest equivalent which English has for the Chinese word 'likin' is 'per cent.' The Chinese term means 'per mille,' that is, a tax apportioned according to thousands. It has taken on a different meaning in the course of years until now a 'likin' station is known as a 'squeeze' station. Likin stations are toll posts where taxes are levied on goods in transit. While some of the collections made at the 'squeeze' stations go to the central government, most of the revenue falls into the hands of the provincial governors or the district mandarins.

"From Shanghai to Soochow it is 84 miles and goods going from one city to the other have to pass eight likin stations. At the first and last stations all goods are dutiable; at the rest all goods must be examined, and there is scarcely a single article that does not in that transit pay at least three taxes.

"If a parallel system were set up on the New York-Philadelphia highway, all the motor trucks would be compelled to stop at customs stations in New York, Hoboken, Newark, Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Princeton, Trenton and Philadelphia. At each station the entire contents of the truck would be ransacked and the drivers would be compelled to pay a certain sum. Obviously the round run of a few hours would lengthen into a day or two. The expense of tax and time would put a burden on business which would be shifted to the consumer. In the end commerce by truck would be smothered. This cycle is complete in China where foreign goods commonly penetrate only a brief distance from the free treaty ports, and even domestic trade dribbles along in anemic fashion.

Likin Is Not Old.

"Unlike most Chinese creations, the likin is not old. It was invented about 1850 to raise money for the support of the army suppressing the Taiping rebellion. Its success as a source of cash soon recommended it to governors of various towns and provinces. These officials are always pushed to acquire personal and civic finances. They knew as well as anyone that in the past money which went to Peking stayed in Peking. Likin offered a satisfactory answer.

"Continued existence of likin recognizes that China is a collection of semi-independent states such as the United States and Germany were when in embryo.

"The problem of the likin has been up before international councils before. Agreements have been made that foreign traders could purchase through transit tickets for their goods at the point of departure which would free shipments from likin toll. But even in the recent meetings of the conference there have been reports that provincial war lords have ignored these pacts. They were charged with levying double and triple likin to support their armies."

Indians Break Rule; Ute Tribe Mourns

Durango, Colo.—Attorney Barry Sullivan, a Harvard law graduate, was killed along with his wife, when their automobile, driven by their daughter, skidded from a mountain roadway near Durango, in southwestern Colorado. Mr. Sullivan had been legal counsellor and an adopted member of the five confederated Ute tribes of Utah and Colorado for more than twenty-five years, sitting in many of their important councils and guiding them both as a lawyer and friend.

Sullivan's tragic death was a severe blow to the Indians and they broke all tribal customs and traditions by attending his funeral in full war regalia and in participating in the services at the graves of Mr. Sullivan and his wife. So far as can be learned this is the first public funeral of a white man in which the Ute tribes have taken part.

Stray Dog Finds Oil in Old Abandoned Well

Muskogee, Okla.—Furious digging by a stray dog on the Katherine Lee Oil company's lease near here led to the discovery of oil in a well that had been abandoned for 11 years.

W. R. Sommerville, president of the oil company, was attracted by the actions of the dog, and upon investigation found a plank covering a 10-inch casing standing almost full of oil. The well had been plugged. Actual measurement showed 1,425 feet of oil in the well, which will be equipped for pumping.

The dog fled, and has not returned for the reward that awaits him.

SNAPS FISH AT HOME IN OCEAN

Bartsch Tells Experience Off Florida Coast.

Washington.—The ocean floor, the world's last great unexplored region, will soon have its secrets revealed by motion pictures, according to Dr. Paul Bartsch of the United States national museum, who has made an underwater cinema hunt for fishes among the coral grottos off the coast of Florida.

With his specially constructed waterproof camera he secured hundreds of feet of record of submarine life and spent as much as five and a half hours at a time walking about the sea bottom, 20 feet below the surface.

It is at this comparatively shallow depth, he says, that life is most varied and abundant, since the corals and other sea animals build in the teeth of the breakers, where the backward and forward flow of the water brings fresh supplies of the microscopic plants and animals which form their food. However, next season he plans to descend to greater depths with another camera better adapted to catch the slowly moving fish as they silently glide out of the blue haze which fills the coral-columned aisles of their submarine retreats.

The camera man, in his diving helmet, has little to fear, Doctor Bartsch records, in invading these underwater regions. Sharks are sometimes seen, he admits, but adds that "sharks are always gentlemen." In taking his recent film, however, when he first saw that terror of the coast, the barracuda, instead of leveling his camera, he instinctively snatched up his tripod and prepared to battle for his life as the big fish swam around him, mildly curious at the silvery bubbles rising from his diving helmet. The next day Doctor Bartsch so far conquered his instinctive fear of this fish as to secure a good picture of two barracudas as they circled around him.

Horse in Roosevelt Statue Starts Criticism

Portland, Ore.—Criticism voiced by Oswald West, ex-governor and well-known horse lover, that Theodore Roosevelt is poorly mounted in the equestrian statue, presented to the city by Dr. Henry Waldo Coe, found some support among horsemen.

The question of the horse's appearance and naturalness of its pose, however, was not regarded as particularly open to attack by either art critics or horse lovers, who rallied unanimously almost to the support of the conception portrayed by A. Phimister Proctor, sculptor, as a work of art.

In short, the only real point in the strictures leveled at the statue by Mr. West, as borne out by other authorities, is that the choice of the type of steed was unwise rather than unartistic or unnatural.

Matt McDougall, president of the Portland Hunt club and authority on horses, supported the opinion of those who regard the type of horse chosen for Roosevelt's mount as unfortunate. However, Mr. McDougall criticized in the same terms the steeds suggested by Mr. West, saying he was prepared to brand the five-gaited horse mentioned by Mr. West as entirely unsuited to the strenuous horsemanship of Roosevelt.

Soldier Lives Only by Being Cut Into Pieces

Lausanne, Switzerland.—In a hospital here surgeons are slowly cutting a man to pieces to save his life. The man is Albert Froddevaux, forty-six, formerly a soldier of fortune in the French Foreign Legion. In 48 operations in 13 years he has lost his fingers, toes, hands feet, legs and arms. Yet he cheerfully clings to life.

The man is suffering from symmetric gangrene, which is thought to be incurable. He will live until his vital organs are attacked, surgeons explain.

Uses Artificial Fog to Save Crops From Frost

New York.—The artificial fog invented by a Scandinavian scientist, Prof. A. V. Jernberg, for military purposes is being put to peace-time use in Norway to protect crops from frost. The American Chemical society received this information from a correspondent in Horten, Norway. The experimenter also said that brick manufacturers were planning experiments with the man-made fog in their drying houses as frost is detrimental to newly made brick.

Famous Cody Diamond Vanishes From Vault

Greeley, Colo.—The famous Cody diamond, said to have been given to Col. William F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," by a European monarch, has disappeared.

The setting, which held a six and one-half carat diamond, was discovered to hold nothing but a piece of glass, by S. J. Loney, collector for the county treasurer's office. The substitution was discovered during an appraisal of the assets of the defunct Northern State bank here.

The gem was supposed to have laid untouched in a safety deposit box in the bank since Cody Boal, nephew of the Indian fighter, put it up as security on a loan several years ago.

BITTINGER

Last week brought us a flash of real winter. On Thursday, when the wind blew with the proportions of a gale, snow fell and the mercury went to 15 degrees below zero. Saturday was milder and on Sunday rain fell, taking much of the snow away.

C. M. Friend, principal of our village school, spent Saturday and Sunday with his relatives at Friendsville, returning to this vilage Sunday evening, accompanied by his wife and little son.

Mrs. E. S. Brenneman and children and Mrs. Clark Brenneman and children spent Saturday visiting their sister, Mrs. George Yommer, of near Jennings, and also their mother, Mrs. David Miller, who is spending some time at Mrs. Yommer's.

At the regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Bittinger Mutual Telephone Company held here on last Saturday afternoon much important business was transacted and new officers were elected as follows: President, Earl Stanton; vice-president, Peter Opal; secretary and treasurer, E. S. Brenneman. The next meeting of the stockholders will be on the last Saturday in June, 1926, at 7:30 p. m.

The bad condition of the roads made it necessary for Rev. E. E. Campbell, of the local Lutheran church, to reach his appointments for last Sunday to walk the distances intervening.

Alfred Mason, of Meadow Mountain, was a business caller in Bittinger on Saturday last.

VOLUME 50. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, FEBRUARY 11, 1926. NUMBER 51.

REV. H. E. FRIEND, SOLDIER AND PREACHER, PASSES

After An Illness of Four Years at His Home in Mountain Lake Park.

Rev. Henry E. Friend died at his home in Mountain Lake Park, Md., Friday, February 5th, 1926, at 10:00 o'clock a. m., after an illness of four years, the greater portion of which time he was bedfast. The cause of his death was arteris sclerosis. He was a patient sufferer through it all.

Mr. Friend was born at Sang Run, Garrett county, December 31st, 1835, and was the son of Israel and Dorcas Willison Friend, pioneers of Garrett county. On December 27th, 1860, he was married to Sarah F. Blackburn at Altamont, Md., by the Rev. Benjamin Hickley. To this union fourteen children were born, ten of whom survive: L. E., of Morgantown, W. Va.; G. B. M. and W. S., of near Oakland; Register of Wills E. E. Friend, of Mountain Lake Park; Ray C., Richwood, W. Va.; Charles W., of New York City; Clifford H., of Moscow, Idaho; James W., of Friendsville, Md.; Miss Sudie, a daughter, who resided at home with her father, and Mrs. J. Arthur DeWitt, of Hoyes.

For more than seventy-five years Mr. Friend was allied with the Methodist Episcopal church, having become a member of the church in early boyhood. When quite a young man he left his home at Sang Run and went to Altamont, Garrett county, where he took up the trade of shoemaking. He enlisted in the Union Army on August 12th, 1862, and served until the close of hostilities between the States. He was attached to the Army of the Potomac, Co. D, Third Maryland Regiment. After being discharged from the service of his country he returned to Altamont and again took up his trade where he remained a few years, going to a point near Hoyes in or about the year 1870, where he started farming.

On February 7th, 1871, he received his license as an exhorter in the M. E. church from the Rev. E. C. Woodruff, and in August of the same year was licensed as a local preacher at Blooming Rose, Md., by Rev. J. W. Webb, then presiding elder of this section. He was ordained deacon by Bishop E. R. Ames at Grafton, W. Va., March 25th, 1877, and was ordained as an elder by Bishop Willard F. Mallalieu at Morgantown, W. Va., September 26th, 1886. He served a number of charges in the West Virginia Conference as a regular minister and was retired in 1904 but served as a supply after that time.

Mr. Friend was a member of the first Board of County Commissioners in Garrett county, having been elected in 1873, at the time the county was created, along with Elisha Umbel and George W. Blocher, the latter now nearing the age of one hundred years, and being the sole survivor.

Mrs. Friend died on February 14, 1914, and the same year Mr. Friend, with his daughter, Miss Sudie Friend, moved to Mountain Lake Park where he resided until his death.

The funeral services were held at the home on Sunday. February 7th, by his pastor, Rev. R. Aspinall, assisted by Rev. Dr. Archibald Moore and Rev. Wm. M. Shultz. Interment was made in the cemetery at Hoyes.

During his illness of four years Mr. Friend was devotedly cared for and nursed by his daughter. Her devotion to his wellbeing and anticipation of his desires and willingness on her part to comply with his every wish was beautiful to see and some time, somewhere, she will surely receive her reward.

Mr. Friend lived a long and useful life and will be greatly missed, but he left a goodly heritage; his passing is regretted; his influence during his lifetime will live on and bear much fruit.

MRS. ISAAC D. NEWMAN

Mrs. Sarah Permelia Stewart Newman, aged 82 years, 10 months and 9 days, widow of the late Dr. Isaac D. Newman, for many years a practicing physician of Oakland, died at the residence of her son, Mr. Chas. J. Newman, near Oakland, Tuesday morning at an early hour, the cause of her death being infirmities due to advancing years. The funeral will take place this morning from the home where services will be conducted by her pastor, Rev. Dr. Archibald Moore, of St. Paul's M. E. church. The deceased made her home with her son for the past three years and was ill three weeks. She was the daughter of a Quaker named Charles Stewart, who left Philadelphia and settled at what is now known as Stewartown, near Morgantown, for whom the town was named. The family came to Oakland in 1881. Dr. Newman died in December, 1905. Mrs. Newman is survived by her son and several grandchildren.

WILLIAM G. WHEELER.

William Gay Wheeler, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Luther Wheeler, of Deer Park, died at the Western Maryland Hospital, Cumberland, yesterday morning at an early hour of blood poison, which had set up in his neck following an infection. The deceased was aged forty years and is survived by a sister, Mrs. Wilfred Chadderton, of Deer Park, and one brother, Mr. Frank Wheeler, of Pittsburgh. Mr. Wheeler's father died on Friday, January 29th, of pneumonia. The deceased was taken to the Cumberland institution on Friday of last week. The body was received in Deer Park this morning and the funeral is to occur Saturday afternoon at two o'clock from the Union church. Mr. Wheeler was a Mason and a member of the Deer Park Lutheran church. His entire life had been devoted to the care of his parents.

An Appeal In Behalf of the Oakland Library Brings Results

Last Thursday The Republican, in a short paragraph placed in the local columns, made an appeal for funds to support the Oakland Public Library, and in a brief manner outlined the history of library and its management. This paragraph fell under the eye of our good friend, Mr. Robert Hazlett, of Wheeling, West Va., who delights to come to Oakland with his family every year to spend the summer. Mr. Hazlett, appreciating the good influence good reading has upon the mind of the youths of the nation, responded to the appeal in a substantial manner by sendin his check for $15.00, accompanied by the following letter:

DOLLAR SAVINGS & TRUST CO.
Robert Hazlett, President.
Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 8, 1926.

Mr. Benj. H. Sincell,
Editor The Republican,
My dear Mr. Sincell:—

Responsive to your appeal in the last issue of The Republican, please find enclosed the subscriptions of "Bob" and "Jim" and Catherine of five dollars each to the Oakland Library fund.

Very sincerely yours,
ROBERT HAZLETT.

The Republican will take great pleasure in receiving other subscriptions for this fund which will be duly acknowledged by the treasurer, Mr. J. M. Jarboe.

The Library should receive the support of every individual residing in the community, for its influence on the rising generation cannot now be computed. Send in your checks, it matters not whether they be large or small; they will be greatly appreciated not only by the library officials but by the people of the entire community having access to the library.

Take No Chances With Red Clover Seed This Spring.

A circular letter sent out by the University of Maryland, department of Cooperative Extension Work, says that—

Unless farmers can be sure of the source of their red clover seed this spring, they had better plant a mixture of alsike clover and alfalfa, according to J. E. Metzger, Agronomist for the University of Maryland Experiment Station.

There have been so many failures with the red clover crop in recent years that rather exhaustive trials have been conducted by many State experiment stations in cooperation with the United States Department of Agriculture to locate the cause of the trouble, says Mr. Metzger.

Recent reports on these tests, in which seed from domestic and foreign sources was used, show that red clover seed produced in Tennessee and Ohio gave slightly better crops than Maryland seed. Minnesota grown seed however, produced less than half as much as seed from nearby sources. In fact, Maryland red clover seed produced as well in Michigan and Ohio as seed grown in those States.

The tests make it clear, says Mr. Metzger, that Maryland farmers should buy red clover seed grown in northern States and from foreign sources only as a last resort. Seed from Maryland or nearby states is recommended whenever it is available. If it cannot be obtained from these sources, a mixture of alsike clover and alfalfa is suggested as likely to be more satisfactory than poor quality red clover.

RALPH ANDERSON PLEADS GUILTY TO P. O. ROBBERY

Admits In Federal Court, Baltimore, He Aided Negro in Swanton Hold-Up 3 Months Ago

When the case of Ralph Anderson, aged 26, of Swanton, was called for trial in the United States Court for the District of Maryland at Baltimore on Monday, the traverser entered a plea of guilty before Judge Morris A. Soper, who was presiding, to being an accessory in the attempt made about three months ago to rob the postoffice at Swanton, sixteen miles east of Oakland, on the Seventeen-mile grade. Anderson was placed under arrest as a suspect by Harry D. Schmidt, chief of police of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, to whom he later made a confession of his part in the attempted robbery of the office.

Sheriff Guy O. Yutzy, of Garrett county, assisted by Deputy Sheriff W. D. Casteel, of Oakland, arrested Henderson Hall, colored, the morning following the attempt to rob the office. Hall had been badly wounded by Postmaster Joseph F. Friend, when he was found in the office by the postmaster. Hall escaped from the building, however, and was found lying along the railway tracks some distance from the scene. He was brought to the Oakland Jail and the following morning was taken into a Cumberland hospital where he was treated for his injuries for some time and then removed as a Federal prisoner to the Cumberland Jail where he still remains. It is said that he has been paralyzed as a result of the wound he received, the bullet from Mr. Friend's revolver entering his eye and piercing his brain.

Mr. Friend, in the battle following Hall's discovery in the act of robbing the post office also received a wound from a bullet fired by Hall, which entered his face and destroyed the sight of one eye.

Anderson lived with his parents in a cabin located some distance up on the mountain from Swanton and in his alleged confession to the Baltimore and Ohio officer, declared that he met Hall on the day preceding the attempted robbery and that they both plotted to loot the post office. Anderson said he acted as "lookout" by remaining on watch on the outside of the building while Hall climbed thru a window to do the robbing.

It is only problematical when Hall will be tried, The condition of the man is said to be such that he is unable to express his desires, hence he cannot be brought into court and tried on the charge standing against him. What disposition to make of the man is a source of more or less worry to the officials having charge of him.

DWELLING AT LOCH LYNN DESTROYED MONDAY NOON

Dwelling of Mrs. Irving Deems Burned During Absence of the Family.

Monday at noon the Oakland fire department responded to an alarm of fire coming from Loch Lynn Heights, opposite Mountain Lake Park, with the chemical apparatus, the fire originating in the home of Mrs. Irving Deems while the family was absent, and presumably from a gas stove which had been allowed to burn. The fire had spread to a considerable portion of the house before it was discovered with the result that some of the furnishings were consumed along with the house, which was completely destroyed, while some of the household articles were carried out by the neighbors and thus saved.

Owing to the great depth of the snow covering the earth it was an impossibility to get the fire fighting apparatus near enough to the burning building to make the work effective.

The property was recently purchased by the Deems family and upon it they carried some insurance which, however, will not cover the loss sustained.

Pythian Banquet Postponed.

It was recently announced that the annual Pythian banquet would be held on February 19th, that date being the anniversary of the founding of the order of Knights of Pythias. At the time this date was set it was not known that it would conflict with other local activities. Out of courtesy to the management of the Chautauqua, the guarantors and the community at large, it has been decided to hold the banquet at a later date. This long-looked for banquet will be held and the date will be announced through the columns of The Republican and otherwise.

One of the many features of this banquet will be the excellence of the cuisine. The food will not be prepared in the haphazard manner in which a man gets his breakfast in a hurry. The caterers do not enjoy the distinction of catering to His Majesty, but being past masters in the culinary art they tempt the appetites of the masses. Valiant Knights, with beaming countenances, bearing bountcously laden trays, will render efficient service.

The educational part of the program is also worthy of note. Prominent speakers will be present and the musical feature should not be overlooked. Taken as a whole, the variety of entertainment offered, as well as the carefully prepared menu should appeal to the most fastidious and discriminating epicure.

Do not fail to be present at lodge on Friday night, February 12th, to participate in and witness the ceremonies when the rank of Esquire will be conferred. Let us make this a session of unusual interest.

Our new members are requested to avail themselves of the protection offered by the Insurance Department of the Knights of Pythias. Brother Arthur Townshend, our section secretary, will cheerfully furnish much authentic data regarding life insurance. We urgently advise you to see Bro. Townshend at once; then you can eat all you want at the banquet.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE.

Gormania Knights Are Active.

Saturday night, February 6th, the Knights of Pythias lodge at Gormania initiated a class of five. Six others were reinstated.

A. C. Beck, District Deputy Grand Chancellor, of Westernport, visited the lodge and gave a very interesting talk to the members of the organization.

Much interest is being manifested among the membership and several additional applications are expected at an early date.

After the lodge meeting Saturday night, Mrs. W. S. Shrout served a most delicious luncheon.

Library Food Sale.

Everyone interested in the Library should remember the food sale, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Smouse store on Second street. The generous patronage of all Oakland people is urged. The Library needs your help.

A generous gift of $5.00 each has just been reported from The Republican from three friends from out of town who are summer residents. This is very cheering and starts our campaign for funds in a most encouraging way. COMMITTEE.

WM. E. PARRISH ELECTED

Chosen Mayor of Sebring, Fla., at Special Election Saturday

Sebring, one of the boom towns of Florida, has as its mayor today a Garrett countian in the person of Rev. W. E. Parrish, formerly of Mountain Lake Park, Mr. Parrish having been chosen for that office at a special election held on Saturday last, which followed an earlier balloting conducted in the month of December, when the successful candidate of Saturday and his opponent tied, hence another election was ordered.

The result of the election was received at The Republican office Saturday evening in a telegraphic message sent by Mr. H. R. Smouse, of near Oakland, who is wintering in Sebring with his family, and it is presumed that Mr. Smouse,along with numerous other Garrett county men and women who are residents of Seibring for the cold months were factors in the success of the preacher at the polls.

HE FAVORS PUBLIC ROAD WORK FOR ALL PRISONERS

J. Z. Terrell, Former Warden of West Virginia Penitentiary, Gives His Views

J. Z. Terrell, of Parkersburg, former warden of the West Virginia State Penitentiary, in an address to the Parkersburg Kiwanis Club, advocated the employment of prison labor by the State Road Commission in the building and maintenance of West Virginia highways. He pointed out that the use of convict labor for road work is not only practical but it has a tendency to redeem the convict.

The speaker said that the labor cost is always a big item in road building and that a big saving can be effected by the State with the use of prison labor, thereby bringing about a saving to the taxpayers. It was brought out that at the present time there are approximately 1,800 prisoners at the State Penitentiary and that at least 30 per cent of these prisoners could be employed outside the prison walls. Ohio, Michigan, California and other States have profited greatly in their road building programs by using convict labor, Mr. Terrell said. The national highway through Ohio was built by labor from the Ohio Penitentiary at Columbus, he said. It was also brought out by Mr. Terrell that the expense of hiring guards for the men was very small as it has been found by experience that one guard can handle fifty men. It is only prisoners who can be trusted that are allowed to do the road work and from past experiences it has been found that the prison camp plan is successful, the speaker stated. The prison laborers are placed under an honor system and this has been found very beneficial in many cases. The outside employment of prisoners will do more to redeem the convict than the most of prison reform movements which are being proposed throughout the country, Mr. Terrell declared.

NEW MONSTER OF THE RAIL BEING TESTED ON GRADES

"Sister" Locomotive of the 5500 Being Broken In Before She's Given Regular Run

Making "her" qualify for a position on one of the crack flyer's, engine No. 5501, recently constructed by the B. & O. and sister engine of the 5500, largest passenger engine in the world that hauls the National Limited thru Oakland daily, is now on the Cumberland and Baltimore division making test runs, according to officials.

The No. 5501 designed and constructed by engineers and mechanics of the Mt. Clare shop, is said by officials to be an improvement over the 5500 which was built and put into service some months ago. Minor improvements, however, are said to have been made on the design of the 5501.

On the test trips, it is said by officials, the newer engine is making a somewhat better record than did No. 5500. By hauling of heavy freight trains over the division up and down mountains, the engine is being given a severe test.

Completion of the 5501 makes a total of two of that type of engine now possessed by the B. & O. which will be used on fastest trains of the company.

Upon proving to be a success, as has the 5500, the 5501 will crowd out smaller type engines, and will haul the Capital Limited between Cumberland and Pittsburgh, making a round trip daily.

This engine, it is said, is neatly built, displaying silver and brass on the front of the cylinder, drive rods, lights and hand railings. A representative of the highest class design, material and workmanship, this new monster of the rails measures over one hundred feet in length, with a weight, including water tank, of 659,000 pounds.

It is the second locomotive in existence that is capable of hauling, by itself, an all-modern steel passenger train of twelve cars over the mountain grades.

This locomotive is remarkable, not only for its tremendous size and motive power, but because in it is embodied all the most modern devices that make for the safety and comfort of the passengers on the train it hauls. It is equipped with power reverse gears, air operated cylinder cocks, pneumatic bell ringer, mechanical stoker, superheater, low pressure compound air pumps, drifting valves, and a pneumatically operated fire box door.

The engine, according to officials, was built by the company to haul trains with greater ease and comfort to passengers and also to eliminate the helper engines that have trailed at the rear of trains over the mountains during the years that the company has been operating trains on mountain routes.

Eliminating the helper gives the tourist a chance to ride the observation car and to get a real view of the mountain scenery, officials claim. Heretofore, on mountains, view of passengers has been obstructed by helper engines and their smoke.

The engines, the 5500 and the 5501, the pride of the B. & O., have been assigned a name by President Daniel Willard.

The 5500 that runs through Oakland, has been given the permanent name of "Lord Baltimore."

The 5501, has been named "Philip D. Thomas," after Philip D. Thomas, the first president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, America's first railroad.

Each engine has its name printed on the cab beneath the numbers.

THE GOOD SHEPHERD.

John 10:1-30.

I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd layeth down his life for the sheep.—John 10:11.

THE GOOD SHEPHERD'S PURPOSE.

Three words are inextricably mingled in the Gospel of John. These are life, light and love. Jesus is the great life-giver in its joy at Cana, in its restored vigor at Bethesda, in its sustenance in the feeding of the five thousand, in its persistence in Lazarus, in its indwelling in the branches of the vine. He is the great light-giver in the mind of the Samaritan women, Nicodemus, the man born blind and the disciples. He is the great love-giver to all in this Gospel and in all Gospel as seen supremely in the Cross. These threads are wound together throughout the chapters sometimes one appearing more distinctly than another, but always if we examine carefully they are to be learned. Here we may find them in characteristic fashion. It was the picture as familiar to those folk as would be that of a garage or telephone to us, for shepherds jostled one on the streets of the town, met one in the lanes and highways, appeared among the features of every landscape. And Jesus used it to give not a definition that might be forgotten, but a picture that would live as long as life itself.

The ever-recurring contrasts are here in the shepherd and the thief. What is the purpose of the thief? It is to limit life, to destroy it, to utilize it for personal gain. Much of the old ecclesiasticism and some of the modern holds the likeness Jesus was painting. When a church counsels, "we must put in thus and so, it will bring us members." The thing desired is life for the organization and not for the sought. The over-churching of a community is not a shepherding of its life but a robbery of its resources. The lines of that old picture were as clear as sunlight to those listeners who had guarded their folds thru long nights and had been roused so often to repel the prowling bands who today as then infest Palestine and fatten from the toil of others. It is not an unknown feature of American conditions. Over on the other side stood the lifegiving Shepherd whose whole purpose was to see that those under his care had more and not less of life. The door was his and he who has its use owns all to which it gives entry. It is the mark of freedom, the badge of sonship. He who carries a latch key belongs to the family whether by blood or privilege and it is this that the "right of the door" conferred. It makes the user a "son of the house." Such is the spaciouness of the "life" conferred by the Good Shepherd that gives the possessor free access to all the wealth of God both within His rest places and without where lies the work of His world. And the sweep of His purpose included every member of every flock everywhere.

THE MOTIVE OF THE GOOD SHEPHERD.

Once more there is the sharp contrast so attractive to the author and so familiar to the reader. The hireling and the Shepherd appear together so that their differences may be studied. There are three levels of service in the fields of God; the slave, the servant, and the son. The first does his task because he must and feels the horror of "Depart from Me" and leaps to his duty. He dares not stay away from church, he must pay his dues, every ceremonial must be performed in minutest detail and his religion is a burden. The hireling servant is different; he is looking at his wages and calculates the return for his work. Heaven offers a reward for present discomfort in connection with tasks he would not choose and he feels a justifying joy in having been shrewd enough to accept what promises to be a good bargain. But let some immediate offerer suggest a higher return and it will be closed with at once. If the task will cost life it is asking too great a price even for Heaven and he feels himself lucky in leaving the flock to its fate and escaping with a whole skin. A merchant joins church because it will promote business, a woman may for entry into a desired circle of acquaintances, but let there be failure for either and the church is deserted. But the son is so full of joy over being a member of the family today that he never thinks of either judgment or reward tomorrow. There are younger and weaker members in the circle and of course he will do everything he can to help them. 'A little girl-mother was struggling along with a big baby when some one asked her: "That is a pretty heavy load, isn't it?" The strained arms clasped the bundle a bit tighter and the voice held a surprised note in it as she replied, "He's not heavy; he's my brother!" Where love holds swayt here are no burdens and the Good Shepherd found even the Cross a joy as it enabled Him to give life for the brothers He loved.

THE KNOWLEDGE OF THE GOOD SHEPHERD.

The contrast with the darkness that knows nothing about the lives committed to one's care is implied in the picture of the light that shines clear thru these others in such understanding fashion. The common wail of the world is, "No one understands me." The Good Shepherd knows His own and calls them by name. Not necessarily the name that has been given by hopeful parents, nor even by the community, but His name is the real name fitting the life. Just as the hillside shepherd would call one sheep, "Limpy", another, "Bright-eyes," and a third, "Brownie," because these were marks of distinguishing differences so the Good Shepherd has His own names for His sheep. Simon was quite unreliable but Jesus loked under all the outer circumstances that men saw into the longing heart where stability was the creature of its dream and called it the reality of the fisherman's life as he said, "I am going to call you 'Rock'. " If we knew the truth He had some pet descriptive word for each of those friends of the old day and it would be marvellously illuminating if we could only know what they were. And it would be still more so if we could only know with what names we are called by the lips of our living Lord today. Whatever it is we may be sure that it is the only word that is fitting and when the time comes when it is the only name by which we shall be known, when we come into such an understanding and loving company that we dare to be our real selves, that will be heaven enough for any man. For it is the place where we can be our very selves withoue fear of being misunderstood. The light of the knowledge of the Good Shepherd will have driven all darkness away forever.

GRANTSVILLE

The heaviest snow fall of the season has been experienced in Garrett county since Wednesday of last week when the roads both east and west of Grantsville were effectually blocked. The National Highway did not escape, notwithstandnig the fact that the Roads Commission has equipped the road crews in this section with additional and more effective snow removers, including a rotary plow of tremendous power and efficiency. A number of tourists have been marooned at the local hotels for several days. The snow measured 20 inches on the level and in drifts from eight to ten feet high.

A very interesting program was rendered at the Parent-Teacher meeting held yesterday, which commemorated the birthdays of ooth Lincoln and Washington.

The ladies of the Reformed Missionary Society will serve lunch at the sale of Jacob J. Folk today.

A public program of the Utopian Literary Society was given at the high school last Thursday evening, which included the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting; roll call, answered by quotations of Washington, Lincoln and Longfellow; song, "America"; dialogue, Paul Wisserman and Charles Bevans; sextette; piano solo, Dorothy Edwards; locals, Guernie Miller; talk on Lincoln, Fern Folk; solo, Delta Gantt; impromptu speeches; song, "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean."

The Valentine tea party, given by the Women's Community Club, Wednesday afternoon and evening at the home of Miss Christine Winterberg, president, was one of the most successful affairs held since the organization of the club. In spite of the snowy, disagreeable day, there were forty ladies attending, who were served a very appetizing lunch prepared for demonstration by the various members of the club.

The meeting was opened with the regular business; reports were read by the secretary, followed by talks on frozen desserts and their value in the diet; menu planning, proper arrangement of the table, color schemes and the serving of buffet lunches by Miss Lola Belle Green, demonstrator. The programs of the club for each meeting during the year have been arranged and approved by the club as follows:

March, the house dress and altering commercial patterns, at the home of Mrs. J. H. Folk.

May, dyeing of various materials, at the home of Mrs. H. P. Miller.

June, correct corseting.

July, wood finishes; refinishing old furniture.

August, preserves and jellies.

September, Fair planning.

October, all day millinery.

November, Christmas suggestions.

December, Christmas candies and cakes.

Miss Green is doing splendid work In the county and is always ready to help in the club activities and it is to be hoped with the programs planned that this will be the most successful and instructive year of the club's work and that all the women of the community will want to become members of the organization.

The club greatly appreciates the hospitality of Miss Winterberg for giving her home; also to the members who helped on the various committees in making the tea party such a success.

The Lutheran Missionary Society was entertained at the home of Mrs. Wm. Baker, Tuesday afternoon. A large number of the members were in attendance, including several visitors. Mrs. Diehl led the meeting, which was very interesting and instructive. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

Harry J. Bender was host to the Five Hundred Club on Thursday evening. Dr. B. T. Keller received the prize.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Nevin F. Broadwater, Friday morning, February 5th. Mr. Broadwater is part owner of the G. Broadwater general store.

Miss Lola Belle Green, of Oakland, was the week-end guest of Miss Ethel Broadwater.

Jonas E. Beachy, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at Western Maryland Hospital, Cumberland, Monday of last week, is slowly improving.

MEADOW MOUNTAIN

We are having real, old-fashioned winter weather at this writing.

The farmers of this section are taking advantage of the sledding snow by hauling mine props and ties to the railroad for shipment.

Mr. Irvin Custer has returned to his home from a trip to points in Florida. He, in company with the Herman brothers, spent about a week visiting various points in the South.

Mr. A. R. Barnard spent Monday at the county-seat on business.

Mr. Irvin O'Brien has gone to Canton, Ohio, where he expects to remain indefinitely.

Misses Viola and Myrtle Beckman, who are employed at Keyser, West Va. ,spent the week-end here with their home folks.

Our school is progressing very nicely with Miss Lola Taylor as the teacher in charge.

Messrs. Lloyd Brenneman and Wade Bernard were pleasant callers at the home of Mr. Irvin Custer on Sunday evening.

Mr. Elmer Bernard, of near Deer Park, spent a short time with his parents here last Tuesday.

Mrs. C. T. Rhodes, who had been a guest of her daughter in Cumberland, returned to her home here a few days ago.

Our mail carrier was unable to make his rounds Thursday and Friday of last week on account of the enormous snow drifts, which blocked the roads.

Gas Service has a two-fold meaning

WHEN you turn on the gas to cook your dinner, heat the water or bring cheery warmth to a chilly room, you are benefiting by just one phase of your gas service. This is the service of individual comfort and convenience.

There is another service equally important—the service represented by the influence of an efficient public utility upon the growth and prosperity of the community as a whole. A town well served by public utilities attracts desirable citizens and successful industries.

We are putting every effort into rendering this two-fold service—in the interests of customer satisfaction and community growth.

LINCOLN'S LIFE LESSON.

The career of Abraham Lincoln, whose birthday occurs tomorrow, was one of constant struggle against adverse circumstances. It proves that strength comes to men, not through freedom from difficulties, but through the strengthening of character by combat with them.

Lincoln was born in penury, reared amid rough wilderness conditions which denied him opportunity for more than the most primitive education; he was disappointed in love, became a bankrupt in business, was defeated in his first race for the legislature, was denied a renomination to Congress, was shouldered aside for the governorship of Illinois, was refused the office of Commissioner of the General Land Office, was defeated for senator and was defeated for vice-president in the Republican national convention of 1856.

Such a procession of disappointments would have broken the spirit of a less heroic man. They only served to spur him on. He had convictions, and he had the faith that in the end the truth would be justified. Within four years after he bade farewell to his Springfield neighbors and took upon his shoulders the great burden of the Presidency in the face of the greatest civil war in all history, he had become a world figure, destined to a elossal and an ever growing place in history.

Radicals often quote Lincoln in support of their contentions. Lincoln was essentially a conservative man. He had no sentiments, he once declared, that did not spring from the Declaration of Independence and the American Constitution. He was abused by radicals all his life and in the end was the victim of a bullet fired by a radical. He was sure footed. He went no faster than events would justify.

In his speech at the Wisconsin state fair in 1858, Lincoln, after exalting labor as a factor in society, warned the workers against "pulling down the house of another" lest they might also become houseless. He was a believer in the representative republican form of government. He had not the slightest trace of socialism in his philosophy. His own career is a standing denial of the socialist doctrine that men are the creatures of environment. He rose above environment to become one of the strong men of history.

TAIT ATTACKS RITCHIE'S REGIME AND CANDIDACY

Executive's Stand on State's Rights Are Assailed By G. O. P. Chairman of Maryland

Governor Ritchie's administration and candidacy for a third term came in for an attack at the hands of Galen L. Tait, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee in a statement given publicity Monday evening in the Baltimore papers.

Asserting that Mr. Ritchie is already the most powerful American Governor, the Republican chairman said that he has so centralized the State government in himself that if elected again "Maryland will have created a political Frankenstein."

Mr. Tait also charged that while Governor Ritchie has lowered the State tax rate, assessments have increased so that the actual amount of taxes paid is larger than ever, while Federal taxes are decreasing.

Says He Makes Laws

"Should Governor Ritchie secure a third term," said Mr. Tait, "the evolution whereby the swelling powers of the Governor have been swallowing up the coordinate powers of the State will be complete.

"Through laws he furthered some in the name of reform, Governor Ritchie now alone makes thousands of officia' appointments; alone frames a $19,000,000 annual budget; through pretended reorganization has absorbed centralized executive functions without diminishing one job; through holding back the 'green bag' and 'budget' till late in the session controls four-year legislation; in effect makes laws as well as executes them.

"The General Assembly, all commissions and boards, the university, State aided agencies, very numerous State and county appointees, county election boards, Baltimore city police, election and judicial magistrates—all are in the hollow of his hand.

"These powers, with $40,000 a year personal official emoluments, make the Governor supreme.

"But give the Governor a third term to extend or consolidate this power. The result?

"Maryland will have created a political Frankenstein. Apologies to the shades of Gorman and Rasin will be due.

"Further, the statement read, "Governor Ritchie declares for state rights while violating the only state instrument which declares them, the Maryland Declaration of Rights. Article 34 says: 'That a long continuance in the executive departments of power or trust is dangerous to liberty; rotation, therefore, in those departments, is one of the best securities of permanent freedom.'"

The executive's stand on State's rights also came in for attack. "He broadly asserts state's rights against the nation," Mr. Tait said, "while denying local county and city rights against the State."

Says Taxes Increase

"The Governor complains of Federal taxation, which is decreasing, while his State and local tax assessments and actual tax monies paid are increasing.

"In war the Union will protect our exposed coasts and bays in peace, without the guarantees of the Nation, particularl yas to interstate commerce, grass would grow in the streets of Baltimore.

"No Governor of one of the original thirteen heroic colonies should disparage the nation they founded, nor do that which could serve to undermine patriotic confidence in the Federal Government, whose flag is "The Star-Spangled Banner."

"Let the Governor confine his complaints to those sumptuary Federal laws to which he particularly and, as many believe, legitimately, objects.

"Too Much Philadelphia"

"Philadelphia—we have had too much of it in Maryland politics, from Pennsylvania Railroad days through the racetrack era to Conowingo. Interests there are always ready to finance Democratic fights.

"Under Governor Ritchie's administration, many assert the State's birthright has gone for a mess of pottage.

"The priceless water rights of the Susquehanna at Conowingo have been given to Philadelphia companies. At the same time the Arundel Corporation—composed of Governor Ritchie's third-term supporters and friends—lands a $22,000,000 cost-plus Conowingo construction contract.

"Under Governor Ritchie, formerly an attorney for them, the Philadelphia-owned racetracks by law received an air-tight, legal race gambling monopoly, with absurdly inadequate revenue for the State.

"While legalized racetrack betting continues in Maryland, the golden privileges should pay the State a fair division of the easy profits.

Vigorous Contest Promised

"Friends of the Governor say the 'same old ticket' will be presented. The curious will inquire if that means also the same old appointments and looseness of administration in many particulars; escapes, homicides, deflations, convictions and the like incident to the conduct of the Penitentiary, House of Correction, Automobile Commissioner's office and force, Baltimore magistrates, etc., respectively, the details of which are in the press files and among the criminal records.

"Citizens and Republicans by proper measures will vigorously contest the election upon the issues to be presented.

Counting The Cost.

How much money do you actually spend for the reputation of being a "good fellow."

If you were to figure out the cost—in cold, hard dollars--the chances are you would cease being a "good follow" and become a thrifty one.

People really respect thrift long after they have forgotten the "good fellow."

Opportunities.

"It has been said, Rodney, that opportunity knocks once on every man's door. What do you think about it?"

"It seems very plausible, Rube, but in our early years of experience we can not tell whether it knocked to help us or to swindle us, and so we let it pass, feeling that it is better to be safe than sorry."

"Well, I allude only to opportunities that make for success in our business and industrial lives."

"Well you forget, Rube, that everything has two sides—a positive and a negative—one is constructive and the other destructive."

"Well, supposing we just discuss the opportunities for the betterment of both men and women as regards making a good living. The question is, Rodney, have the young people of today got better prospects—a brighter future—than we had fifty years ago?"

"Yes, Rube, in my opinion they have about fifty now where we had one, but it takes more than the opportunity to make a successful living today. Opportunity is only one factor, Rodney.

"We must know how to use it. The tendency of all business today is to concentration, standardization. The small business individual of our boyhood days is now swallowed up in the incorporated individual. Big brains and big capital incorporated have appropriated about every line of industry except farming. And what they do is being done in the most approved scientific and economic manner, so that the man of small means and a limited schooling is unable to compete.

"The whole industrial world is clamoring for young men and young women as never before; but they must be trained, skilled, educated for the work they have to perform or these wonderful opportunities go to those who can qualify.

"Ignorance is what keeps all men down, Rodney.

"Boys and girls who leave school nowadays in their early teens have to face a worse handicap then we did in our youth.

"Even a university education today that is not topped off with a technical specialty—that may be chemical, electrical or mechanical—does not advance a man financially above the farmer."

"Your point is well taken, Rube. Mere book learning, what I call a cultured education, is gratifying and in the drawing room saves a man much embarrassment. I see college men every day doing very menial, poorly paid work—checking off freight, selling ribbons, working in cafeterias, and sleeping in 8x10 hall bedrooms and going without overcoats in mid-winter."

"As a matter of fact, Rodney, nature is lavish in her resources, which spell opportunity to the man who knows how to find and use them. And manufacturing, transportation, merchandising, banking and general business have grown from a state of simplicity, which we knew in boyhood, to one of complexity and great diversity. And every business has one or many opportunities for improvement.

"It may be in knowing how to make the thing a little better than anyone else or the same thing at much lower cost, or it may be in knowing how to use the waste by-products to a great profit and it takes the skilled man to do these things.

"Success is in the man rather than in the opportunity.

"The big man today creates opportunities instead of waiting for some one to point them out. Men and women with vision and skill are what the world wants and they can command their own price.

"But I do feel sorry for the boys and girls of today that have been deprived—by poverty—of the privilege of specializing.

"The Wellsley and Vassar girls of today are outclassed by the girls who have been trained to help men in their varied vocations.

"The best they can do, Rodney, is to allure some man into matrimony, but the expert stenographer, cashier or the barber's manicure has fifty chances for a happy marriage to one for the college girl."

"Well, it is wonderful how times have changed, Rube."

"Yes, Rodney, with every rising generation we behold a new code of morals, manners, social and business customs, and they accuse us old fogies of saying that the world is going to the devil. But for one, the world is growing better, take it all in all.

"We should not measure a nation's morals and manners by the span of a life-time. We are better—considering increased population—than people were in King Solomon's time.

"Under the skin human nature remains about the same the world over, though some things look bold and brazen. Men are vain of their superior mental or musical attainments. They have the opportunity and they use it—display it. Women who have the face and figure—have opportunity—and they love to please the men by revealing as much as is permissible.

"The mentally deficient and those who lack the fascinating face and figure are those who lack opportunity, and as they have nothing to allure us or show us, they become the knockers and kickers of our present-day morals, manners and methods."

Boy Scouts Celebrate Sixteenth Anniversary This Week.

This week is being observed all over the United States by Boy Scouts as anniversary week, marking, as it does, the end of the sixteenth year of the organization in America.

In order to show the rapid growth of the movement a few facts selected from bulletins furnished scout leaders are listed:

Over 2,000,000 boys have taken the scout oath in the past 16 years; of these, 2,000 have attained the high rank of Eagle Scout. At the present day the total of boys and men interested in scouting number 784,496; there are 614,815 registered scouts; 21,237 registered scoutmasters and 19,896 assistant scoutmasters. Added to this are some 120,000 men who give all or part of their time serving in different capacities as scout officials. There are 24,282 registered troops in the United States; 53 countries possess scout organizations.

Each year these figures inerease. This indicates that every community is beginning to realize the need of a scout troop—a place where boys may enjoy honorable play and interesting study.

Let us not forget that the Boy Scout movement is training boys to be a benefit to the community instead of a nuisance. "Boys will be boys," but not necessarily juvenile delinquents. It is said that years ago a gang of boys was just something to be broken up. Who would break up a well organized "Scout gang?"

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

February 12, 1809 —— April 15, 1865

WELL QUALIFIED FOR HIGH OFFICE

Lincoln's Travel and Study Made Him Conversant With Problems.

By D. K. DODGE, University of Illinois.

The claim has been made recently by a distinguished northern historian that at the time of his election Lincoln's knowledge of public affairs was limited and that he knew very little of the country through personal contact. According to this authority, Lincoln's single term in congress was "negligible" and, with the exception of a trip to New Orleans in his youth, he had spent most of his time in his own state.

Unfortunately generalizations of this sort, especially when they are made by men who are supposed to know what they are talking about, are convincing to the average reader, who is unable to check up on the writer. Let us consider how far this particular generalization is justified by the facts, or rather, whether there are any facts to justify it. It is true that most of the important political speeches of Lincoln were made in his own state, but that is probably true of most men in public life.

Spoke In Many Cities.

An examination of the biographies, supplemented by newspaper reports, leads the student to quite a different conclusion from that reached by Professor MacDonald, in his curious review of Stephenson's book. To be sure, Lincoln had not appeared in New York before he made his famous Cooper Institute address in February, 1860, but in 1848, twelve years earlier, he spoke in Tremont temple, Boston, his later opponent, William H. Seward, sharing the platform with him, and during the same Taylor campaign of 1848 he spoke in Worcester, New Bedford and other Massachusetts towns. In 1859 he delivered a long speech in Cincinnati, and in the same year he gave his remarkable agricultural address in Milwaukee, which was followed by a political speech, and later in the year he made a number of speeches in Kansas, only fragments of which have been preserved. After the Cooper Institute address he spoke in New Haven, Hartford and other Connecticut towns.

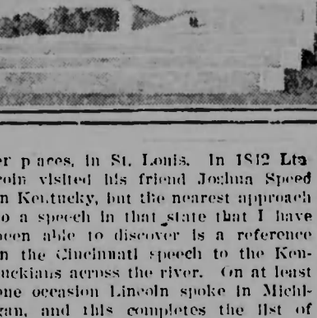
Four States Knew Him.

In 1849 he delivered the recently discovered eulogy on General Taylor in Chicago, and nine years later he made a very important speech in the same city. In 1848 he spoke several times in Maryland and Indiana. He is also known to have spoken a number of times in Missouri, possibly, among other places, in St. Louis. In 1812 Lincoln visited his friend Joshua Speed in Kentucky, but the nearest approach to a speech in that state that I have been able to discover is a reference in the Cincinnati speech to the Kentuckians across the river. On at least one occasion Lincoln spoke in Michigan, and this completes the list of states in which Lincoln is known to have spoken. It is quite within the limits of probability that Lincoln visited and spoke in Iowa and Minnesota, but the known facts are sufficient for our purpose.

His Ability Recognized.

The facts assembled show that, before his nomination in 1860, Lincoln had spoken in at least nine states and one territory, and that he had appeared in at least as many cities of considerable size and importance. A local paper characterized the Worcester speech as "a truly masterly and convincing speech" and the Tribune said of the Cooper institute address: "No man ever before made such an impression on his first appearance before a New York audience." The Cincinnati speech was included in the volume containing the Lincoln-Douglas debates, published in 1860, and the Cooper Institute address, besides being reported in full in the newspapers the day after its delivery, formed one of the Tribune tracts and was issued a few months later in an annotated edition. It is doubtful whether even Seward, whose knowledge of the country has never been questioned, had covered so great and varied a territory as speaker as Lincoln. It may be added that Lincoln supplemented his first-hand observation of different sections by a careful reading of a number of newspapers, including the Weekly Tribune and the Charleston Mercury, and that he knew personally many political leaders of both parties in different parts of the country.

Intimate With Great Men.



During his "negligible" single term in congress he formed an intimacy with Alexander H. Stephens, later vice president of the Confederacy, and on his way back from New England in 1848 he stopped at Albany in order to meet Thurlow Weed, later Seward's campaign manager. It is an interesting fact, indicative of Lincoln's breadth of view and freedom from prejudice, that his most intimate early friend was a Kentucky Democrat and slave-owner, Joshua Speed, whose brother became a member of Lincoln's cabinet. In his knowledge of the real sentiment and character of the South, a very important matter at that time, Lincoln was undoubtedly far better equipped than any other of the Republican candidates in 1860. Before as well as during the Presidency Lincoln was able, through his knowledge of the country as a whole and not merely of a section of it, to take a truly national view of the difficult situation, in marked contrast to the narrow sectional view of many of the political leaders, both North and South.

Might Have Prevented War.

If the questions at issue in 1861 had been referred to him and to that no less broadminded southerner, Alexander H. Stephens, for final settlement, there is every reason to believe that the Civil war would have been avoided, slavery would have been gradually abolished with justice to all, and the Union would have been preserved in a spirit of charity rather than of bitterness. We are, therefore, in my opinion, justified in assigning to Lincoln a place in the upper class of unusually well prepared and seasoned Presidents. The difficult and probably unanswerable question of his relative rank in this upper class need not be discussed here.

LINCOLNANIAN GEM

This picture, little known, is really a gem in historic value. It shows President Lincoln on his visit to the field headquarters of General McClellan during the last year of the Civil war.

BEATITUDE

By EDMUND VANCE COOKE

"Malice toward none and charity for all!"
Sonorously the accents rise and fall
And echo down the half-forgotten Past
And yet shall echo while the ages last.

"Malice toward none and charity for all."
The words are still a challenge and a call
Unto a wounded world, whose drooping heart
Asks a fresh faith to soothe its bitter smart.

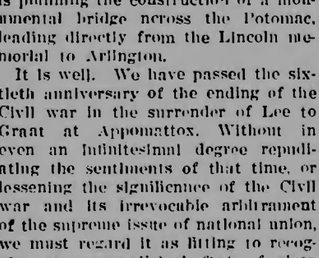
Simple, symmetrical, serene, sublime,
These words shine deathless on the dial of Time,
Chaste as a statue in a Grecian hall—
"Malice toward none and charity for all."

Unto a laboring Earth and all her brood,
His great soul gave this new Beatitude,
And still today he whispers through the pall,
"Malice toward none and charity for all."

"Good Housekeeping"

BOTH GREAT LEADERS

Names of Lincoln and Lee Closely Associated.



Last year's anniversary—the one hundred and sixteenth—of the birth of Abraham Lincoln was unique for the coupling with it of a commemoration of Robert Edward Lee. Formal exercises in honor of the two men were held in the Hall of Fame for Great Americans at New York university, in which there have long been memorial tablets for them both; and elsewhere the two names were—always have been—closely associated.

It will not be overlooked, either, that steps have been taken for the rehabilitation and safeguardianship of Lee's old home; and the government is planning the construction of a monumental bridge across the Potomac, leading directly from the Lincoln memorial to Arlington.

It is well. We have passed the sixtieth anniversary of the ending of the Civil war in the surrender of Lee to Grant at Appomattox. Without in even an infinitesimal degree repudiating the sentiments of that time, or lessening the significance of the Civil war and its irrevocable arbitrament of the supreme issue of national union, we must regard it as fitting to recognize an accomplished fact of sixty years as a closed chapter in our history.

It would be as foolish to expect the South to forget Lee, or to cease to honor him, as it would to expect the North similarly to ignore Lincoln. It is not unreasonable to expect both and all parts of the country to recognize and to honor the intrinsic virtues of them both—each the indisputably best representative of the cause for which he strove. And we have no question that if, in the Elysian fields, the mighty shade of Lincoln is regardful of what now happens in this world, he will give benign approval to this commemorative coupling with his own name the name of his one-time most formidable antagonist. — Washington Post.

IN IDLE MOMENTS

Transient Causes

Men are sometimes impelled by temporary and transient causes to look with favor upon suggestions of basic change. Lincoln was not so easily swept from his main purpose. He hated slavery, but every atom of his being was consecrated to the preservation of the Constitution and the Union. He wrote to the workingmen of Manchester, "One duty, paramount to all others, was before me, namely, to maintain and preserve at once the Constitution, and the integrity of the Federal Republic." Recall his famous letter to Horace Greeley. "I would save the Union . . . If I could save the Union, without freeing any slave I would do it, and if I could save it by freeing all of the slaves, I would do it; and if I could save it by freeing some and leaving others alone, I would also do that."

Women of America

I have never studied the art of paying compliments to women, but I must say that if all that has been said by orators and poets, since the creation of the world, in praise of women were applied to the women of America, it would not do them justice.—Abraham Lincoln.

Lincoln's Legal Triumph

Above is pictured the famous old courthouse at Bloomington, Ill., wherein Abe Lincoln won his first case as an attorney, in clearing Duff Armstrong of the charge of murder in 1858. Witnesses swore that they saw Armstrong strike the blow that resulted in the death, "by the light of the moon." Lincoln produced an almanac and showed that there was no moon on the night of the murder and that the witnesses were wrong in their identification of Armstrong, who was subsequently acquitted.

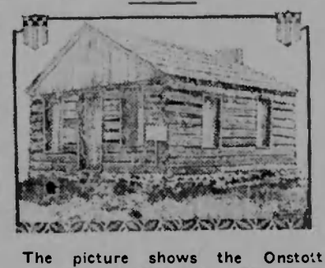
REAL GREATNESS BEYOND LEGEND

History Will Know Lincoln as "Patient, Kindly, Wise, Foreseeing Man."

Perhaps the one thing to fear for Lincoln's greatness is the growth of legend about it. There is no doubt there is such an incrustation forming upon his fame, and if that process is active so soon after his death, what must be its progress in the centuries to come? What must his real greatness suffer from it? Not in the interest of history alone, but in that of the name and fame of one of the greatest and wisest of Americans, it ought to be the concern of those who are almost his contemporaries to arrest this growth, to remove it so far as it has already obscured the genuine and solid substance beneath and to insist that the qualities that made Abraham Lincoln what he was are sufficient to preserve him, as Edwin M. Stanton said, for the ages.

The reason why Lincoln's greatness lends itself to legend are plain enough. As a national figure he flashed upon the rapidly turning pages of history for but a moment, and was gone before his countrymen came to know him. His entire career, it may be said, covered only four years, something perhaps unprecedented in the annals of the great. Before he became President he was a country lawyer, almost unknown outside of Illinois. In an instant he burst upon the national horizon like a meteor, lighting up the whole sky, and while the eyes of millions were yet upon him trying to make out this sudden portent, he vanished leaving his countrymen and the world with a question unanswered. The attempts to answer it have had a natural result: the Illinois circuit-riding lawyer has become the legal peer of Coke and Mansfield and Marshall; the President who had never seen an army until he was fifty-two years old has become a military genius; the prairie debater has taken his place with the world's first orators; the lonely, sad, overburdened leader of a nation crying out in its travail is a mystic and a poet.

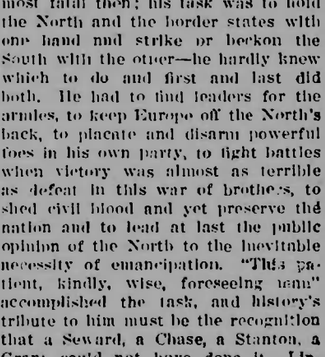
Don't Account for Lincoln.



There is some truth in all of these things, but not enough in any one of them to account for Lincoln; there have been greater American lawyers, military leaders, orators and poets, yet none of them was a Lincoln. He knew and could expound the law, but this was perhaps more successfully demonstrated in his debate with Douglas than in his practice at the Illinois bar. He required a certain shrewd military knowledge and insight, but this was chiefly remarkable as showing the extraordinary powers of his logical mind; its practical value in the direction of the northern armies is debatable. We think the second Inaugural, which is carved in marble on the walls of the Lincoln memorial in Washington, ranks with the highest poetry of the Bible, on which, indeed, it was modeled. The Gettysburg address reaches the topmost note of human eloquence.

Lowell's Eulogy Lives.

But these qualities of mind and these achievements of painstaking and often groping effort do not account for Abraham Lincoln, declares the Kansas City Star. James Russell Lowell accounted for him in a few simple words. "This patient, kindly, wise, foreseeing man." In 1861 the nation could not have been led by the greatest lawyer, military genius, orator or poet. If Lincoln had been all of these and nothing more he must have failed. Hating slavery he dared not strike it; the North was not ready. Hating war he dared to make it, yet had to make it gently—often a fatal thing and almost fatal then; his task was to hold the North and the border states with one hand and strike or beckon the South with the other—he hardly knew which to do and first and last did both. He had to find leaders for the armies, to keep Europe off the North's back, to placate and disarm powerful foes in his own party, to fight battles when victory was almost as terrible as defeat in this war of brothers, to shed civil blood and yet preserve the nation and to lead at last the public opinion of the North to the inevitable necessity of emancipation. "This patient, kindly, wise, foreseeing man" accomplished the task, and history's tribute to him must be the recognition that a Seward, a Chase, a Stanton, a Grant could not have done it. Lincoln led the North slowly because the North would be led no other way. A swifter military success might have been obtained by a Napoleon, but a military success achieved before the North had learned that the war could end only in the destruction of its cause would not have preserved the Union.



Lincoln will grow—is growing—with the knowledge of his countrymen that his true greatness was in these qualities of leadership that went down to the character and fiber of the man; to his simplicity, honesty, wisdom, forebearance, truthfulness and mercy. In these was his power over men, in his time and ours.

LINCOLN'S "STUDY"

The picture shows the Onstott cooper shop at New Salem, Ill., which is rich with historical interest. It was in this building that Abraham Lincoln studied law by the side of the fireplace, the only light available. The fire was fed with shavings so that Lincoln could see to study. The building today appears very much the same as it did during Lincoln's time, and the original logs yet remain.

Lincoln's Wisdom

It is better only sometimes to be right than at all times to be wrong. Before I resolve to do one thing or the other I must gain my confidence in my own ability to keep my resolves when they are made.—Lincoln.

AUTOMOBILES SAFER, BUT DRIVERS TAKE CHANCES

Commissioner Baughman Says Each Year Brings Larger Responsibilities for Owners.

By E. AUSTIN BAUGHMAN,
Commissioner of Motor Vehicles

Once each year—this year for the twentieth consecutive time—the annual Baltimore Automobile Show, under the auspices of the Baltimore Automobile Trade Association, gives fitting opportunity for a pause and a stock-taking in the matter of automotove development during the preceding twelve months.

The dealers, as Baltimore and Maryland representatives of the inventors, engineers and manufacturers, come forward and present to the users and owners of cars—along with the prospective users and owners of cars—the accomplishments of the year in development of better, safer, more comfortable and more dependable vehicles.

Reviewing the year's accomplishments along automotive lines, the car seller discusses in the public prints the developments in cars and accessories, the representatives of the auto owners' clubs discuss the betterment of the conditions from the standpoint of car owners and car drivers, the officials having in charge the regulation of the constantly increasing automotive traffic consider developments to meet their problems, the ordinary pedestrian "sits tight and says nothing."

The automobile owner and driver enjoy the show, take the view that it was all planned for his benefit and apparently totally overlooks one very important point, which is this:

Every year places more responsibility upon the manufacturer, dealer and law enforcement officials. These responsibilities bring more worry and more complicated problems to both classes. Certainly with ten automobiles speeding by the street intersection where but one near-automobile crept by a few years ago, the difficulties and worries of the pedestrian must be getting more or less monumental.

But what does the purchaser, owner and driver get out of it all other than an enjoyment of the show and a greater opportunity for his own comfort, convenience, money saving and speedy arrival at office, card party, club or pleasure resort? Accepting all these, does he or will he accept his fair proportion of responsibility to keep down the hazards and meet the problems which the automobile is every day multiplying for all other classes?

This may sound like a preachment, but it is a thought worth serious consideration. The development of the motor vehicle in the 25 years which 1926 marks, seem, as looked back upon, to be almost incredible.

Although speed and still more speed has been built into the products of the factories, along with development of speed have come so many improvements and structural safeguards and safety devices that the car of today is really potentially less dangerous than its uncertain and ofttimes mechanically and structurally weak predecessors.

With this development of a safer vehicle has come, however, the problem of yearly increasing thousands of cars to congest traffic and more thousands of drivers to operate them. Unfortunately, the drivers of today are not, in my judgment, as safe to themselves and other users of the highways as were those who used the more uncertain products of earlier manufacturers. Not alone ignorantly poor driving,but deliberate arrogance, disregard of the rights of others and criminal hit-and-run tactics are growing with alarming persistence.

Service Rendered by State Bacteriological Laboratories.

Under the title of "Maryland Physicians Served by Local Laboratories," an interesting account of the service rendered to the people of Maryland, by the Bureau of Bacteriology of the State Department of Health through the Central and Branch laboratories, that has attracted widespread attention, is given in the current number of the "Nation's Health." The article was prepared, late in the fall by Dr. R. C. Salter, the brilliant and greatly beloved young scientist, who was chief of the Bureau from 1920 until his death on December 5, 1925, and who was largely responsible for the development of the plan under which laboratory facilities have been extended to every section of the state.

Reference is made in the article, to the fact that each extension has been undertaken in response to local demand and to meet community need. Only one branch laboratory—the one in Cumberland—was in existence when Dr. Salter become chief of the State Bureau of Bacteriology in 1920. Now, in addition to the Central Laboratory in Baltimore City, there are branches at Cumberland, established in 1915; Hagerstown, 1921; Hurlock, 1922; Frederick, 1923, and Washington, opened in 1924. Besides being centers for diagnostic tests and analyses, the laboratories serve as storage and distributing points for anti-toxin, smallpox and typhoid vaccines, for supplies furnished to patients suffering from tuberculosis; and for other materials distributed by health officers, physicians and public health nurses in connection with the state-wide activities for the control of communicable diseases

A map of the state and other illustrations, show the ways through which this net work of laboratories is operated so that no doctor has to wait more than twenty-four hours for a report of a test made for typhoid, diphtheria or other communicable diseases, and so that no child who comes down with diphtheria is more than three hours distant from the relief giving anti-toxin.

The cooperative principle has entered into the maintenance of all of the laboratories. The Central Laboratory and the one at Hurlock are financed entirely from state funds. The others are financed through combinations of state, county, school or other local funds.

The number of tests and analyses made each year was over three times as great in 1925 as in 1920. During that year, the total number of tests and analyses made in the Central and the Cumberland laboratories was 15,600. In 1925, the total was 52,228.

According to recent reports from the State Department of Health the value of the tests and analyses made in 1921, without charge to the people of Maryland, if charged for at commercial rates, amounted to $132,462. The value of the tests made in 1925, estimated at commercial rates, reached a total of over $327,580. Included in this were 9540 tests for typhoid; 12,782 for diphtheria; 927 tuberculosis examinations; 4843 bacteriological analyses of milk; 5367 bacteriological analyses of water, and 9177 complete treatments of anti-typhoid vaccine. Over 4000 miscellaneous examinations for which rates are not obtainable, are not included in the estimated value of the work of the laboratories in 1925.

BITTINGER

The groundhog did not see his shadow on Tuesday as the sky was overcast throughout the day, nevertheless on the following day one of the severest snow storms of the winter swept over this section, covering the earth beneath a blanket of snow to the depth of about eighteen inches. The snow was accompanied by a high wind which blew the flakes together in great drifts, blocking many of the public roads and as a result this hamlet was without mail for a couple of days.

On Tuesday, February 2nd, at 8:00 o'clock p. m., at the Lutheran parsonage in this village Miss Mary Broadwater and Mr. Lawrence Brenneman were quietly united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. E. E. Campbell. The contracting parties are very excellent young people of this community, the bride being one of Garrett county's school teachers now in charge of the Beachy school. We extend congratulations and best wishes for a smooth, happy and prosperous life.

Mr. Lawrence Buckle was much occupied last week with the breaking of a fractious young colt and many times lost his temper, but behold this week he is all smiles and the colt and his pranks are forgotten because Madam Stork came to his home last Saturday night and left a daughter to occupy his time and claim his attention.

Noah Brenneman, of Grantsville, conducted services in the Glades Mennonite church near here last Sunday.

No one seems to know just who to blame for the storm of the past week—the groundhog, the stork or the wedding party.

How To Quickly Stop Bad Coughs

It is often surprising how quickly the heaviest cough disappears when treated by a remarkable new method.

Here is the method, based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs: You simply take one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals irritation, but also loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. So the severest cough soon disappears completely.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

Have Your Car Overhauled.

Motor car owners who will listen to sound advice from the experienced often save themselves much worry and a great deal of cash.

F'rinstance: The idea that one should have a NEW car every season or two is an extravagance born in the fertile brain of some motor salesman.

If you have a good car—a car that has stood the test of many thousand miles—then you have ONE good reason for keeping that car.

An overhauling during the winter months—new piston rings—valves ground—ignition tuned—carbon removed—all oil cases cleaned and refilled—fender dents ironed out—then ,when spring breakes, the old engine will be humming as of yore and you'll be all ready for another summer of pleasure.

We have workmen who are MACHINISTS—and we give you a strict accounting of time consumed.

SECOND STREET OAKLAND, MD.

"Tetering Along."

A little over a year ago we had a number of uncomplimentary things to say about the poor service and general attitude of the local gas company toward the public.

Since then, we are glad to say, there has been a change.

The new company, the Cumberland and Allegheny Gas Company, as soon as it took over the old West Virginia Central Gas Company and became familiar with its affairs and the territory served, put on a different front from what the general public had been led to expect from gas companies. The new company stated that it was going to give its consumers the best service possible. As far as Elkins is concerned the gas company has lived up to its word.

Throughout the present winter season, even today when the mercury dropped to 13 degrees below zero, there was plenty of gas. It burned just as brightly and just as strongly in the stoves and ranges as it did last summer.

The service of the new gas company has not stopped with the provision of an adequate gas supply. It has gone farther: hot water heaters have been repaired free of cost to the consumers, advice has been given as to the proper gas applience to be used and other ways of conserving gas and lowering the gas bills have been pointed out.

The new gas company has gone to great expense to put their lines into the most efficient condition. Extra gas has been purchased to take care of the peak loads on cold days.—Elkins Inter-Mountain of January 29.

Practically the same conditions described in the above article from the Elkins newspaper existed in Oakland and the entire community served by the gas company until it was taken over by the present corporation, since which a shortage of gas has not been experienced, which fact is appreciated by the consumers, especially those depending upon the product for heating and power purposes.

Grantsville Community Fair Dates Set.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Grantsville Community Fair Association, held one day last week, the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: President, Guy S. Stanton; vice-president, Elmer J. Beachy; treasurer, William Winterberg; secretary, Claude Stanton. At the same meeting the dates for the fair were tentatively set for September 16 and 17, 1926.

YARD STICKS.

Three yard sticks are used by the Maryland State Department of Health to measure the health of the people of the state. Two are operated by the Bureau of Vital Statistics and the third by the Bureau of Communicable Diseases. The first is the register of births; the second, the register of deaths, and the third is the record of communicable diseases, as they occur, throughout the state.

These figures are collected, Dr. John S. Fulton, Director of the State Department of Health said, in order that the state may know just where it stands in the matter of life and death. It is like the bookkeeping that a bank has to do, to check up on the income and outgo of its resources. The prompt and accurate registration of births, deaths and communicable diseases is consequently one of the most important functions of the State Department of Health.

What is known as the infant mortality rate is found by measuring the total number of deaths of babies under a year old against the total number of babies born in any one year. The total death rate or the death rate from any particular disease—heart disease, tuberculosis, pneumonia for instance—is found by measuring the total number of deaths or the deaths from the disease in question against the total population of the county, city or state. In case of epidemics, or of other outbreaks of any disease, such for instanee, as typhoid, diphtheria, scarlet fever, smallpox, the ease fatality rate, which is covered by checking up the total number of deaths against the number of cases that have been reported, gives a clue to those who are fighting the disease as to the virulence of the germ.

As practically all civilized countries employ the same "yard sticks," rates within certain limits have come to have a definite significance as to standards of living, standards of health and of disease control in the communities in which they occur. By students of public health activities, the death rate among babies under a year old is regarded—as one of the most distinguished sanitarians expressed it—as the most "sensitive index" we possess of social welfare and of health administration. Some idea of the way in which certain unfavorable conditions have been brought under control in Maryland are indicated by the following figures: In the ten years, from 1915 to 1924 inclusive, the infant mortality rate in Maryland went down from 120 per thousand births to 88 deaths during the first year of life to each thousand births. In other words, in 1915, one out of ever eight babies born, died before it was a year eld. Now the number has been cut down to one out of approximately every twelve.

BUSH HOME OVERLOOKING OAKLAND BURNED TODAY

Origin of Flames Destroying The Beautiful Residence, Undetermined.

Fire of undetermined origin, which was discovered about 11 'clock this morning by Mr. Lou- Bush at his beautiful home lo- ted on the hill overlooking kland, completely destroyed structure, entailing quite a monetary loss to the owner. Insurance, it is said, amounting to $5,000 was effective on the property.

Immediately upon discovering the presence of fire an alarm as given and the fire department re- nded as quickly as possible. The st fire hydrant to the burned is located at the foot of the hill eral hundred feet below the site the huilding. The men manning fire truck, on account of the ice n snow covering the streets, had a us waght to reach the hydrant and from that point to the house the hose had to be carried and dragged over more than a foot of snow. The house, being located so near the level of the reservoir, little if any pressure on the water lines could be had and it was seen from almost the first that the house was doomed to destruction.

Hundreds of men responded to the alarm and they succeeded in saving almost every piece of furniture, carpets, draperies, etc., in the building and which are now being placed in another house located on Pennington street owned by Mr. Bush where the family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Bush and daughter will be quite comfortable.

The destruction of this home is not only a loss to the owner hut also is a distinct loss to the entire community.

The structure was erected about 25 years ago as a summer home by Mr. Percy Proctor, of Cincinnati, who occupied it until the death of his only son by drowning, following which sad event he disposed of it to Mr. Bush who has continued to occupy it ever since.

The house was three stories in heighth and was well appointed thruout, having about twenty rooms and a basement.

Spoerlein; vice-president, Mrs. Arthur Scrogum; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. H. M. Speicher; assistant secretary-treasurer, Mrs. E. H. Ault.

Following the election a constitution was drawn up and adopted. The club will be known henceforth as "The Accident Homemaking Club," and will hold its meetings on the third Thursday of each month at 2.00 o'clock in the high school building.

Tuesday afternoon, February 23d, at 2:00 o'clock the Pleasant Valley club will meet at the home of Mrs. Aspinall,Mountain Lake Park. A demonstration on frozen desserts will be given, after which an election of officers for the year will take place.

DR. M'COMAS ENTERTAINS

Members of the Oakland Rotary Club Were His Guests Friday

Dr. Henry W. McComas, president of the organization, entertained the members of the Oakland Rotary Club at his home on Second street last Friday night in a very unique and happy manner. Twenty-two members of the club were in attendance along with the members of the host's family and Mr. George W. Loar, of Grafton, W. Va. The music was furnished by the Browning string orchestra with Mr. William Gibson, piano accompanist. Another feature of the entertainment was the presence of a magician, who cunningly and very mysteriously performed many marvelous feats—with the assistance of Mr. H. A. Loraditch who took his part nobly, never flinching even when a golf ball was extracted from his mouth after it had been driven through his head. The menu was most elaborate, consisting of fruit salad, chicken and crab meat salad, hot rolls, ice cream, cake, coffee and ginger ale. The occasion also marked the anniversary of the host as well as that of Abraham Lincoln and to these two toasts were offered and drunk. Each guest was furnished upon his entrance into the home with a Mandarin's hat and queue and the wearing of the headdress lent charm and color to the occasion. Speeches were made by several who paid tribute to the host and at the conclusion of the collation Dr. Archibald Moore, on behalf of the Rotarians, presented Dr. McComas with a handsome silver loving cup as an expression of their appreciation and good fellowship.

The McComas home was beautifullly decorated with cut flowers and blooming plants and upon the table was a very handsome as well as palatable birthday cake surmounted with a candle representing each year of the life of the host.

The evening was one of unalloyed pleasure and will long be remembered by all who had the goor fortune of being present.

Friend "Doc," "here's how" and many more years of usefulness in the community which you have so unselfishly served.

Brownings Will Broadcast Later

Radio fans know this morning that the Brownings, Messrs. Abel, Thomas and John, Garrett county's premier musical artists with the violin and harp, were not on the air from Pittsburgh KDKII last night owing to a change made in the program Monday following an interchange of telephone messages between Mayor Fraley of Oakland, and the management at the Farmers' and Stockmen's studio in the city. Weather conditions remain so extremely had that the trip to Pittsburgh would be quite a hardship for the men to undertake. Arrangements will be completed today or tomorrow for the appearance of the Messrs. Browning at the studio sometime during the first week in March. Announcement of the date will be made in The Republican.

COUNTY OFFICE SEEKERS ARE COMING TO THE FRONT

Announcements of Three Aspirants Appear In The Republican This Afternoon

The political pot in the local Republican camp, with the primary election six months or more away, has begun to boil, and from now on the prospects lead one to believe that the vessel will be kept piping hot until all those who intend to be in the running round up their friends at the polls and the result is declared.

This year every office in the county will have to be filled by the voters, including that of U. S. Senator, Governor, member of Congress and other State offices. The ticket to be voted at the primary, from present indications, will be the largest ever, while the ballot to be used at the general election will not by any means be a pygmy.

Today's Republican carries the announcements of three candidates—one for County Treasurer and two for the office of Sheriff. Each of the candidates are well and favorably known throughout the county, hence no introductory remarks are necessary in this column. The candidates are—

For Sheriff, Bert C. Scott, of Hutton, who filled the office satisfactorily several years ago and was a candidate for the nomination in 1923.

J. W. Kimmell, former County Treasurer, also wants the nomination. As Treasurer he rendered satisfactory service. He says in his announcement that he is for "law enforcement."

Mr. Albert L. Lee, the present efficient and painstaking County Treasurer, wants to succeed himself in that office and in all parts of the county there are voters that will have no objection to his aspirations in that direction. He has been efficient in everything he has undertaken as a public official.

Hutton Grange Installation

The popular new master-elect of Hutton Grange, Mr. N. B. Frankhouser, and Mr. M. G. Mellott, the new and energetic overseer-elect, and other officers chosen at the meeting on February 8th, will be installed at a meeting of the grange to be held on February 22nd. All members of the grange are cordially invited to attend this meeting and to bring their friends. The installation service is usually given in public. Refreshments will be served.

MOTORIZED EQUIPMENT ON MARYLAND'S FARMS

Tractors and Flivver Rapidly Replacing Equine Power, Survey Shows.

Motorized Maryland is rapidly relegating her horses from the farms, according to John S. Dennee, Federal agricultural statistician for Maryland, who points out in a statement issued that since 1920 Maryland farm horses have decreased on the average of 5,000 a year.

In 1910 there were 155,000 horses on the farms. In 1920 only 141,000, and on January 1, 1926, a further reduction of 29,000 is indicated, leaving only 112,000 at the present time. The tractor and the "flivver" are for the most part accountable, says the statistician.

All cattle show a decrease of 2,000 since 1920, in which year 283,000 head were reported against 181,000 head in 1926.

Maryland's milk is produced by 182,000 cows worth $12,012,000. This number includes beef cows milked, as well as cows of the dairy type. In 1920 there were 169,000 cows kept for milk. There were 29,000 heifers one to two years old to be kept for milk, reported on January 1, 1926

Sheep increased to 96,000—3,000 head over last year. The price averaged $10.50 per head, and the total value is $1,0008,000.

Swine decreased 10,000 during the year, leaving 192,000 on the farms on January 1, 1926. In 1920 there were 366,000 hogs reported—an indicated decrease of about 37 per cent in the past six years.

The total value on January 1, 1926, of all farm animals was $31,132,000. as compared with $29,107.000 on January 1, 1925, an increase of $2.025,000 of about seven per cent.

The number of animals not on farms, i. e., in cities and towns, is not estimated yearly, but their number in 1920 as reported by the census, was: Horses, 23,686; mules, 3,372; all cattle, 11,754; sheep, 861, and swine, 33,594.

Funeral of William G. Wheeler.

The remains of the late William Gay Wheeler were laid in their final resting place on Saturday afternoon in the cemetery at Deer Park, the funeral sermon being delivered by the Rev. Durward B. Brown, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, at Deer Park, and the ritualistic service of the Masonic fraternity, of which Mr. Wheeler was a member, being conducted by the craft from Oakland Lodge, No. 192. Mr. Wheeler died on Wednesday, February 10, at Western Maryland Hospital, Cumberland, of blood poisoning, being a sufferer but a few days. From Cumberland his body was sent to Deer Park, arriving Friday where a host of friends paid a final tribute to his memory. Mr. Wheeler was mail carrier on a route from Deer Park for twenty-three years and as such served the community in a very commendable manner. When not attending to his official duties his time was devoted to the care of his parents, both of whom were semi-invalids for many years, preceding their deaths, his mother having departed this life in 1923, and his father died less than three weeks ago. He was the son of John Luther Wheeler and Mary C. Wheeler. Besides being a member of the Masonic fraternity, Mr. Wheeler was a member of the Deer Park Lutheran church, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Woodmen of the World.

Street Conditions Very Bad.

With more than two feet of snow covering the ground during the latter days of last week and the indications of a sudden thaw Sunday with a light rain falling, business men of Oakland whose places are located along the low portion of Second street, were somewhat worried and in anticipation of flood conditions prepared accordingly by placing their goods upon tables and shelves. The high waters did not materialize, however, as the weather turned cold during the day and was freezing by night, leaving the streets of town in the worst condition they have ever been in with no relief in sight until the ice and snow melts and runs away. The ice in the roadways of town is at least twelve inches thick.

Committed to State Institution.

This morning R. S. Jamison, who has shown an aberration of mind during the past two or three weeks, was committed to the State institution at Sykesville where he will receive treatment. Mr. Jamison was taken to the hospital by Deputy Sheriff Wm. D. Casteel and Lee Mason.

DIED.

RUSSELL LOHR.

Russell Lohr, foster son of Mrs. Ellen Lohr, of Oakland, passed peacefully away at the home of his mother, Mrs. Harrison Day, at Elkins, W. Va., on January 12th, aged 25 years, 3 months and 8 days. When a small boy of nine years he was placed in the homs of Mrs. Lohr, which was his home until he was 20 years of age, when he went to Morgantown, West Va., where he was employed for the past five years, the past two years having worked for the Imperial Ice Cream Co. He was converted and joined the U. B. church at Underwood when 12 years of age and was always a faithful attendant at church and Sunday school. He will be kindly remembered by many of his schoolmates and friends in the community of Underwood. He was a worthy young man; industrious, honest and upright; a boy who will be greatly missed. He visited Mrs. Lohr and family many times during the last five years, his last visit having been made in September, at which time he was suffering from tuberculosis and was unable to work. After going back to Morgantown, and because of his ambition, he worked two days and became so weak that he was forced to stop, going shortly afterward to Elkins, W. Va., where he was a patient sufferer until death relieved him. His body was interred in the Elkins cemetery. Because of sickness none of the family of Mrs. Lohr could attend the funeral.

Of the deceased the Morgantown Post of January 13th said:

The friends of Russell Lohr will be shocked to learn of his death. He died at his mother's, Mrs. Harrison Day, at Elkins, Tuesday morning, the 12th. He went from Morgantown about nine weeks ago and was in the Davis Memorial Hospital for seven weeks for treatment of tuberculosis, but was too near gone. Russell is survived by his mother, Mrs. Harrison Day, of Elkins; four sisters, Mrs. Howard Woolwine, of Elkins; Mrs. Doyle Miller, of Spencer; Miss Bly, of Oakland, Md., and Miss Minna, at home, and by one brother, Oscar, of Akron, Ohio. He leaves many friends at Morgantown also. Russell was an upright, honest boy, made friends wherever he went. It is a shock his friends will not forget soon. Russell was reared near Oakland, Md., having been adopted when small by Mrs. Ellen Lohr, who also survives him; also two foster sisters, Mrs. E. H. Dilley, of Oakland, and Mrs. Ernest Junkins, of Plasterco, Va; one foster brother, Charles Lohr, of Oakland, and all will be shocked for no one thought of him being so bad. He had made his home for five years at Morgantown at Mrs. Alice Trickett's, 213 Richwood avenue. Mrs. Trickett and daughter Larna are starting tonight for Elkins to be there for the funeral.

EDWARD JONES.

Edward Jones, 79 years of age, a highly esteemed colored man of Oakland, died suddenly Sunday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell, where he has been employed for a number of years, and was buried in the Oakland cemetery Tuesday afternoon following services conducted at the home of Oscar Notes by the Rev. Simpson, pastor of the A. M. E. church of Frostburg, Md. The deceased was faithful to every trust reposed in him by his employer and his passing is deeply regretted by all the members of the family. He is survived by a brother and one or two other relatives.

Diphtheria Takes 20.000 Young Lives Annually.

In 1921 there were over 209,000 cases of diphtheria in the United States.

It is easy to prevent this disease, which is one of the most fatal of all diseases to young childhood.

Toxin antitoxin your community can create an immunity to diphtheria. It is up to you. Will you co-operate? It is so easy. The doctor puts a drop of harmless liquid in the skin of your right arm. It is painless; needs no care; leaves no scar. If within a few days a red spot appears preventive treatment is started, for this red spot indicates susceptibility to diphtheria.

Preventive treatment means three injections ten days apart. After this treatment, the individual is safe from diphtheria, even if exposed to the disease.

Any sore throat may mean diphtheria.

The county nurse is working in the Grantsville section interviewing the parents of children and explaining the importance and simplicity of toxin antitoxin treatment, urging every parent to sign the "consent" slip.

If every child over the age of one year had this treatment the dread disease diphtheria would be at the bottom of the list of fatal diseases to young children.

THIRD STREET HOME IS BADLY DAMAGED BY FIRE

Flames in Residence of Frederick Peddicord Discovered During Absence of Family

The residence of Frederick Peddicord, corner Third and Pennington streets, was considerably damaged by fire last Friday evening between 8:30 and 9:00 o'clock, the flames having been discovered by a passer-by who gave the alarm which brought the fire department to the scene in a very few minutes.

The fire had its origin in a closet on the second floor of the house and had gained considerable headway, eating its way through to the roof timbers and breaking out through the west gable. The flames were brought under control, however, by the use of the chemical engine, hence no loss or damage resulted from the use of water.

The origin of the fire is unknown, as it occurred during the absence of the family. The loss is said to be fully covered by insurance.

KITZMILLER

Masonic Club Holds Annual Banquet.

The Kitzmiller Masonic Club held their annual banquet at Eagles' Hall in this town, on Saturday night, February 13th, with the largest and most enthusiastic gathering in the history of the club.

Music for the occasion was furnished by the Metropolitian Dance Orchestra of Frostburg, under the direction of Miss Maybelle C. Howard, which marked the first appearance of this popular organization in the Upper Potomac region, and to say that they scored a decided hit is to put it mildly. Their rendition of the popular numbers of the day was received with prolonged applause and they were encored again and again. It was the unanimous verdict of the club that this was the best musical talent to be heard in the town for years.

The banquet room was tastefully decorated for the occasion in a color scheme of blue and scarlet, immortelles being the table flowers with scarlet carnations for buttonaires.

The following appetizing menu was served by the home economics class of the Kitzmiller high school under the able and efficient management and direction of Miss Knapp, instructor:

Oyster cocktail

Olives Celeary

Braised Beef

Creamed Potatoes Lima Beans

French Rolls

Cole Slaw French Rolls

Apple Pie a la Mode

Coffee.

At the conclusion of the repast, Mr. R. L. Wilson, toastmaster, after a few introductory remarks explained that since the banquet was exclusively a local affair, that he proposed to dispense with the regular "cut and dried" after-dinner speeches and to call upon every member present for expressions befitting the happy occasion.

This was done with conspicuous success, especially in the case of W. I. Kinkead, whose pithy and prompt and pungent remarks occasioned a great deal of merriment. The various impromptu speeches ranged from gay to grave and from the sublime to the ridiculous, but all were alike received with applause. At length, when R. Marsh Dean had very ably summed up in a humorous and witty manner the previous addresses, the speaking was brought to a close.

The floor was then cleared for dancing, which continued until 11:30, at which time the strains of "Home, Sweet Home," were heard and an evening of fun and real pleasure was brought to a close.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Shore, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Earl R. Steiding, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Marshall,Dr. and Mrs. Crittenden, Dr. and Mrs. Henry, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Dean, Mr. and Mrs. George Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. A. I. Fortney, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Hartley, Mr. Arch Chisholm and daughter Miss Emma; Mrs. Stephen Dixon and daughter, Mr. Geo. Kinkead, Miss Iva Bishop, Miss Pearl Walker, Miss Nellie Kinkead, Miss Twigg, Mr. Hugo Duvall, Mr. Jesse Walker, Mr. H. D. Baney, Mr. Carl Campbell, Mr. W. I. Kinkead.

JESUS RAISES LAZARUS FROM THE DEAD.

John 11:1-12;12.

I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me, tho he die, yet shall he live.—John 11:25.

LOVE IN DARKNESS.

Ephesus had no lack of religious cults. Devotees of various faiths thronged her streets at the time this preacher was making the addresses in the Christian church that have given us the Gospel. Spring festivals that emphasised the continuance of life thru the bleak days of winter were common to all of them. One bit of pageantry included the burial and the raising of an evergreen tree. There was a stroke of genius that crops out again and again in the author's using this common thinking a background for this story of life that persistend; radiant, unchanging, personality unimpaired, through the wintry ists of death. And Jesus was the --icient guarantor of its quality and continuance.

Following His visit to Jerusalem at the Feast of Dedication, about our Christmas time, Jesus had retired beyond the Jordan where among the teaching of these early weeks of the year 30 are to be found stories of the lost sheep, the lost coin, and the Prod-l Son. He was somewhere in this n when sickness invaded that home in Bethany where he had ften found readiest welcome at the ds of Martha, Mary and Lazarus, m some believe to be the returned young ruler of Luke 18. Lazarus was sick and knowing the love that Jesus held for them all, as naturally as we would do, they posted off a messenger with the word, "He whom thou lovest is sick." There was no request for his coming, for there may not have been the felt need that soon followed. They wanted Him to know and wished for the comfort of His presence. They knew as well as Thomas the peril and would not jeopardize Him by urging their wish. But following the departure of the messenger and the return of the cheering word, "This sickness is not unto death," there was the sudden sinking and collapse of physical forces that left them with the chill presence of death instead of the glowing form of life. It was shocking in the extreme. They had appealed to One able to serve even from death, and it had brought no response except an encouragement that was baseless. And He did not come. And their brother was dead. Love sat in darkness and neighbors seemed kinder than God. Or God's Man. Many a life has reeled under such a blow and has repudiated religion because of it. What is the use to pray? They had with fullest confidence and now, see! There is nothing but a grave in reply. There was neither understanding nor care.

LOVE IN THE LIGHT.

Out beyond the Jordan there was One whose heart was linked with theirs by many affections and there was no other sign of attention than the continuance of the work of the days. There is little doubt that Lazarus was dead when the messengers found Him, for he had been buried four days when Jesus reached Bethany. If it took two days to make the trip—more probably it would be made in one—that marks the day of their coming as the day of his dying. As soon as their plight came to Him there was the beginning of planning for a response so much larger than their dream that it is hard to measure it. To have merely held off death would have brought no assurance of persistent life when it again invaded the home. In face of the prevalent belief that the spirit remained with the body for three days, to have restored him in that time would have been equally valueless in the future emergency. What He would do was to assure them that no matter what death might do in the future the family circle could not be broken by the attack; that the same person was living whatever the condition of the body. How hard it was for Him to delay is seen in the statement to the disciples, "I am glad for your sakes that I was not there." He felt that if He were there their presence of love and trust would have been too great for Him to carry out the better purpose which He had in His heart for them and for the rest of us whoface a similar situation. Men can compel the lesser gift from God rather than the larger one of His choosing. Our love in the darkness of our lack of understanding may cloud love that works in the light.

LOVE IN MINISTERING.

Jesus came to them. His heart had been there all the time and He had carried the disciples along. Human hearts trail God's in its ministry to our pain and the touch of their sympathy eases the load. Martha was the first to learn of His coming and she hurried to meet Him with the cry that had been on her lips ever since death had entered the home, "O, if He had only been here!" Martha was always a doer and she talks on energetically, suggesting that He may do something even now. His answer rouses a bit of petulent tone in its "I know that without your telling me," concerning a future hope. To her He seemed to have sunk to the making of the conventional phrase she had been hearing for four days. Then came the teaching she could not yet grasp, but she was honest to the core in her response and hurried off to tell Mary the "Teacher" had come. She recognized His ministry as that of instruction in her case. To Mary who came with speech choked with tears that held no suggestion of relief other than His love He gave a different ministry, for He dropped tears with hers. The words they used are the same but the order is not and Mary's feeling seems to be one of the hurt of heart separation to which Jesus applied the balm of understanding sympathy with no attempt at instruction for her mind. So always God's gift fits the individual need.

LOVE IN LIFE

Out beside the grave Jesus carried them all into fellowship with His action by uniting their faith in prayer to the Father with its confident note of heaven's thought for earth's needs. He dared their faith to open the grave. He exercised their faith by having them unbind Lazarus. In all things that they could do He was quiescent; in the only thing they were helpless to do He challenged death and took from him the soul of the slain. Jesus shared life through love with Lazarus and not even death could affect it. There was no need to await a future resurrection; life was a constant and ever-present fact and any future embodiment will be merely a manifestation of continuing life.

Then as now there were varying reactions to the same fact. Some believed, some questioned, some plotted and the supper at Bethany in the beginning of Passion Week shows others who were expressing their love in an undying act.

BITTINGER

During the past week almost as much snow fell as did the preceding week. The two storms together piled the snow high in the roads and even covered the ground to a depth of about three feet on the level.

Oliver Beachy and son Irvin, accompanied by Messrs. Earl Stark and Allen Stanton returned to their homes here on Saturday from Farmington, West Va., where they had been employed in a coal mine. These men were employed in the same mine in which an explosion occurred early in January, but none of them were in the mine at the time of the explosion took place except Mr. Stanton, who was among the men entombed, but he was rescued without having been injured.

The roads being in very bad condition last Sunday, Rev. E. E. Campbell was obliged to walk from this village to Jennings to fill his afternoon appointment.

Mr. D. Fortney, of Lumberport, W. Va., is now spending some time with his brother, Lawrence Fortney, of this settlement.

There were enough interested parents in this community last week during the deep snow period to haul their children to school in sleds and as a result the schools were open every day during the storm period.

After a mild period, with some rain and considerable thawing, on Saturday and Sunday, another snow squall passed over this village on Sunday evening.

A WASHINGTONIAN QUALITY.

One of the characteristics of George Washington, which can well be dwelt upon in thinking about Washington's birthday, was his great spirit of thoroughness. When he took up any kind of work, he informed himself by the most exhaustive study of the subjects he had to deal with.

In these days many politicians think they can make good merely by social arts, handshaking, etc. It would not occur to them to spend time studying the fundamental principles affecting the work they had to do.

This quality of thoroughness enables a man to plan a course that will avoid difficulties and meet objections. This is no doubt the reason why no political parties developed much while Washington was President. He took such a broadminded course that he could gain the approval of all reasonable people.

SERVICE OF THE FOURTH ESTATE.

To the fact that the newspapers of this country now are cordially enlisted in the war against fire waste, there is abundant testimony of the directest kind. Yet indirect proof of a changed attitude also is not wanting. This can be found, for instance, in the growing frequency with yhich the great metropolitan journels, in reporting an outbreak, have been at pains to nose out the cause. Over the past five years, especially, this tendency to discover and make known in every case the origin of the flames, has been apparent to those who are engaged in opening up the road towards fire-safety. It has become a helpful beam of light thrown upon a way illuminated by far too few rays of hope.

Repeated revelation of cause and effect cannot fail in time to stamp upon the public mind the truth that every blaze has its source, that this source is usually avoidable; and that fire is a stroke of unlucky fate,mysterious and inescapable, almost never.

TARIFF AND THE FARMER.

The old familiar falsehood continues to be repeated that "farmers buy under high tariff prices and sell in almost free trade markets."

President Coolidge, in his recent Chicago address, made complete refutation of the charge that the tariff act itself is directed both ways to the detriment of the farmer.

The facts found in the tariff act itself show that the large proportion of things the farmer consumes are free from duty, and the large proportion of things he sells are heavily protected.

What do the free trade advocates want done with the tariff? Do they want wool to compete with free wool from abroad? Do they want free trade in fruit and dairy products?

The President showed from the records that dutiable goods which the farmer consumes are only 12 per cent of our total imports, and farm expenditures are increased only 1.3 per cent by these duties.

The free trader would save the farmer this 1.3 per cent of tariff and ruin the farmer's home market by reducing farm prices and lowering standards of living on farms, by subjecting him to unrestricted free trade.

THE SERVICE OF ADVERTISING.

Advertising has become so much valued that people look to it as a regular service which they need before they attempt to buy any line of goods. They dislike to start out to buy things unless they have previously made a study through the advertising of what the stores are offering.

Advertising has improved so wonderfully that it has become a kind of directory of market offerings. It spreads before the people in each newspaper issue a story of business conditions. You can read it and find out what kind of goods are being sold, what the styles and fashions are, what kind of service the people are demanding, what suggestions the merchants have to offer as to meeting household and personal demands.

Also you are thereby enabled to keep in touch with the trend of prices. While some merchants could make their advertising a little more convincing if they quoted prices more freely, yet so much information is given about prices that the buyer can get a good idea of what things cost in the great majority of lines.

The customer for any line of goods starts out to make purchases with a much clearer idea of the situation in that line if he or she has been through the advertising in the newspapers. In that way people can save the cost of subscription to a newspaper a great many times over.

People who read advertising faithfully ought to save several hundred dollars during a year in the expense of running a family. Where without advertising information they would probably have bought the first high priced article that was offered them. After informing themselves in this way they have an idea of the price that ought to he paid.

AN OLD TIMER.

Organization of the first gas company dates back to 1816, when a company was formed to light the streets of Baltimore, Md. Electricity is now used for lighting purposes, but gas leads in low cost and efficiency all other substances as a fuel for homes and industries.

As a public utility, the gas industry is essentially a democratic institution. It gives equal service to rich and poor, the home with its cook stove and gas appliances and the great manufacturing plant which daily consumes enormous quantities of this practical, economical and dependable fuel. Its customers and investors represent people in every walk of life, a true cross section of America.

Great Men and Great Women.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Emerson said something like this: "If the Almighty ever releases a giant intellect on this planet there will be something doing."

Great minds arise out of a necessity for them. They are born from a discontent within themselves or with their envrionment.

They all have a never-satisfied thirst for knowledge and for achievement and they are all hard workers.

Great minds are self-sacrificing. Many of them deprive themselves of life's comforts, pleasures and luxuries in order to reach the heights, to accomplish some specific pupropse that will uplift and benefit humanity and gratify their hearts' chief desire.

We, who are selfish, who live our ease, who are satisfied as we are, who waste our time in idleness and frivolity and our money in foolish extravagant ways and have no thought for the welfare of others, and no civic pride, never become great.

In ancient times the wise men and great were a limited few compared to population, and they devoted all their time and energy to acquire a knowledge of nature's laws. They tried to discover the hidden power in mind. They studied the occult and forces not visible to the layman.

They lived on the profits of others whom they kept in ignorance and servitude. It was the mind in men that captivated them and they were not concerned much for his body or how to better clothe, house and feed humanity in the mass.

Emerson's giant intellect has not appeared, but wisdom once secretly held from the masses by psycological adepts and research scienetists has, within the past few decades been disseminated throughout the earth by many superior minds, all specialists in their chosen lines of work.

Within the past fifty years we have seen the face of the earth changed and beautified and the mental and physical condition of men in the mass ameliorated beyond their fondest dreams.

Humanity is like an ever-flowing, ever-widening, deepening stream that starts as a little rivulet and every man and woman are little tributaries that augment the volume and value of life and mind.

The Creator is not so much interested in any one of us, or in a select few of us, or in the making of one marvelous, wonder-worker a superman as He is in raising the mental and moral standard of all men.

It is only when we add together the mental and moral achievements of all humanity in present and past time that we can get a comprehensive understanding of infinite mind as expressed through the minds of men as finite parts of one divine unity of mind.

So far in our history men and women have been born with an unconscious, indifferent concern for their future welfare or greatness of mind and morals.

Figuratively speaking, too many are now born with a booze bottle in their mouths; a revolver in one hand and in the other hand a book of tricks and schemes for lust and lucre.

They are mistakenly and unwillingly born under a pre-natal influence that marks them for life with a mania for misdeeds.

But mind is pregressive and life has concealed within it an upward urge for better things—a striving towards perfection.

Man grows more colorful and fragrant flowers, finer and better fruit, higher grades of corn and cattle than he used to. He breeds some animals for milk, others for toothsome beef, some horses for high speed, others for great strength in draftnig purposes.

But man himself has too often been a haphazard and too often an unwelcome growth.

If we had all been privileged to select our great- grandparents, we could have given them a hint of our high aspirations and thus we might have become great. So we are not wholly to blame for our condition, and yet we are mindful of the psycholog'ist's logic.

But the time is fast approaching when men and women will be better born. They will be horn with premeditation—with a creative design. Mind is all-creative, works by impression and the intensity of concentration.

Some mothers will aspire for a great musician, a great chemist or astronomer and if she determinedly wills for that which is great and good in her offspring it will prove effective in the lives of her children.

History shows us that most all great men have had great mothers.

We live under the influence of invisible forces, yet we are all governed by immutable laws. Ignorance ignores them and suffers not by chance or bad luck but from disobedience.

Wisdom searches for the hidden laws—follows them and profits.

The Music Memory Contest.

Purpose: The music memory contest has proved itself to be an effective device for familiarizing children with good music and for inculcating in them that love for music which will make it a resource, a companion and an enrichment of their later life. Acquaintance is likely soon to emerge into liking where good music is concerned, and liking to mature into love. The important thing is to acquire the taste early. Every child is entitled to this advantage.

Our contest is not only a competition for prizes, but is a course in appreciation as well.

Such work in appreciation, while beneficial to all children, is particularly desirable for those children who are taking music lessons or planning to do so in the future. Music has been given to the world as a great and satisfying pleasure, not as a task. Instead of driving children to it, we should lead them to it, so that they can know for themselves that it is something to be enjoyed. We should provide the means whereby they may hear it so they will know it is worth working for.

The contest will take from six to twelve weeks' preparation. Each week in this paper will be found two or three of the compositions that are being used in the school. At our Parent-Teacher Association meetings there will be talks and demonstrations to which everyone is cordially invited.

Plan of contest: As each selection is studied the name of the compositions, the composer and the nationality are put on the blackboard for the children to copy into note books for further study. Any interesting bits about the composer can be told in connection.

Before the piece is played a little story may be told which is brought out in the music. For instance, when playing "Narcissus" the story of Echo and Narcissus may be told to arouse interest in the composition. Or a piece may be played and the children tell what it made them think of. Then, too, they are helped to distinguish the different instruments as they hear them.

The preliminary contest will take place with all the children taking part. The highest ten in each room will take the final test. They will be given paper which is numbered from one to twenty. Any parent or friends will be given sheets of a different color. A fragment only of the number will be played and the children will put down the name of the piece, the composer and the nationality.

Juges will score the papers and to the highest score a two and a-half dollar gold piece will be given. We hope to offer a second and a third prize, too.

Watch for the sketches of our compositions as they appear each week. Come to our music classes and our Parent-Teacher Association meetings the last Thursday of each month and hear some of the work we are trying to accomplish.

ALWAYS READY FOR WORK.

The following is scissored from the "By the Way" column of the Wooster Record, and printed in The Republican by request:

Down on the farm, 'bout half past four,
I slip on my pants and sneak out the door;
Out in the yard I run like the dickense
To milk all the cows and feed the chickens.
Clean out the barn, curry Rhody and Jiggs,
Separate the cream and slop the pigs;
Hustle two hours, then eat like a Turk,
Then, by Heck, I'm ready for a full day's work!

Then I grease the wagon and put on the rack,
Throw a jug of water in the old grain sack;
Hitch up the mules, skip down the lane.
Must get the hay in—it looks like rain.
Look over yonder! Sure as I'm born,
Cattle's on the rampage; hogs in the corn;
Start across the meadow, run a mile or two,
Heaving like I'm windbroke, get wet clear through.
Back with the mules, then for recompense
Rhody gets a-strade the barbed wire fence.
Joints all aching; muscles in a jerk—
Whoop! Fit as a fiddle for a full day's work.

Worked all the summer, 'til winter is nigh,
Then figure up the banks and heave a big sigh;
Worked all the year; didn't make a thing;
Less cash now than I had last spring.
Some folks say that there ain't no hell;
Shucks—they never farmed; how can they tell?
When spring rolls 'round, I take another chance,
As fringe grows longer on my old gray pants.
Give my galluses a hitch, belt another jerk,
By gosh, I'm ready for another year's work!

Cumberland expects a hard fight in its opening game and will use its strongest lineup against the visitors."

Since the condition of the streets in town and the roads leading from town has become so bad following the two or three weeks' of almost incessant cold, blustery weather, the high and grammar schools have been holding but one session, from 9:00 in the forenoon until 1:30 p. m., which gives the pupils residing out of town an opportunity to return to their homes early and saves the town boys and girls an extra trip to and from their homes at the noon hour. The arrangement has proven to be very satisfactory to parents, pupils and instructors.

The White Front store, owned by E. S. Evans, which has been located in the Hinebaugh building on Green street, has been moved to the room formerly occupied by E. C. Lawrence in the James P. Ross, authorizes the publication in today's issue of The Republican of an advertisement giving notice to the qualified voters of the town that on Monday, March 8th, an election for the purpose of choosing a Mayor, three members of the Town Council and a Town Tresurer will be held. All the officers to be chosen at this election will be for terms of two years except that of treasurer, whose term will be for one year. OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

A portrait of George Washington, painted on iron by the famous early American painter, Gilbert Stuart, the first of its kind ever found or known to exist, is now in the possession of Albert Rosenthal, art collector and connoisseur, of Philadelphia. The picture never before has been out of the possession of the Tilyard family of England. The portrait, which is one of the richest Stuart discoveries of some years, is of the type known as the Vaughn or Gibbs type, showing the right side of the face.

Washington

EQUAL when fields were lost or fields were won,
With breath of popular applause or blame,
Nor fanned or damped, unquenchably the same,
Too inward to be reached by flaws of idle fame.
Soldier and statesman, rarest unison;
High-poised example of great duties done,
Simply as breathing a world's honors worn
As life's indifferent gifts to all men born;
Dumb for himself, unless it were to God,
But for his barefoot soldiers eloquent,
Tramping the snow to coral where they trod,
Held by his awe in hollow-eyed content;
Modest, yet firm as nature's self; unblamed,
Save by the men his nobler temper shamed;
Never seduced through show of present good
By other than unsetting lights to steer
New-trimmed in heaven, nor than his steadfast mood,
More steadfast, far from rashness as from fear;
Rigid, but with himself first, grasping still
In swerveless poise the wave-beat helm of will;
Not honored then or now because he wooed
The popular voice, but that he still withstood.
Broad-minded, higher-souled, there is but one
Who was all this and our's and all men's —Washington.

Washington's Remarkable Foresight

Washington's services fully entitled him to be called "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen," but these distinctions, due to his part in the Revolution and as President of the newly formed republic, have overshadowed a phase of his life that deserves careful consideration. Few persons are aware of the service he rendered in developing the internal commerce of the country, and of his foresight in the problem of securing union among the states, Henry Leffmann writes, in the Philadelphia Record.

At the end of the Revolution, the common danger that had been so patent in holding the several States in united action was removed, and the contemporary history indicates a rather dangerous disposition on the part of some of the portions of the country to "go it alone"—a procedure that would have led to an easy re-conquest by Great Britain. The most powerful influence in the course of nations is the economic one. The several states composing the original "thirteen" did not have entirely concordant interests and, naturally, obeying their impulses, showed an unwillingness to surrender local advantages for the general good. Perhaps as striking an instance of the operation of this law will be found in the attitude of the people of the area now included in the state of Vermont. The treaty of peace with Great Britain, which acknowledged the independence of the United States, enumerated each state as sovereign and granted also the territory west of New Hampshire. Many of the residents of this area, however, regarded their best interests to be with Canada, because the outlet to the sea was through the waters that led to the St. Lawrence river. Railroads were unthought of at that time. Among the leaders of the party that declared against entering the United States was Ethan Allen, the famous patriot, and his two brothers. Active resistance to inclusion of the state was threatened, but it came to naught and the "Green Mountain" state was duly admitted as the fourteenth state.

Problem Faced Young Nation.

During the Revolution many efforts were made to bring about a closer union of the several states. Finally, a couple of years before the close of the war, the "Articles of Confederation" were adopted. They did not satisfy many of the leaders, including such as Washington, Hamilton, Wilson and Madison, but were the best that could be obtained at that time. Meanwhile, the pioneer spirit so characteristic of the Colonials was urging movements towards and beyond the mountain range, and the problem of the Mississippi valley was becoming serious. French colonization had been active from the north, especially in the region of the Great lakes, but by the Treaty of Paris, in 1763, which closed the Seven Years' war, France had lost all its Canadian possessions. Spain was in possession of territory in the Gulf region. The Mississippi river is the only outlet to the sea for the vast valley that it drains, and it was obvious that any considerable settlements by American pioneers in this valley would find necessity either of using the river or of sending their produce over the mountain range to the Atlantic ports. These matters, of course, did not attract much attention between 1775 and 1783, for in those years the dominant note was war; but with the coming of peace domestic questions came to the front and grave difficulties arose. It seems, indeed, from the contemporary literature, that many Americans regarded their particular state as in "alliance" rather than as in "union" with the others.

Saw Routes in Advance.

When Washington began to urge his plans for the slack-water system on the Potomac, the people of the James river section became jealous. They were unwilling that state aid should be given to a project in an entirely different section. It became necessary for the friends of the Potomac project to support one for the improvement of the James river, and the James River Improvement company was duly organized coincident with that of the Potomac company. Each company was based on a definite amount of shares. By an act of the Virginia legislature a block of shares was voted to him. The Washington stock went to the endowment of an institution that had been established before the Revolution and after it had been renamed Liberty hall. This became Washington college, and is now Washington and Lee university. During the interval between 1783 and 1784, when he was not in public life, Washington made a journey through the Mohawk valley, and in a letter expressed the view that that route would constitute the best line for connecting the region of the Great lakes with tidewater. He did not live to see the construction of the Erie canal and the subsequent rise of the port of New York to commercial domination.

IN HIS EARLY DAYS

A little-known woodcut of George Washington, taken at the time he was a land surveyor, and his thoughts were furthest from the command of the American army, and the first Presidency of the United States.

Set Duty Before Pride

George Washington was elected as president of the convention that drew up the Constitution because he was the idol of the people. He had the confidence of the new nation and his dignity and strength of character commanded the general respect as did that of no other man of the time.

Washington was painfully conscious that his scholarship was inferior to that of many of his associates and he realized that he was but an indifferent politician. In his hand the sword was mightier than the pen.

But he was a soldier. Convinced that it was his duty to take part in this work, he accepted.

Washington's Hair a Gift

A lock of George Washington's hair, inclosed in a crystal medallion, was conditionally bequeathed to the Mount Vernon Ladies' association in the will of Boudinot Keith, lawyer, reformer and founder of the City club of New York.

The heirloom will go to the association if it gives to Mr. Keith's daughter a portrait of Washington willed to the association by Mr. Keith's aunt. Mr. Keith's great-uncle, Elias Boudinot, served on Washington's staff.

"Foremost Citizen of All the Ages"

"ENVY and malice have stood rebuked in the presence of his towering form. There is no language of literature and culture which does not boast among its adornments noble eulogies of the work and character of Washington. Although, as history reckons its periods, it is but a little time since he passed from the stage of life, he has been claimed, wherever men struggle and aspire, as the possession of all humanity, the first citizen of all the ages.

"So he must be a strangely bold and self-confident eulogist who would attempt to add anything to the total of affection, admiration and reverence which has been reared as the true memorial of Washington. It is impossible for us to add to or take from the estimate which has been fixed by the generations of the world."—From an address by President Coolidge at a celebration marking the 150th anniversary of the day George Washington took command of the Continental army.

Betty Washington Home National Memorial

Kenmore, the home of Col. Fielding Lewis and his wife, Elizabeth (Betty) Washington, the only sister of George Washington, has been converted into a national memorial by the Fredericksburg chapter of the Kenmore association. The house is in Fredericksburg, Va., and is the only Washington home that is not in the care of a patriotic society.

Washington himself spent many days at Kenmore and received there many guests who are now national figures. It also was at Kenmore that he met Martha Parke Custis, who was later to be Martha Washington.

The house is a beautiful Colonial mansion, said to be the finest type of architecture of that period, and Washington had a large share in the designing of it, making the plans for many of its exterior decorations which were executed for him by Hessian artists, war prisoners whom he assigned to the task.

Funds Raised by D. A. R.

The leaders in the movement for its preservation plan to make it a national patriotic shrine, a lesser Mount Vernon. Some time ago it was threatened with destruction, but the members of the Fredericksburg chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution raised the funds for its preservation.

The house is of solid brick construction. Colonel Lewis, when he built it, was a man of wealth and taste, and made it one of the most notable residences of the Colonies.

Imposing as its exterior is, its chief glory is within. Its decorations are unusually elaborate. On the ceilings and on the walls are encrusted beautiful frescoes. The material is stucco and has remained fresh as if shaped the day before yesterday in spite of the nearly two hundred years they have been in existence.

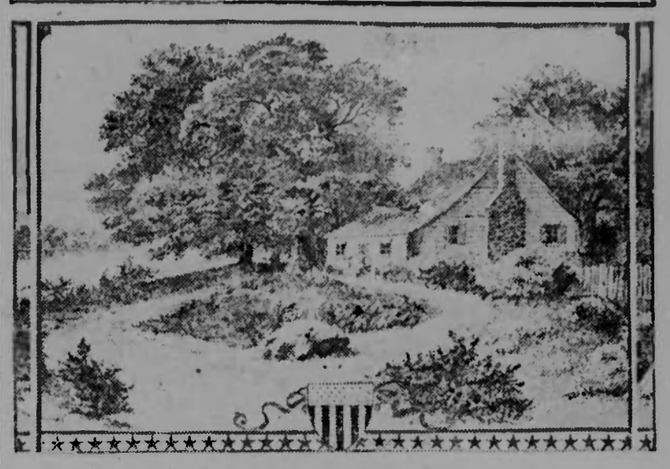
Although built in 1753, when Colonel Lewis and Betty Washington were married, Kenmore was not completed until long afterward. Like every beloved home, new additions and fixings were added as the years went by and brought new necessities.

Beautiful Grounds.

Thus more than twenty years after it had been erected and already afforded hospitality to many famous men and women, and had been witness to many scenes destined to become historical, the famous decorations in stucco were made.

The grounds are no less charming than the building itself. Beautiful lawns, fragrant walks overhung with willows and magnificent oaks, make the approaches to the house of exquisite charm. Behind it is the cottage where Mary Washington, the mother of George and Betty, lived and died. The lawn stretches to within a few steps of the granite shaft which stands over her grave. After the death of its founders, and of the famous men whom it sheltered, the house passed into a variety of hands.



During the Civil war it had its share of misfortunes which fell so heavily upon many of the historical homes of the South. After the conflict it was for a time the home of negroes, and was not restored to the traditions and the glory which it deserved until recent years.

Unlike many of the noted Colonial mansions, Kenmore is easy of access on the Dixie highway, between Washington and Richmond.

Hurt by Carelessness

Nothing pleases me better than to see my farms in good order, and everything trim, handsome, and thriving about them: nor nothing hurts me more than to find them otherwise, and the tools and implements lying wherever they were last used, exposed to injuries from rain, sun, etc.—George Washington.

Birthplace of Washington

At this time all things reminiscent of the "Father of His Country" are more than passably interesting. This is an old and little known woodcut photo of Wakefield, Va., where George Washington was born.

To Restore Washington's Birthplace

The Wakefield National Memorial association, founded in 1923 in Washington for restoring the old "Washington homestead" to its original state, already has acquired 70 acres of this long-neglected site.

The plan of the association has been to restore and replace the Wakefield home in Westmoreland county to the state it was on February 22, 1732, when Washington was born.

The name, "Wakefield," which has so long been veiled in obscurity, the association points out, is destined to bring to the nation a new meaning when as a shrine it will be fittingly emphasized as the birthplace of the first President. During congressional hearings held for consideration of plans and authorization of adequate appropriations for the bicentennial celebration of the birth of Washington it was suggested that the observance should "begin at the beginning"—Wakefield.

His Boyhood Home.

There at Wakefield, where much of the beautiful romance of Washington's boyhood was lived, is a spot where all Americans may do homage.

Referring to the visit of the Coolidge Presidential party to Wakefield, Dr. Charles Moore, chairman of the national commission of fine arts and a trustee of the Wakefield association, wrote:

"During his brief visit the President must have been depressed with conditions prevailing at a place so historic and at the same time so beautiful in itself. When he came to depart the ebbing tide made it impossible for a small boat to approach the shore; and the government wharf had long ago been so broken by the ice that it survives only as a melancholy and unsightly wreck. Therefore, the party was compelled to drive eight or ten miles to Colonial beach to board the Mayflower, the President's yacht. This was the best of an object lesson," concluded Doctor Moore.

Granite Shaft on Spot.

Going down the country road some forty miles below Fredericksburg and a half a dozen miles below the little settlement of Oak Grove, one notes at the left a small tablet inscribed, "This is Wakefield." Turning in, one traverses for a mile or two a road which was built through the combined efforts of the state of Virginia and the government, and comes out into a little clearing among the pines and cedars. In the center of the knoll rises the granite shaft erected by the government.

The Potomac at Wakefield is some eight miles wide, and on the clearest days the trees on the Maryland shore appear only as a blue haze. No house is in sight from the monument site, although as a matter of fact several historic residences are not far away. Wakefield lies practically between Pope's creek and Bridge's creek.

Scene of Romance.

Washington's first romance occurred there, too. Betsy Fauntleroy, a "Lowland Beauty" who lived at Naylors Hold, fifteen miles from Wakefield, won his youthful affections. Proof of this is seen in a letter written by Washington to Betsy's father. It ran as follows:

"May 20, 1752.

To William Fauntleroy, Sr.

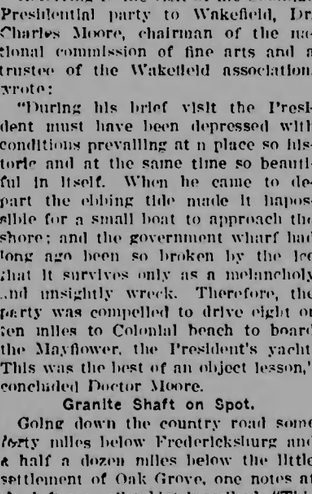
"Sir: I should have been down long before this, but my business in Frederick detained me somewhat longer than I expected and immediately upon my return from thence I was taken with a violent pleurice which has reduced me very low; but propose as soon as I recover my strength to wait on Miss Betsy in hopes of a revocation of the former cruel sentence, and see if I can meet with any alteration in my favor. I have inclosed a letter to her, which should be much obliged to you for the delivery of it, I having nothing to add but my best respts to your good lady and family.

"GEORGE WASHINGTON."

His "Lowland Beauty."

This letter resolves all doubt about the identity of the "Lowland Beauty," around whom has gathered so much sentimental mystery and interest. Gen. Fitzhugh Lee discovered this letter written after Washington's return from Barbadoes, March 4, 1752, so he must have received his "cruel sentence" from Miss Betsy before the voyage. September, 1751, which would make him nineteen years of age and the young lady sixteen. Thus it can be seen that Washington not only claimed Wakefield as his birthplace, but as the beloved spot of his boyhood and first love as well.

It is the ultimate purpose of the Wakefield association to buy the entire tract of 1,000 acres between Bridge's creek and Pope's creek, adjoining the 11¾ acres owned by the government. The association proposes to erect on or near the site of the Washington family home a copy of the original house, the foundations of which already have been traced.



Tablet in Honor of Washington's Brother

A bronze tablet in memory of Col. Charles Washington, founder of Charles Town, Va. (now West Virginia), in 1786, was unveiled at exercises in charge of Bee Line chapter, D. A. R., which erected the tablet in the historic courthouse at Charles Town, W. Va. last year.

Citizens and officers of the county gathered. Miss Frances D. Puckette, fifth great-niece of Charles Washington, unveiled the tablet. Col. B. D. Gibson of Charles Town was master of ceremonies.

Col. Charles Washington, brother of George Washington, was born on May 2, 1738. He served under his brother, General Washington, in the Revolution, after which he returned to his estate in Berkeley county.

Washington's Courtesy

In that terrible winter at Valley Forge when the fortunes and the spirits of the American army were at their lowest ebb, there arrived at the camp a letter for Gen. George Washington, a letter containing a strange request. The writer, Miss Kitty Livingston, wanted to know if the general would send her a lock of his hair. General Washington forwarded the lock of hair, together with his compliments.

This human sidelight on George Washington was revealed recently when the original letter was read before the Mount Vernon Ladies' association. The letter was donated by Miss Margaret Norton and Miss Elizabeth Norton, great-granddaughters of Kitty Livingston. It reads:

"General Washington having been informed lately of the honor done him by Miss Kitty Livingston in wishing for a lock of his hair, takes the liberty of enclosing one accompanied by his most respectful compliments."

"Palestine for the Jew. Why?"

BY T. E. BARKER

Maryland Theatre, Oakland, Md., Sunday, February 21st, at 3:00 o'clock

ALL SEATS FREE. NO COLLECTION

Has it not many times occurred to you that there must be some reasonable explanation of the cause of world-wide unrest, distress and perplexities? Where is the rational human being who has not often wished that things were different—who does not long for peace, happiness, freedom from pain and sorrow?

The divine plan for man's release from all causes of unhappiness is not only reasonable, but genuinely heart cheering.

The speaker, a Bible Scholar and an extensive traveler, is regularly assigned to the Staff of the I. B. S. A. Lecturer. His lecture is acclaimed by the large audience that greets him everywhere as Biblical and reasonable.

If unable to attend, mail ten cents in stamps for 64 page booklet, "The Standard for the People" giving Bible proofs for the startling statements he makes.

KEMPTON

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Gay have returned from a point in Virginia, where they had accompanied the remains of Mrs. Gay's mother for interment.

Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Taylor, of Elk Garden, were called here a few days ago due to the death of their grandchild, Elsie Winfree.

Miss May L. Stewart, grade supervisor, conducted a teachers' meeting here on Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Mary Nutter has been confined to her home with tonsilitis the past week.

Mrs. Allie Cook continues ill.

Mrs. Stella Seymour is having a social for her Sunday school class at her home this evening.

Owing to the death of Elsie Winfree we had no school on Friday and Monday.

Dr. Wells conducted quarterly meeting here on Sunday evening.

Elsie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Winfree, died at her home at Kempton, February 11, 1926, aged nearly thirteen years. Having recovered from an illness produced by pneumonia, her death resulted from a heart attack. While everything that the skill of a physician and loving care of parents and nurse could do, their efforts were in vain and she passed on. Elsie was the light and sunshine of the home, always having a smile for everyone. She was dearly loved, not only in her home, but by her many friends in school, in the church and community. The funeral services were held at Salisbury, Md., on Tuesday afternoon. ANON.

SOLUTION OF LAST WEEK'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE.

PEERLESS

Mr. John Junkins spent Sunday in Kitzmiller and his friends are wondering what the attraction is.

Mrs. Maude Junkins, John, Marguerite, "Ted" and Frank Junkins and Miss Millicent Wilhelm enjoyed a pleasant sled ride last Tuesday evening.

Aros Sharpless is able to be out again after a siege of sickness.

Mrs. Wendel Wilson was a business visitor to Kitzmiller and Blaine last week.

There seems to be considerable traffic between Kitzmiller and Peerless in spite of the recent heavy snowfall.

Miss Marguerite Junkins and John Junkins and Miss Millicent Wilhelm attended the M. E. services Monday night, Feb. 15th.

FEED THE GAME BIRDS

Is The Request From The State Game Department.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Publication of the following letter from the State Game Department is respectfully requested.

R. S. BROWNING,
District Game Warden.

For further protection of our bob-white, we solicit the cooperation of the public in feeding said birds thru the winter months.

Up to this writing our winter has not been very severe on our game supply. Even with moderate weather when bob-white can find nature's food it would not be amiss for the general public to furnish a little feed comprising grain of any variety to assure a well fed bird when the severe winter weather does arrive. A bob-white well fed will stand very severe weather, but when food is scarce and difficult to obtain, a day or two of weather such as we have at certain periods of our winter will often destroy a whole bevy in a single night. This being the case, every person living in the country should give their time and efforts towards the bob-white's relief. The bob-white is the farmer's friend and at the same time during the lawful open season furnishes grand out-door recreation for thousands of persons. Therefore, this bird is worth looking after by feeding and sheltering. Again the bob-white, due to his excellent insectivorous qualifications, is of great benefit to our agriculturalists. The birds do not require much attention, although should be furnished feed to keep them in a healthy fat condition, so they may stand the severe weather when it does arrive, as they need food every day, and if they do not get it they will in a few days become so weak that cold weather will kill them quickly. A stack of corn shocks left open at the bottom so the birds can get under it or a pile of brush in a protected fence corner covered with weeds, straw or some other material will help considerably in the protection of the greatest of game birds. In placing shelters do not extend same over five or six inches above the ground, and if covered with any material will provide a shelter in case of snow for the birds to protect themselves. More than one opening should be left so that vermin cannot prey on the birds, but allow them to escape in case vermin does appear.

The house cat is one of the worst enemies of bob-white. During the winter months he will prowl day and night and without doubt destroys more bob-white after the shooting season has closed than any other animal to be found on a farm. The season which has just closed has left more brood stock in our covers than heretofore, and with the assistance of the public in helping to take care of this stock through the winter months, we should have an excellent supply of brood stock for the propagating season of 1926, which, of course, will assure excellent hunting during the season which begins November 10th and closes January 1st.

Have Your Car Overhauled.

Motor car owners who will listen to sound advice from the experienced often save themselves much worry and a great deal of cash.

Frinstance: The idea that one should have a NEW car every season or two is an extravagance born in the fertile brain of some motor salesman.

If you have a good car—a car that has stood the test of many thousand miles—then you have ONE good reason for keeping that car.

An overhauling during the winter months—new piston rings—valves ground—ignition tuned—carbon removed—all oil cases cleaned and refilled—fender dents ironed out—then, when spring breakes, the old engine will be humming as of yore and you'll be all ready for another summer of pleasure.

We have workmen who are MACHINISTS—and we give you a strict accounting of time consumed.

ALL AMERICAN DIRECTORY TEAM

Many Features In This Almost Universally Read Book.

This "All American" football team for 1925 was picked from the listings of telephone directories.

The positions and players are: Ends—Fast, Gustave, Annapolis, Md.; Quick, Earl M., Charleston, W. Va. Tackles—Swift, J. E. Solomons, Md.; Lively, J. Cecil, Hinton, W. Va. Guards—Bloxam, Joseph, Salisbury, Md.; Blocher, J. Harry, Hampstead, Md. Center—Rush, J. H. Whiteford, Md. Quarterback—Spry, John H., Petersburg, Md. Halfback—Buck, William MacDonald, Logan, W. Va. Fullback—Back, John T., Huntington, W. Va.

What is a directory?

The dictionary says, "An alphabetical or classified list, as of the names and addresses of the inhabitants or business-houses of a city."

The telephone directory is generally made up of two main sections, the alphabetical and the classified section. The alphabetical section is found in all telephone directories and contains a complete list of telephone subscribers in the area served by the directory, making it possible for those knowing the name of a particular individual or firm, with whom they desire to talk, to locate the telephone number. This section renders a very definite part of telephone service.

Many of the telephone directories contain classified sections in some form. These sections contain lists of business subscribers, arranged in separate alphabets under classified business headings, making it possible for those knowing the line of business of particular individuals or firms to locate the telephone number, or to determine the individuals or firms name in a particular line of business. The classified section rendered a very definite business service as a buying guide.

While the directory is a very necessary part of telephone service, the public generally does not understand the immense amount of work that is necessary to compile the directories of the telephone companies of the country. There are many features to be considered in making up this almost universally read book, whose quality requirements are accuracy, legibility and durability.

Accuracy in telephone directories is of prime importance, not only in particular listings as to correctness but also as a whole with respect to the inclusion and exclusion of listings. It is said that the average listing change yearly in this country is about 50 per cent, the volume of this work can better be appreciated when it is realized that this represents the handling of approximately 5,000,000 listing changes annually in the telephone directories of the Bell system.

PHENOMENAL GROWTH OF THE BELL SYSTEM

The growth of the Bell System and its connections has been nothing short of phenomenal. Beginning with 1876 it took 23 years for the system to reach 500,000 telephones. In 1893, the year of the Chicago World's Fair, it had about 250,000 and in 1898, when the war with Spain occurred, it had about 500,000. The second 500,000 were reached and passed in 1901, three years later.

In the next three years nearly 1,000,000 stations were added, making over 2,000,000 in 1904. In the next three years over 1,800,000 stations were added and in the three years following 2,000,000 more. By 1913, three years later, the additions were 2,250,000 and by 1916 nearly 1,750,000 more. Nearly 2,000,000 were added by 1919 and 2,300,000 by 1922. The gain in both the years 1923 and 1924 amounted to nearly 1,000,000 each, and according to the present rate of growth, the gain in 1925 will be almost as great. At the beginning of October, 1925, there were 16,400,000 telephones in the System. Throughout all this growth "Better Service" has been the watchword.

It has required extraordinary foresight to keep ahead of this noteworthy growth. It is said that the Bell officials and engineers are now planning for ten, fifteen and twenty years ahead.

"Pennsylvania Dutch" Is Language Mixture

During 1683 a systematic German immigration into this country began. In the fall of that year a party of Mennonites, the "hook-and-eye people" now living all over the country, came from the German city of Crefeld and landed near Philadelphia upon land owned by William Penn, upon whose invitation they came, Conrad Bercovici relates in the Century Magazine. Some time later they founded Germantown, six miles above Philadelphia. Shortly afterward, in successive waves of almost equal numbers, they came one after the other and settled in all parts of Pennsylvania. At the time of the Revolution one-third of the population of Pennsylvania was of German birth or descent. Soon mixing with the Dutch that lived there, they formed a virtually new language, more or less a compilation or corruption of the two, which is known today as Pennsylvania Dutch.

Flyers' Parachutes

The parachutes used by American army aviators are made of carefully chosen silks and have a diameter of 24 feet. The total weight when packed is about 18 pounds. The shroud lines or cordage are of extremely fine silk made by an American manufacturer of fishing equipment. This quality is said not to be available any place else. The army regulation parachute is folded in a pack and worn by an aviator as part of his flying clothes. The pack forms a seat or cushion on which the pilot sits. When the aviator jumps he must be careful to clear the plane before releasing the parachute. Two or three seconds are allowed for this. Every army aviator is equipped with the regulation parachute upon his flight.

GARRETT COUNTY GROOM IS HELD FOR PERJURY

The above comprises chapter one in the marital life of the couple and would have appeared in The Republican last Thursday had the marriage license record at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland not borne the mystic request "don't publish," which has been religiously observed since time immemorial by the newspapers of Garrett county in taking off the marriage licenses for publication.

At the hearing before the Magistrate Butler swore that he believed the girl was eighteen years of age and that he had not knowingly or willingly perjured himself when he applied for and secured the marriage license. A large number of witnesses appeared at the hearing, some of whom swearing that to the best of their belief Butler did know that the girl was but 16 years of age, while others took the contrary view of the matter. In the end the Magistrate ruled that sufficient evidence had been produced to warrant the holding of the accused young man for the grand jury and he was released from custody by furnishing bond in the sum of $700 for his appearance in June.

Butler's wife did not testify. She is standing loyally by her young husband and declares that she sees a silver lining in the cloud that now mars their otherwise happy marital sky.

BRAKEMAN FRACTURES HIS RIBS IN FALLING

Frank Harne, Formerly of Oakland, Painfully Injured.

Frank Harne, 42 years old, of Cumberland, formerly of Oakland, employed as a Baltimore and Ohio brakeman, fractured two ribs early Tuesday morning when he fell from the top of a freight car while at work at Evitt's Creek, east of Cumberland.

The injured man was taken into Cumberland and admitted to the Western Maryland Hospital where he was attended by one of the surgical staff of that institution.

Harne was riding a car over the "hump" in the yards, it is understood, when his foot slipped on the ice covering the roof of the car and he was precipitated to the tracks. Besides the fractured ribs, he sustained severe bruises in the fall. He was resting comfortably at the hospital last night, it is understood.

Activities of the Knights of Pythias of Oakland.

We wish to report that such an initiation as was witnessed at Castle Hall last Friday night is worthy of much favorable comment. Owing to weather condition and some social events, the attendance was not what it should have been. All who were not present missed a good chance of seeing a candidate receive the rank of Esquire. Knights, you owe it to yourself to take an active part in our degree work. Resolve to help Garrett Lodge carry on its work. It is a worthy organization, deserving of your best efforts and consideration.

If you wish to see something worthwhile, be on hand Friday night, Feb. 26th. The new degree team will be on the job in full regalia prepared to confer the rank of Knight on a class of would-be Knights. It will be the second appearance of this team which performed in such a creditable manner but recently. The membership of the lodge should be proud of this team, but you cannot fully appreciate its worth unless you see how efficiently the work is conducted. Refreshments will be served.

Come! Get some idea of the inner workings of your lodge. Do not depend on the faithful few to do everything. True it is that you are but a cog in the fraternal machine, but if one cog does not function properly, progress is very much impaired.

No date for the banquet has been given yet. You will be fully informed as to particulars concerning it and a few sidelights on the same in poetical fashion will be published in the near future.

Fireman Smith was knocked from the tender and fell along the tracks. He was picked up a few minutes later and taken to a home nearby and from thence was sent to the Allegany Hospital in Cumberland where he was attended by Dr. E. E. KEEPING COWS MEANS $107,020 EXTRA INCOME

For Farmers of Garrett County, According to Report.

An added income of $107,020 a year is enjoyed by Garrett county farmers indirectly as a result of keeping cows, according to the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. This income is in the form of a more fertile soil due to the manure of the dairy cows of this county. On the basis of practically a $20.00 fertilizer valuation per animal per year, this means a total of $107,020 added to the richness of the soil in this county every twelvemonth.

Manure is a source of the most valuable plant food obtainable, says the Institute, but to preserve it at its highest value or efficiency, it should either be put directly to the fields each day or conserved until such a time as the opportunity offers itself to spread it. Feeding trials have proven that an ordinary cow, while putting from 15 to 18 per cent of the total energy of the feed she consumes into milk, actually returns to the soil 80 per cent of the elements of soil fertility in her feed in the form of manure. This had led many dairymen to discover that the feeding of good concentrate feeds for their cows not only more than pays for itself in increased milk production, but that it also supplies necessary food to farm crops that are expensive when bought in the form of commercial fertilizer.

Don't Expose the Children to "Catching" Diseases.

If you want the kiddies in your house to stay well, keep them away from other children who have coughs, colds, measles, mumps, whooping ... any other "catching" disease, is the advice of Dr. J. H. Mason Knox, Jr., Chief of Child Hygiene of the Maryland State Department of Health.

"We hear a great deal," he said, "about the importance of protecting school children from communicable diseases, and it IS important, but few people realize that it is just as vital to protect the babies and the other children who are too young to go to school.

"A great many people still have the old notion that children are going to have these diseases any way, so they may as well get them and have it over. The truth of the matter is that these diseases are much more dangerous—as a rule—for the very young child than for the older boys and girls, and more apt to end fatally. Two out of every three of the deaths from measles, scarlet fever and diphtheria occur among children under five. In the case of whooping cough our record show that nine out of every ten deaths from disease occurs among children under five.

"Measles, in particular, is apt to be spoken of lightly, when it really is to be regarded as a wolf in sheep's clothing. It is especially dangerous for babies and children under three, and ordinarily it is least dangerous for the children between five and fifteen years old. It is twenty-five times as fatal for babies under a year old as it is for the four year-old, and it is nearly fifty times as fatal for the babies under a year old as it is for the children between five and nine. Even when it is not immediately fatal it is likely to leave a trail of bad aftereffects. It frequently opens the way for eye and ear troubles and often is followed by pneumonia. Instead of regarding the disease lightly, every precaution should be taken, especially when other children in the family or in the neighborhood have the disease, to safeguard the little ones and to keep them from catching it.

"Against one serious infectious disease—diphtheria—we have a definite means of protection—toxin-antitoxin, and physicians and health officers all over the country are urging that all young children, beginning with the year-old babies, should be given this protective treatment.

"Another 'catching' disease that is particularly hard on the babies and very little children and from which they should be carefully safeguarded is the so-called common cold. Like the measles, this is much more dangerous for the little children than for the older ones. The little children cannot get rid of the infectious material in the throat and nose as the older ones can, and very often these persistent colds lead to broncho-pneumonia and to other diseases.

"There are two ways of protecting the children from all of these catching diseases. First, develop their resistance to disease by intelligent care, paying special attention to food, fresh air and plenty of rest; second, keep them away from ... other people, grown-ups as ... children, who ... sort o...

ANDERSON SENT TO THE HOUSE OF CORRECTION

Garrett County Youth Convicted of Aiding Negro In Postoffice Robbery at Swanton.

Ralph Anderson, found guilty in the United States District Court at Baltimore recently of attempting to rob the postoffice at Swanton, this county, two or three months ago, was sentenced to the Chicago House of Correction, a Federal institution, until he becomes twenty-one years old by U. S. Judge Soper in the Federal District Court at Baltimore on last Thursday afternoon. Anderson gave his age as nineteen.

A similar charge against Henderson Hall, the negro principal in the hold-up, was settled, District Attorney A. W. W. Woodcock, announced at the time Judge Soper passed sentence upon Anderson. Shot in the head during the attempted robbery, Hall has become unbalanced and probably will be placed in a State institution. Hall is still held in the Cumberland Jail.

Anderson was arrested September 18 by Deputy Sheriff William D. Casteel, charged with being the accomplice of Hall in the attempted robbery of the postoffice at Swanton on the night of September 17. Anderson contended that he took no active part in the affair, but that he acted as lookout for Hall while the latter broke into the building.

The negro, Hall, as The Republican readers will remember, was surprised by Postmaster Joseph F. Friend and a pistol battle followed during which Hall was shot through the stomach ... his face penetrating his brain. Friend was also struck by a bullet, the missile lodging in his face and destroying one eye. He also sustained a number of lacerations about his head and face when the negro used his revolver as a mace.

Hall was brought to Oakland the morning following the attempted robbery, his arrest being made by Sheriff Guy O. Yutzy and Deputy Casteel, the prisoner being brought to the Oakland Jail by the officers. His condition being of such nature on account of the wounds he had received he was later taken to the Western Maryland Hospital in Cumberland where he was kept under guard for about a month, recovering sufficiently by October 22 to be taken to the Allegany County Jail where he has remained since his physical recovery. His mental condition, however, is such that he will probably be sent to a State institution in a short time.

They had discussed the price set upon information leading to His arrest. He was young, strong, draing to the point of audacity and challenging the authorities to carry out their threat. Moreover, He was so keen-witted that He turned to laughter all attempts to entangle Him in word battles. Youth would fling itself at His feet and this was just the fear of the ecclesiastical-political group within the temple counselling upon the course to take. Their prestige and position were at stake among the crowd, but their money was also. They were no longer capable of judging, for their minds were clouded by prejudice and befooled wit.. the passion of personal advantage. They would serve themselves, Jesus would serve the capable, coming youth.

EXPLOITED YOUTH.

These shrewd tricksters masquerading as guileless leaders who would save their land from such disastrous policies as Jesus proposed called a group of young people about them and with keen understanding of their disciples mind offered them the position of honor in the conflict. So they poured into their ears the story of the nation's peril, the danger to its institutions if the program of Jesus should be adopted by the people, and the wonderful service they could render by entangling Him and discrediting Him before the throng. So they rehearsed the question to be proposed and sent them out to try their luck with the man who had a passion for youth. It was high compliment and good understanding of Jesus that they took young folks to do their task. It was for them he livved and it was htru them then that they could most surely work His downfall. The tragedy of it was that they fell for it all and were duped into a struggle against their best friend. It has not been the last time either, as ten million crosses proclaim their late exploiting by war lords, and the peril today is that they do battle for the crafty group whose interests and gains lie in the sale of brewery stock and product.

So into the expectant crowd they thrust themselves and with their fine young faces surround Jesus and ask for His judgment. They are perplexed over whatthey ought to do, will He help them He is true and they can trust Him. Ought they to pay taxes to the hated Romans? Of course they were forced to do it by the legions but wasn't it right toevade it if they could? Wasn't it justifiable to break the law in this ease? They were believers in the laws and all that, but this one had been over on them; wasn't it right to show their contempt for it when they had a chance? Wasn't it rather being a good sport? It is an appeal to the adventurous,sporting nature charaeteristic of youth and unfortunately some are being exploited and some are being deluded by the clamor. It is significantly the same erowd that was profiting by the traffie shattered by Jesus that gave itself to the use of youth in discrediting Him in the eyes of the people and today the scene is repeating itself. It is the followers of Christ who are being most bitterly assailed by those whose business of home, ability and character wrecking has been made illegal. Propaganda of every sort is being poured into the ears of youth in the name of their liberties that have been taken away. Youth must be protected from the deadly home brew by building a great brewery and a handsome distillery where truckloads may be substituted for the occasional bottle that must be kept hidden. That is, get the small pox and you won't have to be vaccinated! And look who is giving the advice.

BAYARD

Fraternal organizations in this town are beginning to take on new life. For years after the war and the big coal strike, interest lagged and the lodges were hard pressed to hold together, several lodges here dropping entirely out of existence, but several of the remaining lodges, especially the Knights of Pythias and the Odd Fellows, are rapidly rebuilding their strength. By consolidation of Fort Lodge of Gormania and Potomac Lodge, No. 108, of Bayard, the Odd Fellows lodge has gained about twenty members, and this together with new members and a large number of reinstated members, has put the lodge in the front rank. Victory Lodge, K. of P., is also taking in quite a number of new members, with the result that both organizations have excellent prospects ahead of them. District Deputy Grand Master Luke McDowell, of Keyser, attended the meeting of Potomac Lodge of Odd Fellows on last Saturday night and presided at the consolidation exercises of Fort Lodge with Potomac Lodge. Paul Hawk was given the initiatory degree. after which a recess was declared and refreshments served.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

Another of our well-known and substantial citizens in the person of Mrs. Huldah Lower, aged 83 years, has just passed on and her remains are being interred this afternoon in the Pleasant Valley cemetery. Rev. E. R. Hauser, of Clearfield, Pa., has purchased a lot here and is planning to erect a building thereon and to have it ready for occupancy this summer.

Applications to both buy and rent cottages are already coming in at this early date, which gives an encouraging outlook for the summer.

Concerning Complaints

THERE are many more pleasant topics to discuss with our customers—but we believe an occasional straightforward talk on this one will do us all good.

We would rather have a complaint than a customer who feels he has a grievance—because in knowing about it lies our only opportunity to set it straight.

If we make a mistake, we'll admit and rectify it. And if the trouble lies with some unavoidable circumstance, we'll give you the "why" of it.

We modestly admit that our complaint desk is not very busy. But we're out to give unqualified satisfaction, so we want you to understand our viewpoint on complaints.

WILL YOU BE CONSISTENT?

"The American people must not surrender their priceless heritage of self-government."

The above is what the sage

The above language is that of Governor Ritchie of Maryland, and was used by him in an address delivered before a woman's club in Philadelphia one day last week.

Will Governor Ritchie be consistent and give his approval to legislation that will give the people of Garrett county this "priceless heritage of self-government" by allowing them to elect all local officers now appointed by the executive.

As matters now stand all these officers are hand picked by one or two members of Governor Ritchie's committee in the county.

Are you consistent, Governor? You may have an opportunity to show that you are.

HARD ON GOV. RITCHIE.

Friends of Governor Ritchie, of Maryland, who have been grooming him for the Democratic nomination for President, may be shocked by the news from Chicago.

A New York correspondent has recently interviewed George E. Brennen, Democratic boss, who has Chicago "sewed up." Mr. Brennan is loud declaring that Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, will "walk away" with the Democratic nomination, and, furthermore, will be elected. He will get, according to Mr. Brennan, the Democratic delegates from almost every part of the country except the Southern States, where the Democratic votes on election day comes from. These states still baffle Mr. Brennan. But the latter was never more enthusiastic. Why "Al" could snatch delegates right from under the nose of W. McAdoo if "Al" wished to do so, says Mr. Brennan.

The New York Governor, according his admirer, could beat any candidate the Republicans might select. All of which should jar Governor Ritchie.

Only recently the Maryland potentate visited Chicago. He was under the wing of Brennan. Governor Ritchie went there to be looked over. Thousands did look him over. They were of all classes, sound and respectable Democrats and gangsters also. After he returned, having discoursed on the fundamentals of our government, praise was showered upon him. Mr. Brennan was pleased. But now Mr. Brennan comes out with a loud war whoop for Governor Smith, thus leaving Governor Ritchie in the lurch. That is politically unkind treatment. The Chicago boss might have permitted the Maryland man to dream on sweetly. He should not be awakened so sharply.

However, according to Washington statements, the governor evidently is not so confident as is the Chicago boss, for Mr. Smith is said to be planning to run for the United States Senate against Senator Wadsworth—Wilmington Morning News.

THE MOUNTAIN IMPOSSIBLE TO CLIMB.

Many a young rural teacher in the public schools who began her teaching experience last fall is falling by the wayside. After several months of school she feels that she is still at the foot of the mountain of successful teaching and has lost hope of climbing it. Now she longs for a friendly word from some one who has climbed many mountains and knows how to help others climb! But often no such person comes.

The teacher is conscious that she has not mastered the situation, but she knows not how to master it. She forgets what she learned in the school which prepared her for teaching and reverts to the ways in which she was taught. Often discouragement becomes so complete that she says, "I think I shall quit. I shall never be able to do anything with these children." Sometimes she quits in reality. Oftener she quits trying and does less creditable work than her ability warrants.

In Garrett county where there are rural school supervisors a different picture presents itself. Long before Thanksgiving the supervisor had visited every beginning teacher. Understanding the teacher's problems thru her own experience as a county teacher, the supervisor gave her the benefit of her own experience and extensive preparation. She helped the teacher plan her work and make the childish leaders in mischief her allies. She restored the teacher's confidence in herself.

Mountain climbing is exhilarating when progress is possible. The adventure of teaching a rural school compares in many ways with it. Guides are necessary in both cases. Increasing numbers of teachers will teach better and be happier while teaching when every section of every State provides local rural supervisors to assist county superintendents and the young teachers.

SUPPRESSED BOOKS

A recent decree of the Soviet government provides for rigid inspection of all libraries to which the public has access, and the elimination of all books "tainted by religion" or dealing with religious or moral subjects sympathetically. Along with these must go books which discuss the land question, economics and politics along the anti-Bolshevist lines.

The ban on the latter group, too, comes at a time when the Soviet leaders in practice are hedging on their principles. Their retreat from communism is to be covered up in the libraries, if possible.

this sort of thing won't work very long. Religion cannot be routed permanently in this way. Neither can economic and political ideas and questionings be forever silenced by the destruction of books on the subject.

The contents of books are the first thoughts in men's minds, and neither Russian radicals or American fundamentalists can stop people from thinking. Russia's progress may be greatly retarded by such rash and ill-considered actions, but eventually that rich land with its fundamentally intelligent people will work its way out into a saner civilization.

COME ON UP!

On the bulletin board of a large manufacturing company in Chicago there appears the following which is worthy of republication here:

Look back over 1925. Be honest with yourself. Did you endeavor to give the boss, at all times, just a little more than he paid for or expected? Did you make a real effort to learn more about the business that you might be more valuable to the boss and to yourself? Did you do any outside studying in preparation for the next step up?

In this organization we do not pay for what an employe knows, but what he does. We do not pay for what is in your head but for what comes out of it. Production, or results, is the sole measure of your ability and your compensation is based on what you have done. Just as soon as you do more you will earn more.

Your department head, or your foreman, has no fear that you will "get his job." He is afraid you won't. He knows that when you push him out of his job you simultaneously push him up the ladder. It is to his interest to find and keep men who can "get his job."

Sales competition in our business is very keen. We have to work hard to keep our sales volume up. We must constantly seek new fields—new markets. Production costs in this plant are too large. We are constantly searching for new methods that will reduce our production costs. The officers of this company have a lot of work to do. We need help—good help. Come on up!

FEDERAL TIME-KILLERS

Congressman Martin L. Davey has been asked by the National Association of Federal Employees for "precise information regarding the source of his figures," after his drastic arraignment of the government employees as "loafers, time-killers and buck-passers." He replies:

"I have used my eyes and my ears, my experience in business and my experience with the departments of the government, as a member of Congress, and I have also used logic and my common sense.

"I would guarantee that any capable business executive would run the business end of the government with less than half of the 500,000 employes, if he could use ordinary business ability and discretion, and could be unafraid of the foolish laws and red tape that now tie the hands of the chief executive and his associates.

"Furthermore, such a business executive, under those conditions, would render some real service to the American people, which they are not now getting. If you could talk with the multitude of citizens of the United States who have tried to get answers or service from their government and have failed, and have turned away in disgust, you would know what I mean."

Yes, many of us know what he means. And while there are many fine, competent people in the government service, in the main he is probably right.

The departmental employees are not necessarily to blame on the whole. Conditions make them what they are, and also make them, little by little, unable to see themselves as others see them.

Executive heads are partly responsible. Congress is largely responsible for encouraging or ignoring existing conditions, and might do much to remedy them by providing authority for such re-organization as President Coolidge and other executives have asked.

WHO GETS TAX REDUCTION?

The bills that are being put through Congress to lop off millions of federal taxes will benefit the great mass of the taxpayers, including the large taxpayer, the small taxpayer and the non-taxpayer.

Tax reduction is inevitably a great stimulant to industry, to investment and to the inauguration of new enterprises, because it means a lowering of production costs.

Now it is a fact that cost of production is almost inevitably passed on to the consumer, as much as raw material and labor costs, only the item of taxation is a permanent one liable to be increased by State and local authorities.

It is not easily controverted that the sale price of an article, which must be the total cost of production plus a profit, and all cost of operation, is finally taxed upon the consumer. And so it comes about that all are benefited by tax reduction.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

A Garrett County Lime Campaign.

At least four-fifths of the farm land of Garrett county requires lime to produce a profitable crop. The poor and unproductive land of the county is invariably sour and many of the good soils would be more productive if lime were used more liberally. When a soil begins to need lime it is a waste of time and energy to continue to cultivate it until this need is supplied, since the economic use of manure and fertilizers is dependent upon the lime supply.

Because of the fact that lime is so greatly needed in the county, a county-wide lime campaign is being organized by the County Extension Service in co-operation with the public schools, farm organizations and local banks. The purpose of the campaign is to instruct the farmers as to the amount of lime their farms need and to encourage them to meet these deficiencies as much as possible.

The campaign will start as soon as the weather permits with a series of lectures throughout the county. These lectures will be by specialists from the University of Maryland. Their subjects will be on lime and its relation to agriculture and will be accompanied by motion pictures or lantern slides. Immediately following these lectures the school children throughout the county will be instructed how to take soil samples and asked to bring them in to their school teacher, samples of their fathers' or neighbors' fields. These samples will then be forwarded to the nearest agricultural high school or office of the County Agent to be tested.

The local banks have very graciously agreed to pay five cents for each sample brought in by the children. Each sample must be accompanied by a certificate signed by the teacher, pupil or person from whom the sample was obtained. Upon completion of the testing the farmers will be notified direct as to the lime requirements of their farms.

Much of the lime required in this county can be supplied from local outcrops. Many of these outcrops have been analyzed and found to be of good quality. Deserving farmers who buy lime will find that all the banks are only too glad to assist with the financing of the lime in large or small quantities.

W. CLAYTON JESTER,
County Agent.

THE NEWER VERSION.

Adam was the first man, Eve was his spouse;
They lost their job by stealing fruit, and went to keeping house;
They lived together happily and peaceful in the main,
Until they had a baby boy and went to raising Cain.

Esau was a farmer of the wild and wooly make;
His father gave him half a farm and half to brother Jake—
He seemed to think his title to it wasn't very clear,
For he sold his half to Jakie for a sandwich and a beer.

Solomon was a wise guy: he had lots of cash;
Along the Queen of Sheba came and Solly made a mash;
He seemed to think that royalty was rather underpaid,
So he took to writing proverbs, tho he was a king by trade.

Jonah was a fisherman, so runs the ancient tale;
Took trans-Atlantic passage in the steerage of a whale;
He jumped around so lively that the whale was sore distressed;
Then Jonah pushed the button and the whale did all the rest.

Joseph was a shepherd boy, the Bible stories tell us,
His golf coat was so stunning that it made his brothers jealous;
So they sold him into Egypt for a small consideration,
Where he made a million dollars on a big grain speculation.

Bits of News from Mason School

Dear Fellows Schools and Communities:—

Won't you please slip over and make room for a little news from our school?

Even though we are having a great deal of snow, we are still up and doing our very best.

A literary society has been organized in our school and is sponsored by the sixth and seventh grades. We are very enthusiastic over our new undertaking and think it will mean much in our school and outside life. The officers of our society are as follows: President, William Kelley; vice-president, Genevieve Martin; secretary and treasurer, Helen Fike.

We are thoroughly convinced that ours is "a happy school room," for quite often in the past two weeks we have had a visitor who sometimes joins us in our song. This visitor is a tiny bird that has found shelter in the attic. We think maybe he gets lonely at times and comes down to see what is going on. He has gotten quite tame; in fact several days ago one of the little first grade pupils put some crumbs (not having salt) on his tail and caught him. He has become the pet of all and we like him to come and visit us.

COURTESY smooths the way

Sir Walter Raleigh threw his cloak on the ground for a queen to walk on—and this simple act of courtesy is remembered for centuries, while more important events of his life are forgotten.

Courtesy is a grace that is never out of fashion. Its quality is the same, whether it is expressed by a romantic gesture of a bygone age, or in the amenities of a modern bank's service to its depositors.

NEW B. & O. LOCOMOTIVE IS TWO ENGINES IN ONE

Converted In Sixty-Four Working Days in The Company's Shops at Cumberland

The Baltimore and Ohio locomotive, No. 7162, which has been rebuilt along the lines of a Mallet type of engine, with two smokestacks and two water tanks at the Baltimore and Ohio shops in Cumberland, was given a try-out Saturday and Sunday in the freight service of the railway company over this division of the road.

Engineman J. L. Pugh and Fireman J. V. Elbon manned the gigantic locomotive and on its trial trip, E. V. Snow, fuel expert of the company, with headquarters at Connellsville, was in the cab making observations on the fuel demands of the monster on the trip from Cumberland to Grafton.

The rebuilt locomotive was converted at Cumberland in about sixty-four working days by Baltimore and Ohio shopmen, at a cost of approximately $25,000. It functions as a double-header, or like two locomotives. The smokestacks are close together, one being an outlet for the front and the other for the rear engine. It carries 185 pounds of steam. The two water tanks have a combination capacity of 19,000 gallons and a low pressure exhaust injector is another feature.

C. A. Gill, Baltimore, who is superintendent of motive power of the railroad, said the construction of the new locomotive was an experiment and from observations made in the try-out of the first days of its operations the engine was a success. Gratified at the success of the reconstruction of the engine Mr. Gill said another of the type would be immediately built.

LIFE'S UNEVEN COURSE.

By F. F. CORLISS.

(This article is written by request and the title selected by a reader of The Republican. I presume the inquirer wonders why human lives should be so diverse and varied in the blessings and burdens which we enjoy and endure.—F. F. C.)

Because the life that courses the blood stream in all of us is one and the same, whether found in a red man, a black man or a white man. In the vegetable kingdom and in animal life below man, nature through her cosmic consciousness works life into material forms of a fixed type—fallows a pattern, shows design.

Nature works from a unity of substance to a vast complexity in forms, diverse in color, taste, fragrance, beauty and utility, and when we take a picture of nature as a whole it shows harmony.

Below man, nature shows diversity but never perversity.

Life in man has been raised to a state of self-consciousness and he has been given a conscience and freedom of the will and instinctively told to chart his own course in life.

That he has the power of choice between two courses of action, one of which is right and the other wrong—one brings him rewards in this world and the other brings hmi penalties.

Man is mind—his body but the vehicle for his expression. Mind is all creative. It generates our thought. Thought is the mind's one and only faculty. Good and evil are products of the same force called mind. What we call the devil is simply the uncontrolled, misdirected energies of the objective mind.

Though the influence of heredity, the objective mind is more inclined to things carnal than to things spiritual.

Man, like his Maker, is dual-minded. The positive side of the subjective mind is will. The negative side is intellectual.

The positive side of the objective mind is desire; the negative side is reason.

Man is a creature of many desires and emotions. In our unsophisticated early stages of life the desire aspect of our objective minds is dominant and apt to control us—in fact does control us until we have learned the art of self-control which is man's greatest attainment.

We never acquire self-control until we awaken the sleeping will and electrically connect it its negative. Will and ing can accomplish w

Psychologists teach us that can be what he wills to be and t what he is now is the result of all past thinking.

While this statement is an exagge ation of facts, still it contains a gre truth. This statement would be a truth were it not a fact that man more or less guided by unseen force by heredity, environment and the in fluence of suggestion from others. So as individuals we are not wholly to blame for being where we are on the scale of life's mental and moral achievements.

In the drama of life all kinds of characters are essential to the perfection of the play. And so we have kings and queens, valets and butlers. We have the rich and the poor; the high caste and the low; the wise and the ignorant; the sick and the healthy; the criminal and the kind Samaritan; virtue and vice; good and evil; and why?

Because it is in the cosmic scheme of things that they should be so.

And yet man and his Maker are ever progressive, ever working to reach higher levels whose ultimate goal is harmony and unity in life, mind and purpose—the perfection of nature as a whole through the perfection of her finite parts.

Without some evil in the world we would not know what good is.

All our faculties and appetites are given us to use and enjoy in moderation. Life's well-being demands that our forces be kept in equilibrium. Extremes bring pain and suffering, and yet suffering is wha tteaches and disciplines mankind the most.

We can gain knowledge from books. But wisdom and understanding come with the years and are acquired only from observation and experience.

The man who only knowns life from the salon or drawing-room knows but little of it until he contacts it in life's kitchen, market place, farms and factories.

In real life we see much sin, sorrow, suffering, cruelty and crime in both rich and poor that is preventable and needless, allowing us to be the judge. The prime object of being here on earth is to gain wisdom thru experience and the nobility of character.

In the end our bodily experiences—joys and sorrows and sufferings constitute the mind's scaffolding with which it builds itself into a condition for the appreciation of higher and better things.

We have to assume that "whatever is, is right," or deny the Creator's omniscience.

Why Not Make Oakland Bigger, Better and More Prosperous, Asks a New-Comer to the Garrett County Town.

To the Editor of The Republican.

The writer, being a new-comer, is not so well qualified to answer his own question as many of the long-time citizens; still he may elicit an interest in the subject that others may take up and make valuable.

The writer has no financial interests to serve, but he has never been envious of the prosperity of others. He simply loves Oakland and appreciates its many fine people.

The competition between towns and cities for the getting of big industries to locate with them is as great as competition is between merchants and manufacturers.

And that town that can offer the greatest inducements in low taxes, cheap labor, cheap rents, cheap fuel, or power, and good shipping facilities, gets the business.

As the writer views the subject, Oakland is under quite a handicap in these particulars—not enough inducements.

The summer tourists spending of money has dwindled to a negligible quantity. So that at present the merchants and professional men are dependent on the amount of profits that the farmers can spend in Oakland.

Farmers are like men on a fixed monthly wage or salary. In a five-year period their average yearly income can be estimated about like the salaried man's.

Out of the farmer's fixed income there is a limit to how much he can spend with the merchants.

Oakland being situated in an agricultural district, its growth is limited by the prosperity of the farmer.

We have a good creamery and a good cannery which helps the farmer and indirectly Oakland. But if a way can be found by which the farmer can quadruple his income, then his spending money will benefit Oakland by this increase. So I have been trying to think what the farmer can raise at a good profit in addition to what he is now raising.

Cellulose is a substance found in all foods of a vegetable origin. It is especially abundant in the stalks and leaves of plants like celery, lettuce, spinach; in oat, wheat and rye straw and in corn stalks. It is found in wood; it is the structural frame work or walls which surround the vegetable cells.

Artificial silk is made from lustra cellulose; so is glucose; another product is viscose. Cellulose enters into the making of high explosives; in fact has many valuable uses that space will not permit enumerating.

Straw and corn stalks do not give the farmer at present much profit, but they are rich in cellulose. So if a factory in the manufacture of artificial silk could be induced to locate in Oakland and the farmers would agree to supply it with the raw material, I can see how it would benefit Oakland as a community.

The manufacture of silk from cellulose is a growing industry.

Unless other kinds of manufacturing can be established in or near Oakland the farmers will form the basic source of revenue for the town's people for many years to come.

So it is up to the co-operation of the merchants and the property owners to make Oakland grow.

On close examination my suggestions may not be feasible, and others, I hope, may find better ones. There are always opportunities for business growth if we search hard enough to find them, for where there is a will there is a way.

Oakland is a beautiful place to live in, viewed from the standpoint of a residence, but it needs more workers and more pay-rolls to make it prosper as it deserves to F. F. CORLISS.

How to Stop That Weakening Cough

Why let a heavy, stubborn cough wear you down when you can get speedy relief and often break it up completely in 24 hours through a remarkable new method based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs?

Here is the method: You simply take one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. It has a double action. It not only soothes and heals irritation, but also removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. So with the cause removed the worst cough soon disappears.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF CHARTERING OF B. & O.

Will Occur One Year From Next Sunday, February 28, 1927.

Work on Road Begun July 4

A year from next Sunday, February 28, 1927, will mark the hundreth anniversary of the issuance of a charter to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company by the State of Maryland.

This grant, the representatives of the railroad company say, was the beginning of railroading on the Western Hemisphere and "of a new era in civilization, the like of which has never been witnessed in the history of the world."

Cumberland was the first western terminus and looms big in any history of the road.

Steam railroad transportation, it is noted, has contributed more to the growth of the United States and its solidity than any other agency.

"The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad was to transportation," says s statement issued by the company, "what the Declaration of Independence was to the forefathers of its founders. The spirit that imbued them was much the same. Although they had no battles to fight, their's was a great conflict, to compete with the unknown, the untried, the unsolved. Their was the daring and courage of the true pioneer to venture, to risk and to achieve."

One of the actuating forces of a small group of Baltimoreans who had the courage to start the road was the fact that Baltimore was losing its grip as a trade center. Baltimore had held its own with other centers of population until the canals were built to the north of it, and the citizens realized that they must do something or permit their city to fall to the rear as a market.

The first general meeting of the citizens to confer upon the subject of building a railroad was held in Baltimore on February 2, 1827. Ten days later a call was issued for the business men interested in the project to meet at the residence of Geo. Brown and to take "into consideration the best means of restoring the City of Baltimore to that position of the Western trade which had been diverted from it by the introduction of steam navigation and other causes."

At the second meeting William Patterson was made chairman and David Winchester, secretary, and a committee was appointed to meet the following week. The committee included Philip E. Thomas, Benjamin C. Howard, George Brown, Talbot Jones, Joseph W. Patterson, Evan Thomas and John V. L. Mahon.

At the third meeting, on February 19, of the same year, the committee made its report and recommended that measures be taken to construct a double railroad between the City of Baltimore and some suitable point on the Ohio River, by the most eligible and direct route; that a charter to incorporate the company to execute that work be obtained as early as practicable.

Referring to this activity of the citizens of Baltimore in starting the railroad, the Baltimore Gazette of February 18, 1827, said: "To the citizens of Baltimore belongs the credit of being the first in the Union to organize an association for the purpose of building a railroad for general trade and transportation."

On February 28, the capital stock of the company was authorized at $3,000,000, and by March 8, the Virginia State Legislature had confirmed the Baltimore & Ohio's charter. Subscription books were open for stock in the new company, closing on March 31, when 48,781 shares had been taken, including 5,000 allotted to the City of Baltimore. Total subscriptions in the city was $4,178,000, which was absorbed by 22,000 subscribers.

On the Fourth of July, 1828, construction work on the Baltimore and Ohio was actually begun when Charles Carroll of Carrollton, last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence, cast the first spadeful of earth. The first stone laid still marks the spot in West Baltimore, where the railroad got its start.

It stands where it was originally placed, situated on the Mount Clare branch of the Baltimore and Ohio between Mount Clare Junction and the Claremont stockyards, south of Wilkins avenue and Millington Lane. It is within 500 feet of the Carrollton Viaduct, also built by the Baltimore and Ohio in 1829, and the oldest stone arch bridge in the world, still used for heavy railroad traffic today.

HISTORIC STREAM AT ANDERSONVILLE GET FLOWS

Stream That Brought Relief to Civil War Prisoners Is a Steady Gusher.

While Georgia and the Southland have recovered from a drouth of unprecedented severity, during which many streams and water sources became dry and all records for aridity were broken, now comes a historical and human interest story that many a surviving veteran of the Northern armies of the sixties will read with much interest, as will also younger people who know very little about the hardships and sufferings of the original "boys in blue," or of the valiant men who "wore the gray."

It is the story of a cold spring of pure water that continued to flow from the side of a beautifully foliaged hill on which, some sixty years ago, was located the Andersonville military prison of the Southern Confederate army.

The precious and old reliable gusher referred to is known as "Providence Spring," in Sumter county. Local history has it that in the closing days of the war between the States, that section suffered from a drouth which dried up all small streams and wells, leaving no water supply for the many thousands of Federal prisoners of war confined within the over-crowded and fever-stricken camp.

Quinine had been made contraband of war and none was available to relieve the burning fevers which created an insatiable thirst for water.

These conditions existed for days, while the men, in their delirium, dug holes in the earth with their bare hands in their attempts to strike water. Finally, after having reached the end of their resources and too weary and exhausted to put forth more physical effort, they dropped to their knees and prayed to God to send them relief.

While they were still praying a bolt of lightning struck the hillside, just outside the "dead-line," and a fountain of sparkling, cold water gushed forth to cool the parched tongues whose prayers had been heard.

Today one may visit the prison camp and find holes marked off and enclosed within iron fences and the staked off "dead-line," which was extended to bring the spring within its confines, bearing evidence to what took place there in the '60s. The fountain has been housed in an ornate work of masonry, in which is inserted a bronze tablet identifying it as "Providence Spring," and relating the above interesting story.

Adjoining the camp is Andersonville National Cemetery, covering 120 acres, and where rest in eternal peace nearly 14,000 of the Northern soldiers who succumbed to the ravages of fever and other diseases. Virtually all of the names on the plain stone slabs are preceded by the word "Private," with here and there one marked "Unknown."

TELEPHONE MANNERS

A careless man was Jules M. Snook;
He never looked in the telephone book,
He got wrong parties most of the time
And swore at the service and called it a crime.

A silly thing was Lizzie Zedd;
She held the 'phone behind her head.
When people cried "We cannot hear,"
She always answered, "Huh! That's queer!"

A busy chap was Jasper Jupp;
He called a number, then hung up.
"Hello!" the other folks would call
And get no answer back at all.

Extremely prone was Maisie Miggle
To give the hook a frantic jiggle.
She drove a dozen Centrals crazy,
But that was nothing much to Maisie.

A slothful man was Giles G. Goff;
He used to leave receivers off.
Repair gangs traveled miles and miles
To hang receivers up for Giles.

But worst of all was J. Neill Blaugh;
He answered every ring with "yaugh!"
It made your very blood congeal
To have to telephone J. Neill.

A thoughtless man was Jim DeBloom;
He'd place his calls, then leave the room.
When the parties were on the line,
Of J. DeBloom there was no sign.

VOLUME 51. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, MARCH 4, 1926 NUMBER 2.

AKLAND HAD THIRD FIRE IN MONTH OF FEBRUARY

Stubborn Blaze Early Sunday Morning Drove Thinly Clad People From Their Homes

Fire of an undetermined origin, but presumably from an overheated stove in the office of the Waingold Garage on Liberty street in Oakland Sunday morning at 3:30 o'clock, drove three families to the street, the majority of whom were clad in their night garments only with the mercury showing about 14 degrees above zero and a gale estimated at twenty miles an hour blowing.

The estimated monetary loss above the insurance is around $15,000.

The fire originated, as above stated, from an overheated stove in the lower or street floor of the Waingold Garage, a concrete and steel structure located on Liberty street, which was built but a few years ago by A. R. Martin to replace a frame structure on the same site destroyed by fire caused by an explosion of gasoline about five years ago. From the lower floor of the garage a flue led through the upper floors of the building passing through a partition separating a number of apartments on the second floor which were occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Waingold and their little son, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stahl and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Shahan. When the occupants of these apartments were awakened by the blowing of the fire whistle and the calling of some men who were awakened even before the blowing of the alarm, the whole upper floor of the main part of the structure was in flames with escape cut off by the burning of the stairway leading to the street below. Mr. and Mrs. Waingold and child and Mr. and Mrs. Shahan were fortunate in making their exit through a door and down an outside stairway to the rear of the building. Mr. and Mrs Stahl escaped by means of a ladder set up to a window of their apartment, all of whom went out in their night clothing. Mrs. Waingold's escape was so narrow that she was slightly burned about the neck and her hair was singed.

All the parties residing in the building, in addition to losing their wardrobes lost also their furniture and valuables.

The building ran through the block from Liberty street to an alley. On the street floor Mr. Stahl maintained a tire and automobile accessories store, on which he carried insurance approximating $4,000. His stock was valued at $8,000. From the store nothing was saved except a few automobile bumpers.

Adjoining the Stahl store on the west side was a warehouse occupied by Mr. Waingold as a storage. In this compartment were two trucks and a carload of hay. Both trucks and hay were consumed. On the east side of the Stahl store were the office, show room and the large automobile storage maintained by the owner of the building. Everything in the office was destroyed but the cars and other property stored was taken to the street and no loss resulted.

The upper floor of the structure over the automobile storage along with the repair shop located on the alley were not touched by the fire except where the roof was burned thru in several places.

West of the Waingold building is located a two-story brick structure owned by Mr. A. D. Naylor. In it is located the Haggerty Cigar Company's factory and on the second floor the family of Mr. W. R. Savage resided. The furniture of Mr. Savage's household was water soaked owing to the fact that two windows looking out on the Waingold building were destroyed and from these the fire was fought. The cigar company also sustained considerable damage from the water which flowed through from the upper floor of this building

The fire was hard fought from the moment the fire apparatus appeared until it was under control, and it required the combined efforts of every dible bodied man to accomplish this.

Three streams were used at times, in addition to the chemical engines, which rendered good service in saving adjacent property, especially that of Mr. Gorman Thayer, occupied as a residence by Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Hmebaugh and family. A line of hose was run to the rear of the garage from a plug on Second street and with the water pouring into the building from two or three directions the fire was kept confined to the one building and it fai

less than a half of it burned.

Flying embers, carried by the high wind, endangered the surrounding property, especially the William-James Hotel, located across the alley and for a time it was a question what the outcome would be, but after several hours' hard work on the part of the firemen the flames were subdued.

The hosemen were somewhat handicapped in their work by reason of faulty hose and valuable time was also lost at the start of the fire in being unable to make the quick connection, so necessary at that stage of the fire, with the street plugs. This latter trouble was owing to the lack of proper tools and spanners which had become mislaid in some manner.

Oakland's fire fighters are in a class of their own when it comes down to hard work. At times they appear to be reckless and take chances which under ordinary conditions would cause the ordinary onlooker to shudder, but thus far they have escaped serious injury.

MINING CLASS AT GORMAN SHOWING MUCH PROGRESS

Course Is Being Directed by Prof. Lewis C. Hutson of Vocational Education Bureau

The class participating in coal mining under the auspices of the Maryland Bureau of Mines at Gorman, Maryland, is progressing under the direction of Prof. L. C. Hutson, director of vocational education of the Maryland Bureau of Mines. Assisting Prof. Hutson is District Inspector John B. Watkins. The course will cover the same scope of subjects so successfully given at Kitzmiller and more recently at Frostburg. The number of instructors will be augmented later on by Dr. J. J. Rutlege, chief engineer of the Maryland Bureau of Mines, whose lecture on new and improved coal mining methods now coming into use created considerable interest among the miners of the Georges Creek region. The course covering electrifying of mines has been revised and compares favorably with courses of a similar nature offered by other coal mining states.

Prof. L. C. Hutson will also give instruction of the subject covering general mining which was so well received by the mining men at Frostburg last summer.

Coal Mine Costs, New Subject.

A new subject has been added covering instruction on coal mine costs. This course opens the way for further enlightenment for mine officials and workers who have not had opportunities present them before on this subject.

Adding greatly to the general interest of the classes will be the subjects of first aid and mine rescue. It is generally admitted that there is a crying need for instruction on these important subjects in this region. Its importance is forcibly brought to light when considering it effects the home, family and earning power of the mine worker.

The subjects covering mine wiring, track bonding, explosives and drawing will be discussed from a practical standpoint.

This course in coal mining is the first of its kind ever given in this section and falls in line with the growing tendency within recent years, to encourage and maintain developments in the promotion of educational facilities and methods among employees of all classes of industry.

Educating the Miner.

The necessity of encouraging educational movements has become a paramount issue with those who realize the great results obtained through education among coal miners This is particularly true in mining regions where educational facilities are not as they should be. Where educational discussions are not indulged in, the miner simply mines digs coal and that is all. He is entirely devoid of any knowledge of engineering of coal mining, where it comes from or where it goes to; he is not informed with regard to the manner of the movements of the coal business cycle. The coal mining class of the Maryland Bureau of Mines at Gorman, Md., which meets on Tuesday nights fills this great need for education among mine workers in this section.

David McKinley, mine foreman at the mines of the Emmons Coal Mining Company, at Bayard, who is an ardent booster of these mine classes, attends the classes regularly, when the mine classes were held in Kitzmiller three years ago Mr. McKinley was one of the class from Bayard.

BOND TELEGRAPHER DIES AT HIS POST OF DUTY

Henry D. Hayes, 54, B. & O. Operator Succumbed To Heart Attack Saturday

Henry D. Hayes, 54 years old, of Piedmont, W. Va., a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad telegraph operator and signalman at Bond, five miles from Piedmont, was found dead at 7:10 o'clock Saturday morning on the floor of the signal tower. The body was found by Harry L. Comp, who arrived at the tower to relieve Hayes. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

The telephone receiver was still clasped over Hayes' head when Comp discovered the operator's body lying on the floor, near his overturned chair. Hayes was talking to a car inspector at Big Curve over the telephone at five minutes to seven and at that time gave no intimation that he was ill.

His trick at the Bond tower was from midnight until 7 o'clock in the morning. When he left the home of Mrs. Anna Boyles, Piedmont, where he boarded, on Friday evening, he was apparently in good health.

Hayes was placed on the light engine which brought Comp to the tower and was taken to the Hoffman Hospital at Keyser, where he was pronounced dead.

A native of Richmond, Va., where his daughter, Mrs. Wallace Owens, now lives, Mr. Hayes entered the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in 1905, resigning in 1916 to accept a position as train director for the Washington Terminal Company, at Washington, D. C. He returned to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in 1922, having been assigned to the tower at Bond. During his early association with the Baltimore and Ohio, Mr. Hayes worked as telegrapher in signal tower in the vicinity of Grafton. Besides his daughter, Mrs. Owens, of Richmond, Mr. Hayes is survived by a son, Robert, of Panama. His wife died several years ago.

The normal position of semaphores on signal towers of the Baltimore and Ohio are red and the death of an operator would not disrupt the signal system or necessarily result in accident, it was said by officials.

Knights of Pythias Banquet Will Be Held Friday, April 9th.

To what extent was the membership present at the regular session of Garrett Lodge No. 113, Knights of Pythias? A goodly number was in attendance, but actual tabulation disclosed the fact that the number of vacant chairs predominated over those occupied. Those who were there, however, will corroborate the statement that the degree team is a credit to Garrett lodge. A splendid exhibition of team co-operation was given. With some more experience and rehearsal this team will be a fit competitor for state honors should the occasion ever develop. Let us support and encourage this team.

To sum up the night, it was an evening well spent and as a result three new names appear on our roster, the honors of Knighthood having been conferred upon them.

We take pleasure in announcing the date for the banquet, of which much has been written. You must use your own discretion as to whether you will begin fasting now or later on in order to reserve plenty of room for the feast, for such it will be. Perhaps it would be wise to postpone the curtailment of your rations for awhile at least, as April 9th is yet a long way off and history proves that those who sought to attract attention and gain publicity by starving themselves, now slumber peacefully beneath the sod while slabs of marble stand sentinel in mute testimony to the effectiveness of such a course. We urge you, therefore, to continue to appease the cravings of your appetite until then, but by all means save some room for that occasion.

Some questions have been asked as to who are responsible for the success of this banquet. Next week you will find some answers to these questions. If your name should be omitted and you are helping with the work, don't feel slighted.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE.

A Card of Thanks.

I take this method of thanking the men of Oakland for their courageous efforts in saving my building from complete destruction in the town's recent disastrous fire.

FOUR TOTS OF FORMER RESIDENTS BURN TO DEATH

Were Children of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Snyder, Recently of Bittinger—Buried there Sunday

Saturday morning, at Indian Head, Pa., by the burning of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Snyder, formerly of Bittinger, Garrett county, their entire family, consisting of four small children, was burned to death, the fire having originated from the accidental upsetting of a kerosene lamp in the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Snyder, who were at their barn doing the morning's work of milking the cows.

The children were all of very tender age and were buried in one grave at the Bittinger cemetery on Sunday afternoon at five o'clock, the Rev. E. E. Campbell, pastor of the Lutheran church of that village officiating.

The names and ages of the children were Pauline, aged 4; Ruth, 2; Bernadine, 1 year, and an infant one month old.

WAS BRADDOCK KILLED BY ONE OF HIS OWN SOLDIERS?

Old Pennsylvania Frontiersman Claimed He Fired Fatal Shot at The British Commander

One of the most romantic tragedies in American history, and particularly interesting to the people of this section because of its enactment in this locality, is the Braddock expedition from Fort Cumberland towards Fort Duquesne, and subsequent death of the brave English general.

Recently there has been a revival of the story that Braddock's death was at the hands of one of his own army, a big Pennsylvanian frontiersman named Tom Fawcett having declared, it is said, that he fired the dock because the latter struck down his brother.

Terrific Confusion.

The confusion and terror of the territory. He said that he shot Brad- Fayette county, Pa., and surrounding shot that killed the general.

Fawcett, who lived to be 110 years old was known to many residents of Braddock massacre was such that it would be hard to determine who did shoot the British leader. In the recently published "History of Allegany County" by Dr. James W. Thomas, no reference is made to the Fawcett story, but the scene at the time that Braddock ordered the retreat to Fort Cumberland is vividly described.

"The slaughter went on for hours," says the local history. "The ammunition was giving out; the officers were nearly all killed or wounded, not a singleaide but Washington being left; more than half the army had fallen, and the rest could do nothing where they were but die.

Shot As Retreat Began.

"Braddock gave the order to retreat and almost at the same moment a ball pierced his right arm and entered his lungs, inflicting a mortal wound. The retreat became a headlong flight, which the dying general in vain attempted to check. * * * General Braddock died on Sunday, July 13, 1755. He was wrapped in his cloak as a winding sheet and buried at daybreak Monday morning in the middle of the road that the army, in passing over the grave, might obliterate every trace of its whereabouts and thus avoid any desecration of the body by the Indians."

Braddock's grave, over which the British government erected a monument in 1913, is on the National Pike between Cumberland and Uniontown, and attracts the attention of thousands of tourists every year.

Whether Braddock fell from the bullet of the French and Indians or from the rifle of Tom Fawcett, one of his own soldiers, may never be known.

IN MEMORY.

Sophia Welch was born January 30th, 1919, and departed this life January 30th, 1926, her age, therefore, was exactly seven years. She leaves to mourn their sad loss a mother, a sister, a brother and a host of relatives and friends. Sophia was loved by all who knew her or associated with her. We cannot understand the calling away of our loved ones or friends, but surely it is not our will that is should be so, but "God's will be done" for this tender little flower was born on earth to bloom in heaven. Little Sophia was laid to rest in the Oakland cemetery beside her father, he departing this life in October, 1918, previous to her birth. HER UNCLE.

BLOOMINGTON YOUTH IS HELD IN OAKLAND JAIL

With Companion Is Arrested Following Burglarizing of Pattison's Store Saturday

William Wilson, 19, and Albert Riley, aged 17 years, both of Bloomington, Garrett county, were brought to Oakland early Sunday morning by Constable Andrew Shartzer following their arrest early that morning on two charges of burglary. They were held in jail until yesterday when at a hearing before Justice West Wilson was dismissed and Riley held under bond for his appearance at the June Term of Court Being unable to furnish the required bail he was remanded to jail.

Both boys reside at Bloomington. The charge against them was breaking into and robbing the store of G. C. Pattison and the pool room of O. C. Mille at Bloomington.

The pool room and store combined of Mr. Miller was robbed of shoes, belts and other wearing apparel, which was found by searching parties in an old outbuilding near the homes of the two boys. From the Pattison store a box of garden seeds, valued at $106, was carried away. This was found at the home of Riley who later confessed that he and his brother had gotten the contents of the box and had made a division of the property. The brother is still at large.

Young Wilson was dismissed as no evidence introduced at the hearing implicated him in the robbery.

Making the Children Rich

Parents live for their children, and whenever called upon, die for them also.

Every parent is in the position of the scorpion mother which, that its child may grow strong, allows its body to be consumed.

And even death does not relieve the parent from this responsibility, for what parent dies happy in the knowledge that he is leaving nothing to his children?

Mothers and fathers skimp and save for "a rainy day," but with the thought in the back of their heads that they must leave something for the children to "get started on." But there are things better than money to leave to children.

What will you, as a parent, confer upon your child? Money? Honor? Wisdom?. Or just a good name?

Great among parents of all time is Charles Lounsberry, penniless Englishman, who left behind this Last Will and Testament:

"That part of my interest which is known in law and recognized in sheep-bound volumes as my property being inconsiderable and non-account, I will make no disposition of in this, my will. My right to live, being but a life estate, is not at my disposal, but these things excepted, all else in the world I now proceed to devise and bequeath.

"ITEM. I give to all good fathers and mothers, in trust for their children, all good little words of praise and encouragement . . . and I charge said parents to use them justly, but generously as the needs of their children shall require.

"ITEM. I leave to children inclusively, but only for the term of childhood, all and every flower of the fields and blossoms of the woods with the right to play among them freely . . .And, I devise to children the banks of the brooks and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, and odors of the willows that dip therein and the white clouds that float high over the giant trees.

"And I leave to the children the long, long days to be merry in, in a thousand ways, and the night and the train of the Milky Way to wonder at. . . .

"ITEM. I devise to boys, jointly, all the useful, idle fields and commons where ball may be played, all pleasant waters where one may swim, all snowclad hills where one may coast, and all streams and ponds where one may fish, or where grim winter comes, one may skate, to hold the same for the period of their boyhood. And all meadows with the clover blossoms and butterflies thereon; the woods with their appurtenances, the squirrels and the birds and the echoes and the streams' noises, and all the distant places which may be visited, together with the adventures there found.

"ITEM. To lovers I devise their imaginary world, with whatever they may need, as the stars in the sky, the red roses by the wall, the bloom of the hawthorn, the sweet strains of music, and aught else thay may desire to figure to each other the lastingness and beauty of their love. . .

"ITEM. And to those who are no longer children or youth or lovers, I leave memory and bequeath to them the poems of Burns and Shakespeare and of other poets, if there be others, to the end that they may live the old days again, freely and fully, without tithe or diminution. . ."

"The Store of Dependable Merchandise"

ED MEMORIES OF D NATIONAL HIGHWAY

Historical Facts Not Hitherto Published Recalled by Aged Salisbury (Pa.) Lady.

By P. L. Livengood, in Meyersdale Republican.

Some time ago the writer had the great pleasure of spending a night and portion of a day with U. O. Blocher and his sisters, Mary and Sabina, who conduct a popular hotel at Little Crossings, less than a mile east of Grantsville, Md., on the National Pike. Their hostelrie has a name that appeals strongly to tourists, namely: "Dixie Tavern." The house is a large one and also very old, having been built 106 years ago. It has been completely renovated and remodeled, however, and today has modern conveniences, with just enough of the olden-time appearance left to create a special interest in the house and its surroundings, which are all very picturesque. After the writer's recent visit to Dixie Tavern he made some mention of it in his writings, which revived old memories in at least one person who has favored him with some intensely interesting reminiscences concerning Dixie Tavern and its surroundings.

Several histories of the National Pike have been written, of which Hon. T. B. Searight's is the most complete. It is a valuable and interesting work, but it was not written until 1894, a date long after much of the famous old road's early history and been forgotten, and many of those who figured prominently in making the road's early history had passed away, it is but natural that the Searight history is not as complete as it would have been if the author had compiled the work before he was himself an old man.

In its account of the taverns and tavern keepers, the Searight history makes the following statement: "There was no tavern at Little Crossings previous to the year 1836. Subsequent to that date a tavern was established there by Alexander Carlisle. His house was a large frame structure on the south side of the road, subsequently kept by John and Samuel McCurdy, and later at different times by David Johnson, Wm. Dawson, Elisha Brown, Jacob Conrad and David Mahoney. Although nearly twenty years elapsed from the building of the road before any landlord at Little Crossings beckoned the weary traveler to rest and refreshment, nevertheless, thereafter, and until business ceased on the line, the locality presented many and rare attractions."

Historian Searight was evidently not well pested on the tavern history of Little Crossings, as George Matthews, who died many years ago at Selbysport, Md., conducted a tavern there as early as 1832, and he was probably the first tavern-keeper to entertain the traveling public at that place. Who erected the tavern, the writer is unable to state, but Mr. Matthews kept tavern in the same building now known as "Dixie Tavern," and the old tavern-keepers mentioned in the foregoing paragraph also were proprietors of the same house in later years at different times.

The writer is indebted to Mrs. Ellen Glotfelty, of Salisbury, for the following interesting information concerning the early years of Dixie Tavern, when that hostelrie was conducted as a public house by her father, George Matthews, who seems to have been the first tavern-keeper at Little Crossings. Although Mrs. Glotfelty is almost 82 years old, her memory is still exceedingly good, and the information she gives was related to her by her parents and frequently discussed by them with each other in her presence. Mrs. Glotfelty does not recall what name Dixie Tavern went at by when her parents conducted it. She has no recollection of ever hearing her parents mention the house by a hotel name, but often heard her mother relate that she (Mrs. Matthews) was born in 1816, married at the age of 16 and that she and her husband went to house-keeping in 1832 at Little Crossings, where Mr. Matthews conducted a tavern in the same building which later was known as the old Stanton mansion, and is now known as Dixie Tavern.

They conducted the house as a tavern, and Mr. Matthews at the same time also conducted a general store and a blacksmith shop at Little Crossings. The store was a few feet east of the tavern on the same side of the road, and the blacksmith shop a short distance west on the same side. Mr. Matthews purchased his store from a man named Fielding Shepherd. His blacksmith shop was conducted by David Compton, a brother of Mrs. Matthews. Mrs. Glotfelty states that her parents conducted a hotel at Little Crossings from 1832 up to about 1842, and during that time entertained Generals Andrew Jackson, Santa Ana and thirty prominent Indians.

It is also said that General Zachary Taylor, eleventh President of the United States, once was a guest at this famous old tavern; but that was some years after it was conducted by Mr. Matthews. At the time Generals Jackson and Santa Ana stopped there during the Matthews proprietorship, they had their bodyguards with them, who watched and guarded those dignitaries very closely, seeming to fear that enemies might attempt to assassinate them. General Jackson was President of the United States at that time, and while exceedingly popular with a majority of the American people, he was just as unpopular with others and there was some ground for fearing assassination or at least some bodily harm.

On one occasion while Mr. and Mrs. Matthews kept tavern at Little Crossings, they received advance notice from one of the stage companies then operating on the pike that on a certain day thirty prominent Indians on their way to Washington to confer with "The Great White Father," would stop with them for dinner. The notification was coupled with the request to have lots of beef and potatoes boiled for the Indians, and such other things as they might see fit to prepare. They were also notified to roast several turkeys for a party of prominent white people who were scheduled to dine at their house the same day.

Ample provisions were made for the two big dinner parties. The stage coaches carrying the Indians arrived on schedule time, but the coaches carrying the white people scheduled to eat dinner at Little Crossings were running late, and in cases of that kind the drivers had orders to keep their horses moving until the lost time was made up. So on this occasion there was so much roast turkey for the expected guests who failed to stop that Mr. and Mrs. Matthews hardly knew what to do with it all. They accordingly decided to divide the toothsome birds with the Indians, who were delighted with the fine feast set before them.

At that time slavery was not yet abolished, and Mr. Matthews had two negro women whom he purchased from Jesse Tomlinson, who at that time conducted the tavern known as the Stone House, at the historic Little Meadows, about three miles east of Little Crossings. The slave women were both named Sarah, but after they came into the Matthews family one of them was renamed and thereafter went by the name of "Sook."

While the Indians were delighted with the feast set before them, and could hardly be restrained by the interpreter in charge of them from tearing the roast turkeys in shreds with their fingers in their eagerness to devour them, they nevertheless showed much contempt for the negro slaves and refused to receive any food from their hands. The attitude of the aboriginal Americans peeved Sook and Sarah exceedingly and they were excused from further duty in serving the Indians. The latter, however, showed due gratitude and friendliness toward the white people for the services rendered them.

Mrs. Glotfelty says her recollection of the incident as related to her in after years by her mother, is that there was a very prominent chief among the Indians entertained. In all probability the chief was Blackhawk, who with other Indians during the Jackson administration, went to Washington to confer with the "Great White Father" about certain wrongs for which they sought satisfaction and redress. Mrs. Glotfelty does not distinctly remember the name of the chief. She clearly recollects, however, of often hearing her parents relate how the Indians were dressed when enroute to Washington and the contrast between their apparel on the going trip and the return trip. There was only one squaw in the party, and all were dressed in the customary garb of their tribe while enroute to Washington, and that consisted of little more than a blanket wrapped about the body in a somewhat ingenious way. When they returned from Washington, the male Indians were dressed in suits of broadcloth, while the squaw was clad in a beautiful dress gaily decorated with glittering beads. The reader can imagine the exultation in the minds of the aboriginal Americans, and there is no doubt that the change which came into their minds through their pilgrimage to Washington was even greater than the change in the wearing apparel and personal appearance, which had been wrought before their return.

Although Mrs. Glotfelty has no personal recollections of the palmy days of the National Pike as a wagon and stage coach road, she heard her parents relate so many interesting things pertaining to the traffic on the pike nearly a century ago, and of incidents of that remote period, that those incidents now seem as almost a portion of her own life and experience.

She says her mother often told her of the rivalry between the stage coach companies and their dashing drivers in striving to give the best service and the fastest transportation. Her mother personally knew a stage coach driver who was knocked from his seat and killed while racing over the picturesque high-peaked stone bridge across the Casselman River at Little Crossings by the side-swiping of the vehicles. The accident caused great excitement at the time but did not discourage other daring Jehus from taking desperate chances to beat a rival driver to the end of his run.

Mrs. Glotfelty relates another incident that she frequently heard her parents speak of which occurred while they lived in what is now known as Dixie Tavern. There were no restrictions in the making or traffic in booze in those days and whiskey drinking was an almost universal habit.

One evening while quietly sitting in the public room of his tavern not long before his usual bedtime, Mr. Matthews was startled by a man rushing into the room, clad only in a nightgown, and frantically yelling, "For God's sake, George, stop them!" Mr. Matthews recognized the frightened intruder as a neighboring tavern-keeper who conducted a well-known hostelrie several miles east of Little Crossings. Mr. Matthews, however, could see nothing pursuing his neighbor, but the excited and terror-stricken visitor insisted that he was being pursued by snakes.

The man who saw the "snakes" had been drinking until he was seized by delirium tremens, commonly called "the snakes" or "jimjams." So it would seem that the "heavenly" whiskey of our forefathers, which we hear praised so much in these days by people who never saw or drank any of it had enough kick in it to produce hellish results if sufficiently tampered with.

After the locomotive and the various types of railway cars became practical things, the railroads soon sounded the death-knell of the passenger and freighting business by means of horses, wagons and stage coaches. With the death of wagon and stage coach traffic on the famous old highway, most of the old taverns were also forced to quit business and after several decades many of them were deserted by their owners or tenants and soon were nothing but ghostly old landmarks, pictures of gloom and desolation.

In writing of the typical old abandoned old fashioned inns, which all along the National Pike could be seen for years after the glory of the old road had departed, their roofs moss-grown, floors mouldering, and here and there one gnawed into a shapeless mass of ruins by the relentless teeth of time, James Newton Matthews gives a good idea of the changed conditions in the following lines from one of his highly descriptive poems:

It stands all alone like a goblin in gray,
The old-fashioned inn of a pioneer day,
In a land so forlorn and forgotten, it seems Like a wraith of the past rising into our dreams;
Its glories have vanished, and only the ghost
Of a sign-board now creaks on its desolate post,
Recalling a time when all hearts were akin
As they rested at night in that welcoming inn.

Oh, the songs they would sing and the tales they would spin,
As they lounged in the light of the old country inn!
But a day came at last when the stage brought no load
To the gate, as it rolled up the long, dusty road.
And lo! at the sunrise a shrill whistle blew
O'er the hills—and the old yielded place to the new—
And a merciless age with its discord and din
Made wreck as it passed of the pioneer inn.

No longer the host hobbles down from his rest
In the porch's cool shadow to welcome his guest
With a smile of delight and a grasp of the hand,
And a glance of the eye that no heart could withstand.
The kitchen is cold, and the hall is as still
As the heart of the hostess out there on the hill.
The wind whistles shrill through the wide-open doors.
And lizzards keep house on the mouldering floors.

The old road itself, as well as the old-time taverns along its course, also lapsed into almost complete ruin, except certain portions where there was considerable traffic on it in spite of the railroads. However, after the advent of the automobile and improved road construction, the old pike was, figuratively speaking, resurrected. It is again teeming with activity and the turning of millions of wheels, but of a different sort. The tremendous tide of traffic that now sweeps over it daily is almost a horseless traffic, and the great droves of cattle, sheep and swine and large flocks of turkeys also that used to be driven over it in years past by men afoot and on horseback, will never be seen again on the old pike or any other highway.

Gone, too, and forever, are the days when Negro slaves were driven over the pike, arranged in couples and fastened to long, thick ropes like horses, was a common sight before slavery was abolished.

Mrs. Glotfelty says her parents, after leaving Little Crossings, moved onto a farm of 500 acres near Selbysport, taking their slaves with them, which they afterwards disposed of before the breaking out of the Civil War. Some of their neighbors also kept slaves, but slavery died out completely in what is now Garrett county before the great conflict which resulted in its abolishment all over the country. The Matthews family treated their slaves kindly and Mrs. Glotfelty says she well remembers when black Sarah was disposed to a Dr. Everett, in Cumberland, that members of the Matthews family, including her mother, cried about as much over the parting as black Sarah did. Mrs. Glotfelty was then a child only about four or five years of age, but she remembers the incident very distinctly.

The wayside inn, too, has come back. Many of the best of the old original pike taverns have been completely renovated and remodeled and are once more profitably conducted. But they are not as numerous as the old-time taverns that flourished all along the pike when it was in the heyday of its glory as a wagon road. Traffic now moves faster and good hotels are farther apart on that account. stations and automobile repair shops, however, are now almost as numerous along any good State road as twinkling stars along the Milky Way. Dance halls, too, are very numerous along the improved roads.

Reader, imagine the surprise it would be to the old stage drivers and wagoners who helped to make history on the old National Pike if they could return from their graves and see automobiles and motorcycles going over the famous old road at a speed that would make that of the fleetest stage horses look like the movement of a mud-turtle in comparison, and then note the still greater speed of the airplanes overhead!

When Business is Good

SATURDAY night is a mighty good time to ask yourself this question: "Is our community sending more money out of town than is coming in each week?" Of course the only safe answer is "NO!"

This means that we folks in this neighborhood must patronize local supply men and merchants if we expect our town to prosper and "stay on the map."

Frankly, it means that every citizen will find it most profitable to read the advertisements in this paper every issue, and to follow their good advice.

Our advertisers are all personally interested in this town—and in YOU. They are helping you build a better home community. When business is good, their profits are being shared with you in an endless chain of co-operative betterment.

GETTING ATTENTION.

When the novel effect of a business innovation wears off it ceases to have advertising value. Fine store rooms, plate glass windows and attractive fixtures have immense advertising value provided there are enough slovenly stores in the town or neighborhood to make them shine by contrast. But when the entire business community is up-and-up and progressive and each member tries to keep pace with his neighbor, the individual merchant gets little advertisement from his investment in architecture, windows, etc. The individual effect is lost in the general excellence. In that case the advertisement goes to the entire body of business men—to the entire town—and is valuable advertisement in that respect.

The trouble with many experimenters in advertising is that they expect too much from a single effort or even a series of efforts. Advertising is a continuous, progressive and cumulative process, constantly calling for new ideas. A merchant makes an improvement which has advertising value for him, until his competitors have met the improvement or gone him one better. By and by all the physical and personal methods of attracting attention have been exhausted. Newspaper advertising then steps in and continues the process. It is the one medium which enables the advertiser to meet the largest possible audience and to exert the largest versatility of ideas.

It is better than any talk delivered from a platform, for the reason that it can fortify its appeals with the artistries of type, pictures and make-up. As a rule, anything that makes a favorable impression through the eyes has a more lasting effect than that which enters through the ears. The speaker generally has to summon his audience. The printed advertisement goes to the audience. Anyway, no merchant, excepting an auctioneer, can be continually going around making speeches with the object of selling goods. The auctioneer exerts a sort of hypnotism which affects a few of his listeners and makes some sales. The same amount of expense and of mental effort invested in advertising will sell more goods in the long run.

COUNTRY CHILDREN NEED A NINE-MONTHS' TERM.

As straws show how the winds blow, so inquiries from country people coming into the Bureau of Education, Department of the Interior, show the trend of their thoughts on matters concerned with the education of their children. During the past two weeks there has been an unusual number of inquiries concerned with the minimum and average length of school term in the different States. The inquirers are seeking arguments to present to patrons or school officers in the hope of securing longer school terms in their State or district. Fortunately, more and more States are setting up through State laws a standard minimum term of 8 or 9 months. There are, however, still some States in which there is no such law and in which there are many poor, isolated districts which maintain school 6 or 7 months only. Indeed, reports from a few States show some districts in which schools are open even fewer than 6 months in the year. In considering this matter of the length of school term it is important to remember that the ordinary school organization and expectancy of school achievement is planned with the idea that a standard school term is 9 months in length. Chidren cannot accomplish in 6, 7 or 8 months the full amount of work planned for 9. At the end of the seventh or eighth year of school or at the age of 12 or 13 years when they should be entering high school they become discouraged and drop out of school altogether. Good teachers, good schools and good buildings are important factors in education but they can not fully compensate for precious opportunities lost through short terms.

THE LENTEN SEASON.

Whether or not one is interested in the observance of the church season of Lent, there is a certain principal in that custom that demands assent from thoughtful people. Lent was appointed by the Christian church to emphasize the spiritual side of human nature and to train people to attain control over what were called the pleasures of the flesh. This lower side of human nature has to be kept in its proper place, not merely if people are to attain high character, but unless well controlled it interferes with human happiness.

Whether or not one accepts the theory of evolution, it is evident that the natural man has many animal traits. Many of his strong feelings and emotions seem to be about the same as those the lower animals enjoy. They are course and crude, they make people selfish and quarrelsome, they lead to wars and cruelties and physical decay.

There are a good many people who never seem to get much above this animal level. Some theorists may argue that they are happy. A philisopher once said that "If ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise." But the human intelligence denies the adequacy of any such point of view.

It says that man was born with a soul, and that if he fails to cultivate that soul and make it a dominating power in his character, he has missed the reason for his existence and his animal pleasures can never give him any real satisfaction.

So Lent suggests that for a time men and women should think less of animal satisfaction and of all occupation and habits that restrict the higher development of human nature. Even if one was not actuated by religious belief in this practice, it would have its uses, for it produces a more refined personality that finds pleasure in nobler activities and thoughts.

Prevention.

"It costs less to be well than to be sick and it is a lot more fun," is the way Dr. W. C. Stone, Deputy State Health Officer for Carroll and Howard counties sums up a health message he has sent to the parents of chidren who have had a physical examination in the schools. Since the message is equally applicable to parents in other parts of the State, Dr. John S. Fulton, Director of the State Department of Health, takes this way of bringing it to their attention.

Just as large oaks from little acorns grow, so, Dr. Stone says, most of our serious diseases have their beginnings in defects or conditions which at first seem small and unimportant, but that lead to serious consequences if uncorrected.

Among the most treacherous of the trouble makers, he mentions the following:

Undernourishment and its side partner, undevelopment.

Defective teeth and their side partners, digestive disorder, and disease.

Diseased tonsils and adenoids resulting in the destruction of the first line of defense against the ever present germ.

So far as undernourishment is concerned, he says that most often it is due not to lack of food, but to over indulgence in the wrong kinds of food—to a diet made up too largely of starchy foods, sweets, and meats. "Every child," he continues, "for the first eighteen years of life, at least, needs a quart of milk every day. Eggs, liver, sweetbreads, cabbage, greens, salads, fruits, whole wheat and graham breads should he eaten regularly."

As to defective teeth, he points out the fact that the kinds of food mentioned are necessary for the formation of strong teeth; that the first cause of defective teeth is defective feeding; and that another cause is lack of care. He says, "if teeth are allowed to decay and their usefulness becomes impaired, there is bound to be an extra burden thrown upon the digestive system. * * *The poisons produced by, and in, germ infected teeth and gums get into the blood stream and are carried to every part of the body, causing damage to, or destruction of any of the vital organs."

Undernourishment, due to the lack of the right sort of foods, lowers the vitality of the system, and makes it less resistant to disease. This is especially true of tonsils and adenoids. "When they have become diseased," Dr. Stone says, "they cease to become a 'first line of defense' against germs. Rather they become a hotbed in which any kind of germ may lodge and grow to its great delight and advantage. Diphtherla, scarlet fever and rheumatism are diseases that a child with a sound, healthy throat has but little cause to fear. These diseases are responsible for a large part of all the deafness, heart and kidney disease of later life. * * *

"Eyes, too, are often permanently damaged by such diseases as scarlet fever and diphtheria. * * * No part of the body is more important than the eyes, so they should be safeguarded."

Should the physical examinations of children in the schools reveal any of the conditions pointed out in the message, parents are urged to lose no time in taking the children to their family physicians and to have the conditions corrected.

ACTIVITIES OF THE CIVIC CLUB OF OAKLAND TO DATE

A Short Review of the History of the Organization Since It Was Founded In 1911.

The Oakland Civic Club was organized in March, 1911. The meetings of the club were held at the Court House with permission of the County Commissioners. At the first meeting there were twenty-three ladies present, all of whom became members of the club, and officers were selected to serve for one year. These officers were:

President, Miss Theckla Fundenberg vice-president, Mrs. E. H. Sincell; treasurer, Mrs. Julius C. Renninger; secretary, Mrs. Lou Thayer-Waters.

The constitution and work of the club followed that of the Civic Club of Carlisle, Pennsylvania, one of the first clubs to be organized for civic work.

There were five committees: municipal, philanthropic, entertainment, sanitary and the cemetery.

The men of the town were asked to join as honorary members and we still have them working with us in that way. In the course of the year we had enrolled forty-five active members and twenty-one honorary members.

The first work to be taken up was the cleaning of the town. The club paid to have all trash hauled away. Everyone in the town helped in the general clean-up by putting all discarded articles where they could be gathered up easily. This has been done nearly every spring since that time.

Wire waste baskets were bought and placed about the town. These were emptied by the town authorities when the streets were cleaned.

The Oakland cemetery also profited by the work of the club and cleaning day was held there.

A tea room was opened which was very attractive and which gave a social center. The ladies of the club entertained the Mayor, Mr. John W. Hart, at this time. It was only open a few months, however, when it had to be closed.

Mrs. E. H. Sincell was elected president in 1912. The cemetery fence was begun during that year. The old fence was a high wood-paling structure which was at least forty years old and showed its age. Any stray animals—horses, cows, pigs or chickens, and there were a good many in Oakland at that time,—could wonder through the cemetery and find good pasturage. This condition made it impossible for any one to give proper care to the monuments or to the lots. The cemetery needed the fence. A public meeting was called and many interested people talked over the question until it materiallzed into the handsome stone wall and beautiful iron gates affording entrance to the burying ground.

Money was solicited from all persons near and far who might in any way be interested. The ladies of the club worked to earn money in different ways. The money collected and earned by the club amounted to over one thousand dollars. The gates were presented by the club; all work and materials were given at as low a price as possible for the benefit of such an improvement; the roads and paths were graded and covered with shale, which was donated by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

The work of Miss Lottie Loar, as chairman of the cemetery committee, extending over a period of nine years, should be especially commended. Miss Loar was untiring in her interest.

At the request of the cemetery association, work at the cemetery was given up in 1923, after eleven years of intensive work by the Civic Club. Since that time no work has been done there by the club.

In 1913, Mrs. E. Z. Tower was elected president. She held the position for three years.

The public drinking fountain in front of the Court House and the watering trough for horses on Third street were given then. The county fair was fostered and helped by the ladies of the club in 1913 when it was started. Mr. Stephen Casteel spoke to the president of the club, asking if the club would help him to have a "horse and colt show." This was brought up at a meeting of the club and acted upon in the affirmative. Mr. Casteel must have asked others in the same way, for in a few weeks we had a real fair. This was held in the large building on Third street, which is now owned by Mr. A. D. Naylor.

The ladies of the club gave their assistance in decorating and attendance at the booths, not only the first year, but for several years, until the fair association was well established. Now they have their own fair grounds and the association has all work on a business basis with exhibits coming from greater distances.

Money was earned by the club to keep the grammar school open an extra month during the early spring.

The Maryland Cook Book was published, recipes being given for it by all members of the club and residents of the town. All the business houses of the town had advertisements in it.

The Oakland Library was started in 1915 by the civic club. It is now ten years old and has filled a need in the town for reading matter for young and old. Mrs. Nettie Thrasher has been our librarian for all these years and the success of the work has been greatly helped by her untiring interest. A library association has been formed, so that it is entirely independent of the club now.

In 1916, Mrs. R. E. Sliger was elected president. At that time the State road had just been completed all the way to Cumberland. A luncheon was given, inviting two members from each club in Allegany county and Garrett county. Invitations were accepted and the guests from Cumberland and vicinity were glad to try out the new road. The luncheon was served at the home of Mrs. Lou Thayer Waters, the large veranda of her house being used for the tables. There were over sixty ladies present; speeches of greeting and response were made; all very enjoyable. This was the most far-reaching entertainment we have had.

A Junior League was formed for war work under the direction of Mrs. Elwood Offutt. Work was done for the Red Cross; money donated and all members turned to war work. Two Liberty bonds were bought.

A tuberculosis league was formed under the club and stamps were sold.

Mrs. R. E. Sliger resigned in the spring of 1918 for war work and Mrs. Julius C. Renninger served as president and kept the club together until the election in 1919.

From 1919 until 1923—four years—Mrs. James Willison served as president.

Our own club rooms in the K. of P. building were arranged for at this time. This made it easy to entertain, which was done frequently in connection with club meetings and at other times. The Mayor, Dr. Henry W. McComas, being specially entertained.

These rooms were rented for use of other organizations and private entertainments, really forming a nucleus for a community house, which we always hope to have.

Entertainments of all kinds were fostered by the club: Lyceum course of lectures for two years; the Welsh Concert Company; address by Mr. Cooper, of the Salvation Army; lecture by Dr. Parker on social hygiene; talk on district nursing by Dr. Knox. Shortly after this last named address, the Health Association for Garrett county was formed with a district nurse in charge.

Several luncheons, with every member present, were held in the club rooms.

Through the efforts of the club electricity was turned on two mornings each week instead of only at night, making it possible to use electrical appliances for housework.

We had our largest membership during this time—93 active and 22 honorary members.

The entertainment committee has always been very active and has earned a good sum of money each year besides bringing the citizens of the town together for a common cause.

This committee has made it possible for the club to always have money in hand for the many calls upon it. It could well be called the finance committee.

In 1923, Mrs. Paul Naylor was elected president. Cleaning of the town was special work in the spring, the club being helped by the Boy Scouts and the Chamber of Commerce, both active organizations at that time.

A number of families were helped by the philanthropic committee which has been a very active committee ever since the club was established. Help has been given to persons in need; food and clothes, also milk for school children in special cases, and assistance given the district nurse.

In 1923 we had a community Christmas tree, which was located on the lawn of the Court House, where special services were held.

Mrs. J. L. Pollock was elected president in 1924. A "welcome tea" was given in honor of the many strangers in our midst, here for a short time, during the construction of the hydro-electric project.

The club was reprsented at the Golden Rule dinner for the Near East Relief.

Sixty persons in need were helped during the year.

Our club rooms were given up at this time, the Knights of Pythias taking them over for their own use.

Mrs. Milton Sincell was elected president in 1925.

Work is being done under suggestions of the Federation of Clubs.

There are four committees: Education, public welfare, entertainment and legislative.

At present there are sixty active and 25 honorary members, many of the charter members being on the roster of the club.

We are affiliated with National, State and District Federations.

This history would not be complete without mentioning that one of our members as past president of the club, Mrs. E. Z. Tower, was elected in 1923 to the Town Council and has been selected as president of that body. Mrs. Tower is filling the position with ability and with great profit to the town in many improvements noted.

Let us show our appreciation an give thanks for the good work that has been accomplished through the club in the past fifteen years and look forward with the highest ideals to serving our town and community in every way we can, always giving loyalty in word and deed to our leader, the president of the club.

Today's Republican contains quite a detailed report of the activities of the Oakland Civic Club, covering the period from its organization in 1911 to the present. The report, prepared by Miss Thekla C. Fundenberg, contains information concerning many important things accomplished by the club and which in all probability has escaped the memory of some of the most observing residents of town.

During the wind storm which swept over this section of the country last Thursday afternoon and evening and continuing well into Friday morning slight property damage resulted at a various points in town. The top of a chimney on the Treacy building was blown off and the brick falling to the ground barely missed striking a passer-by. A large sign of the Oakland Garage supported by two poles along Second street was demolished and at the Park a cottage was partly unroofed.

Recently it developed that both of the Fundenberg houses located on Crook's Crest had been entered and the properties ransacked for valuables. In both cases the houses were entered by the prying open of windows. In one of the dwellings a flash light was left behind by the burglar or burglars indicating that perhaps a hurried flight was necessary to avoid detection.

The remains of Mrs. Nathan Hart, widow of the late Rev. Nathan Hart, of Mountain Lake Park, where he was engaged for some years as pastor of the Baptist church, were brought to Oakland yesterday from Uniontown, Pa., and interred in the Oakland cemetery. Mrs. Hart was quite aged. The remains were accompanied by relatives and friends occupying a number of automobiles.

Drs. Henry W. McComas and N. 1. Broadwater spent Monday, Tuesday and yesterday in Cumberland where they attended a meeting of the association of American Surgeons at which Dr. Charles H. Mayo, the noted surgeon of Rochester, Minn., was the principal speaker and the guest of honor at a banquet tendered him at the Fort Cumberland Hotel in Cumberland last night.

Mr. William W. Frazee, of near Hoyes, is at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harry Naylor, on Second street in Oakland, suffering with a broken hip which he sustained last Saturday at his home when he slipped on the ice and fell. He was accompanied to Oakland by Dr. R. A. Revenscroft, of Accident. The fracture was reduced by Drs. Ravenscroft and McComas at the office of the latter in Oakland after an x-ray picture had been made of the broken bone.

On Wednesday, March 10th, at 7:30 o'clock p. m., a joint meeting of the board of directors of the Garrett County Fair Association and the business men of Oakland, has been called by officers of the Association. This meeting is very important and may determine the future of the Fair. It is absolutely necessary that every resident and especially every business man of town co-operate with the fair management to make these annual events the success they should be.

Arrangements with the broadcasting station KDKA, Pittsburgh, Pa., have been completed for the appearance there on the evening of the 20th inst. of the Browning Brothers with their violins and harp. The Garrett county musicians will have a part in the program to be broadcasted that evening from 8:30 until 10:00 o'clock. Mayor Fraley of Oakland was in recepit of a letter from the dirctor of the Pittsburgh studio containing the information given above this morning.

At the weekly assembly of Rotarians last Friday evening at the William-James Hotel, Mr. Scott Shirer, Scoutmaster of Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, was the honor guest and principal speaker of the evening. Mr. Shirer's talk had to do with Boy Scouts entirely and many if not all assembled received first-hand information concerning the organization which now has more than two million boys enrolled as members. The speaker made a very favorable impression upon his audience and the Rotarians as a body pledged their support to the local troop after thanking the speaker for the excellent address he delivered.

On Thursday evening of last week the Maryland Forestry Association held its annual meeting in Baltimore. Former Senator W. McCulloh Brown, of Garrett county, was again elected secretary-treasurer. The aim of the meeting was to emphasize "Education in Forestry." District Forest Warden J. Frederick Virgin brought out the education of the children by means of forest clubs. Shirley W. Allen, forester for the American Forestry Association, told of the method of talking to children and illustrated the points by simple line drawings or comparisons. State Forester F. W. Besley gave an illustrated talk on the noted trees of Maryland. A. L. Sines, of near Oakland, was among those present at the meeting.

An exhaustive survey recently completed in penal institutions of this country showed that of about 14,000 inmates of those institutions about 600 had received high school educations and less than 200 were graduates of colleges and universities. This report gave rise to a second investigation which was made by an educational institution of standing, with that while it requires only about $200 of public funds per year to educate a boy or girl, beginning with the grammar school and on through the college or university, it requires $100 per year in actual cash of the public monies to maintain a prisoner in the institutions investigated, which leads one to the conclusion that it is cheaper to educate a boy or girl than to allow them to go uneducated and lacking education and the higher ideals of life, wind up in a felon's cell.

Boy Scout News.

The local Court of Honor of the Boy Scouts granted 33 merit badges to the members of the troop this month. This brings the number of merit badges up to 160, which is quite a creditable showing for fifteen boys in 5 months' time.

Scout Richard Davis is now a first class scout, having completed final requirements last Friday night. Waller Hoye enlisted and passed his tenderfoot requirements at this meeting.

Quite a few people of the community have asked the following question, "What do you do at your meeting every week?" Very soon we hope to have a regular visitor's night and we want everyone interested in the scouts to come and watch us do our stuff. The exact date will be announced in these columns.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, MARCH 7, 1926.

JESUS WASHES HIS DISCIPLES FEET.

John 13:1-17.

The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.—Matthew 20:28.

THE SCENE.

Tuesday passed with its conflict in the temple that left the leaders breathless and set the crowd wild with delight in listening to the unmerciful scoring given those who used their place for self-interest. It sent the Sanhedrin into session with bitter wrangling that came to no conclusion other than strengthened determination to put this disturber of their affairs out of the way. In the meanwhile, Jesus had plucked the exquisite flower of a woman's devotion from the crowd's in the treasury where she kept nothing back in the giving. After the coming of the Greeks, in the gathering dusk He went out to Olivven where He could see the city fade into the darkness except where the temple glowed with its constantly burning light, a star of hope in the nation's heart. Presently He told of its sure dimming under the rejection of God's love plan, for gathering her children as a hen gathers her chickens under her wings. Across the hills to Bethany and friends where Wednesday was spent with such steady nerve that the disciples found nothing out of the ordinary to record in the whole day. Notice the news account of a convict on the day before his execution to see how very wonderful was the quiet repose of Jesus on this day before the storm burst. Then on Thursday there was the sending of Peter and John into town ta arrange for a meal together before the end. Judas may have used it to make his arrangements with the leaders while paying for the lamb. He had to meet some of them and the arrangement could easily have been accomplished without any disciples suspecting it.

It may have been in the house of Mary, mother of John Mark, for it became one of the meeting places of the early church. It may have been in the home of the beloved disciple who has given us John's Gospel. At any rate it was not known to Judas and he trailed in in the fading light with the rest, dusty of foot from the tramp. The room was ready, table prepared and water brought for the necessary washing before the meal. As all servants were busy, they were obliged to attend to their own wants, among which was the cleansing of the feet from the stinging dust that would mar both comfort and couches.

THE SCRAMBLERS.

Have you ever heard the expression, "end-seat hog"? Have you ever noticed the difference among a crowd at a ticket window or a train gate? Afterward one may appreciate the first item upon the official report of a visiting commission from abroad that Americans lacked courtesy. We seem bound to follow the example of the upper room but not its finest. For there was a scramble for place there and a warm wrangle over who was the greatest. It was precipitated by the water for the feet and began in laughter as they badgered each other to do the task as witness that he was servant of the rest. John, the youngest, would be likely to become the center of attack and there is little doubt that he who had wanted fire for the Samaritans and refused permission to another to do a helpful work because he was not among the twelve would explode wrathfully in a biting refusal that helped the situation not at all. If in consequence he grabbed the place next to Jesus there would have been no getting him out of it. Judas was at our Lord's left, a concession that indicated his ability as a pusher, for he was close enough to be handed a bit of bread dipped in the soup. Try this while leaning on the left elbow and the location becomes clear. The atmosphere was full of discension, of wrathful murmurings, of sharp rejoinders and cutting innuendoes as they added the discomfort of their hot feet to their hot speech and their hot heads that had drawn all the warmth from their hearts. So they went to the table. Fine setting it was for a communion! If it was the Passover meal they were in Egypt all right.

THE SERVANT.

Read through those exquisite chapters beginning with the 14th that tell something of the converse of this hour and appreciate what Jsus did for that group under stress of such feeling as they were manifesting. He found a way thru their flood of lack of concord. Never in all His ministry does ability to sway hearts and heads shine clearer than here. How swiftly His mind must have moved in planning to save the evening from untold disaster and the world from irreparable loss. With vivid concreteness He began with their point of immediate difference as He took the basin refused by them, tied a towel about His waist to hold His garments out of the drip, and began the task of the lowest servant. The silence that settled over that bunch would have made a pin drop like a bomb! Some Teacher! Who else would have thought of it or would have dared the doing? It lay in the four-fold knowledge illumined by love that embraced the "I know" of opportunity (His hour had come); of power (all things); of origin (from God); and of destiny (to God). He could bend because He was big. It takes strength to stoop. It was that love "up to the limit" that enabled Him to apply all the impact of His power to the solution of the situation in the lives of His disciples.

THE SOUL DUST.

Jesus' higher task was to wash souls instead of feet. Peter of course broke the silence in which John's eyes had grown misty at the tender touch of hands that held no rebuke, in which the cheek of Judas had burned red under the tug at his heart of those fingers clinging to his feet to stay them from the bath in which they were set, in which all the emotions possible played across the stirred minds of those scholars in Christ's school.Peter protested, but he didn't offer to take the basin. Poor fellow, it never occurred to him that he might do it. It wasn't the thing for his Master, but it was for one of the others. He certainly was hitting somebody, but not Peter! And he is in church every Sunday and it is always someone else the sermon exactly fits. Mother had baked two little pies for the children and the boy said, "Mother, I can't enjoy my pie when you don't have any. TAKE SISTER'S!" There's Peter's child for you. Jesus said, "there's clinging dust that needs daily washing, but there's soul dust that this basin will not remove; 'ye are not all clean.'" Only a soul bath that sinks self completely under Christ can take it away. "You certainly don't sing that disgusting thing,'There is a fountain filled with blood,' do you?" was a sneering question. "What is yours filled with?" was the prodding reply. And the continuous miracle is being performed this very hour.

KITZMILLER

One of the most pleasant events ever held in Kitzmiller was the banquet given by the Junior Order of American Mechanics and the Daughters of America, Friday night, February 26th, in Eagles' Hall. An elaborate menu was served to two hundred and forty-three members, friends and children. The hall was tastefully decorated in red, white and blue streamers with red, white and blue shaded electric lights, the color scheme being in harmony with the colors of the organization.

An orchestra, composed of Ray Boyd, violinist; Ralph Fox, drummer; E. C. Ryall, pianist, and Mr. Bert Pew, violin, furnished the music for the occasion. Mr. Boyd rendered the best violine selections that Kitzmiller people have had the pleasure of hearing, and Mr. Fox, a wizard at the drums, helped as an entertainer.

The following program was rendered upon the occasion:

Opening remarks.....Charles Hart
America .....Chorus
Prayer.....Rev. George C. Stratton
Violin solo.....Ray Boyd
Address....Rev. George C. Stratton

Miss Beulah Walker entertained at her home Saturday evening with a Five Hundred party. The color scheme in decorations was pink throughout, and in keeping with this beautiful bunches of pink sweet peas adorned the tables, and the favors, which were very unique, were also in pink with small pink and gold butterflies. A very appetizing luncheon was served. Those present were Misses Louise Knapp, Vera Walker,Florence Whittaker, Beulah Walker, Pearl Walker, Catherine Walker; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Coffman, Mr. R. C. Ryall, Mr. Harry Wilson, Mrs. William Parsons and Mr. Ludwig.

The teachers of the Kitzmiller grammar school have recently purchased for the use of the children in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh grades four new globes. These are to be used in connection with the history and geography work.

The sophomore class of the high school, headed by Frances Pratt and Elsie Moore, are working up a book party for the benefit of the school library. They are planning to enlarge the fiction department of that portion of the literature in the library.

The pupils of the high school gave a shower to Miss Farr, the instructor in mathematics. Miss Farr is to be married in a short time.

The preliminary declamation contest to select the pupil from the Kitzmiller high school to represent the school a tthe county declamation contest to be held at Accident, will occur at the Maryland Theatre in Kitzmiller on Friday evening, February 12th. Those who have entered are Emma Chisholm, Neva Bishop, Mary Bishop, Mary Menke, Louise Browning, Virginia Barrack. On the same evening the Sophomore class will present a one-act play entitled, "That Rascal Pat."

Mr. Ryall, the principal of the Kitzmiller schools, who attended the National Educational convention in the city of Washington, returned home on Friday of last week. His report of the meeting will be made at the next meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association. While in Washington Mr. Ryall also attended the luncheon of the Phi Delta Cappa fraternity. This luncheon was held in the Hall of Nations dining room of the Washington Hotel.

The Junior class is now preparing a subscription contest. The proceeds from the subscriptions will be used to defray the expenses of the Senior class in its trip to Washington in the month of April. The leaders for the contest are Lewis Baldwin and Robert Campbell.

The staff of the year book is getting the material ready as fast as possible for the publishers.

Miss Verba Walker, of Cumberland, spent the week-end in Kitzmiller with her parents.

Mr. F. M. Dean, manager of the Coffman-Fisher store at Lonaconing, spent Sunday here as the guest of his sister, Mrs. George Coffman.

Mr. Howard, of Mt. Savage, visited his brother, Mr. R. A. C. Howard.

Mr. A. Everstine, of Cumberland, was a recent guest at the Bishop residence.

Mrs. John Paugh and daughter, of Mountain Lake Park ,are visiting relatives and friends here.

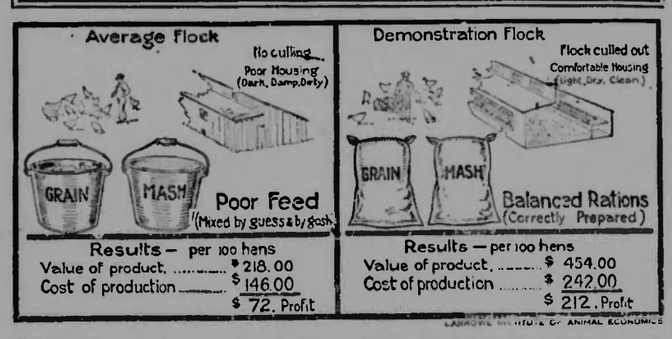
...ien's Own Egg Factory Is Run Like Real Plant



IT'S A whole egg or none for the hen, according to the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. Being an honest manufacturer she does not make half an egg. Her egg "factory" is run like a real plant. When the yolk is made it is then passed into another department where it is surrounded by white, then into a third where it is encased by a layer of the purest form of carbonate of lime, forming the egg shell, after which it is ready to greet a hungry world.

The average hen lays about 72 eggs a year, mostly during warm weather. She should manufacture twice that number, state the institute's experts who, in experimenting with hundreds of laying hens, discovered surprising differences in the number of eggs produced by various poultry rations. If the hen's egg-making apparatus fails to work up to a standard of efficiency it is probably not the hen's fault, but rather that of the poultryman who unknowingly does not provide her with the food material the hen requires to keep all three egg-making departments working full time. When the hen is fed sound grains and an efficient mash containing egg-making nutrients that make for the greatest efficiency in her plant, she can't help but make eggs! Feed is the most important single factor in egg production. It is also the biggest item of cost. Profitable results cannot be secured with poor rations.

In addition to providing the best rations for egg production the wise poultryman will watch his flock, to continuously cull out the naturally poor layers, thus building up a flock of heavy-laying fowls. Every effort should also be made to see that the hens are comfortably housed, especially in winter, because dark, damp, dirty quarters may nullify all the advantages resulting from culling and better feeding.

Poultry Profits Tripled by Proper Feed, Care and Culling

UNLESS a poultryman is clearing at least two dollars for each layer in his flock every year, there is something wrong with the methods he is using, says the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. It may be a case of poor layers, poor housing or just plain poor food.

Even the best bred hen will not lay day after day unless she is fed with those elements which she must have to turn into eggs. Any hen will lay in the spring—it's her nature to do this—but if poultry keeping is to be a profitable business the hen must be induced to lay throughout the year. During the cold weather season the days are short and the fowls require additional food. Quantity of grain is important but it takes mash containing egg-making nutrients to produce eggs from Labor day to Easter.

LOCH LYNN

About the most important happening to occur recently in this section was the election held on Monday to select two town councilmen to serve for a period of two years. The election was one of the most interesting and exciting in the history of Loch Lynn and the vote was the largest recorded. The election resulted as follows:

Citizen's Ticket.

E. F. Paugh 36
R. Hamili 38

Independent Ticket.

H. M. Weeks 39
H. V. Leighton 41

The newly elected members of the council were sworn in immediately after the result of the balloting had been declared and attended the meeting of the town fathers that night.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

Much of the old snow had left us and real spring weather came with the first day of March, but that night brought a storm which showered down the largest snowflakes that we have ever seen. On the morning of the second the ground was covered to a depth of three inches.

While Florida can boast of her sunshine and mild weather in the winter time, we can easily surpass that locality during the summer months with our equally fine summer weather with our balmy breezes, pure, cold water, beautiful lawns and dense foliage of the forests; good roads, the best railroad in the world and other conveniences and natural beauty of the country which we call Garrett county, Md.

Mr. O. H. Bonner, who has occupied the Bittinger cottage during the winter, has rented the Keswick for a year and is moving into it this week.

The high wind last Friday night snapped off some of the large trees in various parts of the Park and several large windows were blown in.

As stated in this correspondence last week, two groups of men are interested in the purchase of the Park but thus far nothing definite has been done with respect to the sale and the transfer of the property.

We are glad to learn that the School of Theology of the Pittsburgh area is booked for the Park again during the coming summer.

We trust that the Laymen's Association will meet at the Park again this summer.

J. A. Enlow has accepted an agency for this territory for the Corner Manufacturing Co., of Dayton, O., makers of men's clothing.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

We are in line for general hauling, transfer work and moving a specialty. Local and long distance. Prompt service; reasonable charges.

We are still delivering Freeport Coal to Oakland at $3.50 per ton; to Mountain Lake Park at $4.00 per ton. Leave us your order and be one of our many well pleased customers.

Service is our motto.

New Method Quickly Banishes Heavy Coughs

Why be annoyed and weakened by persistent, strength-sapping coughing spells when you can, through a very simple treatment, quickly stop all irritation and very often banish the trouble entirely in 24 hours?

This treatment is based on the famous prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You take just one teaspoonful at bed-time and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of night coughing. Thus, with the throat soothed and cleared, coughing stops quickly and you sleep all night undisturbed.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, sore throat, hoarseness, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children as well as grown-ups—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for Miss Myra Custer, of near Swanton, spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Mary Custer, at this place.

Mrs. Annie Getty and Miss Mollie Dorsey visited Mrs. J. W. McCullough in Friendsville last Wednesday.

Mrs. Jos. F. Fahey and Miss Jean Carpenstein spent Monday in Oakland.

Dr. and Mrs. Harry Ryland and children, of Meyersdale, Pa., were guests of their sister, Mrs. Lillie Younkin, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Thompson and daughters, of Grindstone, Pa., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Edwards in Grantsville on Sunday.

Miss Esther Zehner and Messrs. Paul Custer and Frank Getty, of the Frostburg State Normal, were week-end guests of their respective parents in Grantsville.

Mrs. Mary Wagner, one of Grantsville's oldest ladies, celebrated her 80th anniversary on February 25th. Mrs. Wagner enjoys excellent health, lives alone and has not missed being out of doors through all the snow and storm one day this winter. She is a great walker and did not, until last year, think anything of walking from her home to Frostburg.

A quilting party was held at the home of Mrs. Lyman Folk two afternoons last week. The quilt was made by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Cove Lutheran church.

BITTINGER

Despite the old ground hog theory, we have had almost continuous winter weather thruout the month of February, but we are still hoping that the present month of March may bring us fairer weather and brighter skies.

C. C. Beachy drove a herd of nice young cattle from his farm near here to Grantsville last Monday morning. The cattle were delivered to Mr. Meyers, of Meyersdale, Pa., who purchased them some time ago.

Mrs. Lawrence Brenneman, who has been ill for a few days, is now said to be considerably improved.

On Thursday of last week there came a fine mild spell of weather and a few local sugar camp owners got busy and made some very fine maple syrup. Mr. Lawrence Fortney is reported to have made more than any of his neighbors.

Adam Speicher, who is employed in the Morgart Coal Mining Corporation's coal mines near here, spent Saturday and Sunday with his fmaily in Accident.

Harvey Hetrick and family, who left their farm near here last fall, and moved to Accident, returned to the farm a few days ago and Mr. Hetrik will resume his farming operations.

Music Memory Contest.

Richard Wagner.

In Italy, where opera was first developed, it was the custom of the composers to write a number of songs for special singers—music in which acting was of little importance, but which should serve to show off the fullest extent the voices of the singers. In fact, at one time in Italy the operas were called "concert operas."

Richard Wagner, one of the greatest geniuses of all times, felt that there was no real art in such music, that an opera, or music drama, should mean much more than mere "vocal gymnastics," and his greatest compositions in the field of opera are called "music dramas."

"Every part of the drama," he said, "must be in harmony with its poetic idea." Neither the poetry nor the music must be regarded as of the greatest importance. Combined with these two must be the added effect of the other fine arts. The acting, the scenery, the dancing, must all have their place, and contribute to the perfect whole.

That he might secure this unity he wrote his own words (the librettos) for his operas; he made his own drawings for the scenery, and regarded no detail too unimportant for his attention. He made his orchestra a very important part of his music dramas, for in its music one hears the story without words.

To represent each idea—love, death, the sword, the giants, or the different heroes—Wagner wrote a special musical phrase called a "motive," and if one makes a study of his operas he can be listening to the orchestra's tell what character is about to appear on the stage or what thought is being suggested.

So that nothing should distract the attention of the audience, the orchestra was concealed from view.

Because his ideas were so different from those of the other musicians of his time, he was laughed at and his work was most severely criticised. Publishers would not buy his music and he was often almost penniless. But through it all—poverty, lack of artistic sympathy, unkind criticism—he did not lose faith in himself or his own ideals, but persevered and kept on writing as subjects for new operas came into his mind.

In other ways he was not popular in his own country. He was very outspoken against the rulers at times, so he was not allowed to live at home ami therefore sought a new home in Switzerland.

While there in exile, his friend Liszt, then almost a "musical king," gave a performance of "Lohengrin" in Weimar. Of course Wagner could not he present. But this opera so won the heart of the young Prince of Bavaria that he championed Wagner's cause, inviting him to Bavaria and helping him with funds to build the theatre at Bayreuth, in which theatre his music dramas were presented regularly until interrupted by the late World War.

Greatest singers regarded it the highest honor to be invited to sing there in the great Wagnerian festivals.

One of Wagner's most popular operas is "Die Walkiere," which is indeed only one of the group of four operas with a continuous story, but designed to be performed on separate evenings.

So a great master of the orchestra was Wagner that his orchestral compositions for operas often appear on concert programs for great symphony orchestras, and the two which follow are favorites in the realm of titanic and thrilling music.

The Valkyrie maidens in the opera Walkiere were daughters of the great god Wotan. Dressed in silver armor, shining helmets and glittering shields it was their mission to carry the souls of dead heroes from the battlefields to their resting places in Walhalla.

The ride of the "Valkyries" depicts these war maidens flying through space on winged horses, amid the mountain crags, the swiftly moving clouds, the rushing winds and flashing of lightning. Above it all we easily can distinguish two significant musical figures, or "motives," the use of which was so characteristic with Wagner. One stands for the galloping war horses. The other is the wild war cry of Brunhilde, the favorite daughter of Wotan, and the leader of Valkyrie maidens.

But one time Brunnhilde disobeyed her father, the great god Wotan, and though she was his best beloved war maiden it was necessary to punish her. Her father took away her power as a goddess and condemned her to a long sleep till she should be awakened by a man who claimed her for his bride and with whom she should live on earth like any other woman.

Fearful that a man less than the bravest hero might awaken her, Brunnhilde pleaded that Wotan surround her sleeping place with a great wall of fire so that only a hero that knew no fear should approach her couch. The request was granted. Wotan carried his beloved daughter to a smooth rock on a lofty mountain where she promised him that when she awoke into a mortal woman she would always be bave and true. Then with her father's farewell kiss she fell asleep, as did her splendid winged horse, and all the flowers about her on the mountain top.

"The magic fire" music opens with lulling sleep theme which is beautiful beyond compare. Then as Wotan strikes on the rock with his mighty spear, he calls upon the god of Fire to bring his flames and surround the sleeping goddess. Listen while the orchestra paints this unusual scene.

The flames grow higher and higher until our brave war-maiden is entirely surrounded by fire. The fire roars and crackles, the flames start heavenward,but still Brunnhilde sleeps,awaiting the hero who knows no fear. The whizz and roar of the strings is heard to the end, though often under the roar is heard the haunting theme of sleep. Thus ends the "Valkyrie."

One day ,after years and years had passed, the hero came, but Richard Wagner kept that story for another opera: "Wotan's Farewell" and "Magic Fire Music."

The Relation of Lime to Agriculture.

It is a matter of practical importance to have a clear idea of the relative amounts of calcium contained in the principal compounds used to supply this constituent to agriculture.

A comparison in this respect may be summed up as follows:

When a ton of pure limestone is burned, about 1,000 pounds of actual lime, calcium and magnesium oxide is left. When this is slacked or "hydrated," it takes up water until it weighs about 1350 pounds. When it becomes air slacked it goes back to the original carbonate form. All lime quickly reverts to carbonate in the soil, so that the kind applied is important chiefly as regards physical conditions and concentration.

In applying any form of lime always apply it before planting the crop which is to receive the benefit of the lime. To do the most good it should be applied to plowed land and thoroughly worked in the soil by harrowing.

A great many farmers in Garrett county have apparently lost sight of the fact that there is an abundant supply of lime material located in their community or adjacent thereto. Instead of utilizing this material they are having large amounts of the various lime compounds shipped many miles when all or a part of the freight charges could be saved by the utilization of the local product.

Local burning can often be done at a very low cost when there is a goodly supply of firewood or coal. Grinding however, would be better and more profitable to follow if the proper co-operation could be had with a number of farmers. W. C. JESTER,
County Agent.

Garrett County's Forest Interests.

District Forest Warden A. L. Sines has recently returned from Baltimore where he attended the District Warden's conference of the State Department of Forestry held on February 25.

The conference dealt with a study of the effectiveness of the forest fire fighting organization and with plans for improving that organization. The forest warden organization of Garrett county was found to be the most complete in the State, with fifty-two wardens on the list.

Mr. Sines, with sixteen years' experience in this county, considers this to be about the number required to patrol the forests. There remains a few locations, however, where wardens are needed.

The number of fires in Garrett county during 1925 totalled 70, all of which occurred in the spring. The fires averaged 126 acres to the fire. Incendiarism was the cause of 24, or about 30 per cent. Unknown fires were the next largest group with 15. Railroads caused 11 fires. The rest were about equally divided between smokers, campers, brush burning and lumbering.

District Warden Sines, in talking at the conference of the fire situation in Garrett county emphasized the necessity of educational efforts to stamp out the evil of the careless and the incendiary fires. Timber is among the greatest resources of the county. With over sixty per cent of the land area of the county in forest, the future welfare of the whole section is dependent upon the protection of the forests.

VOLUME 51. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, MARCH 11, 1926 NUMBER 3.

..ALEY UNOPPOSED AS A CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR

Citizens' Meeting Held Friday Placed Ticket In Field and Election Held Monday.

Mayor Lawrence M. Fraley remains Mayor for another term of two years following the municipal election conducted Monday when the citizens voted for candidates nominated at a meeting held in the City Hall Friday evening, the call for the same having been issued by the joint committees of the Democratic and the Republican executives.

The citizens meeting was quite largely attended and was presided over by Attorney Julius C. Renninger and had as its secretary Mr. Walter W. Dawson.

The following named were placed in nomination by the assembled residents:

For Mayor, Lawrence M. Fraley.

Four Councilmen, G. J. Altstetter, Dr. William W. Grant, Lloyd C. Shaffer, Grover C. Stemple, Mrs. E. Z. Tower, Stanton D. Whipkey and Delbert Davis. The latter withdrew on Saturday, hence but six names appeared on the councilmanic ticket.

For Treasurer, Miss Frances C. Hamill and Mrs. Edwana Rook.

The election was conducted Monday, the ballot used having been arranged similarly to those used in the general elections and was an innovation and proved to be entirely satisfactory and easy to mark and cast.

The total number of ballots cast was 473, the greater number being voted after two o'clock in the afternoon, at which time the word went out to the women that their help was needed and they responded nobly notwithstanding the storm which raged the entire day.

The result of the balloting as returned by the election officials to the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court was as follows:

FOR MAYOR

Lawrence M. Fraley	397

FOR COUNCILMEN

G. J. Altstetter	167
William W. Grant	237
Lloyd C. Shaffer	182
Grover C. Stemple	305
Mrs. E. Z. Tower	279
Stanton D. Whipkey	184

FOR TREASURER

Miss Frances C. Hamill	289
Mrs. Edwana Rook	154

The three highest for members of Council were Mrs. Tower, Grover C Stemple and Dr. Grant, and consequently were declared elected over their opponents. Mrs. Tower and Dr. Grant succeed themselves as members of Council, Mr. Stemple being the only member-elect of that body who has not had previous experience. The hold-over members are Messrs. Samuel B. Aronhalt, Edward A. Shaffer and Arthur Lawton. The new council will organize the first Monday evening in April when the members will recommend the appointment of tax collector, policeman and other officers.

Fraley Declamation Contest Postponed.

Mr. F. E. Rathbun, County Superintendent, has requested The Republican to state that the Fraley High School Declamation Contest, first announced to be held at Accident on Friday evening, March 19, will probably be postponed until Wednesday evening, March 31st, being held, however, at Accident. Definite announcement will be made in the next issue of The Republican.

American Legion Post to be Reorganized.

All ex-service men are requested to be present on Monday night, March 15th, at a meeting to be held in the McIntire building. An effort will be made to reorganize and set in operation a real American Legion Post here in Garrett county.

There is an available membership of approximately five hundred men throughout the county. The men who have been in any way attached to the ...ces of the Great War should still ... common interests enough to hold ... together in an organization like ...

The failure to have an organized post excludes all service men from any recognition in Legion affairs. What the National organization is doing is of vitnl interest to all and our support should be given. The social and fraternal side of a Post is worth much and should be encouraged. So come and help boost a real post that can be made live as long as there are men to carry its standards.

RAILROAD GIVES SCHOLARSHIPS TO FARM CHILDREN

Baltimore & Ohio Promotes Education in Rural Sections By Aiding Club Work.

Believing that Agricultural Club work is a necessary system of education for our rural youth, which system must continue to grow so that it will become available to much larger numbers of rural boys and girls, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad announces that it will award a $100 scholarship in this State to the boy or girl who most efficiently completes his or her project in Agricultural Club work.

The club member may enter any type of club work recognized and supervised by the University of Maryland Agricultural Extension Service, such as Corn Clubs, Potato Clubs, Sewing Clubs, Canning Clubs, Calf Clubs, Pig Clubs, etc.

The winner of the Baltimore & Ohio scholarship will have the alternative of using the scholarship for educational purposes at any recognized college or university in the State or in defraying the expense of an educational trip to the Boys and Girls Fifth Annual Club Congress and International Livestock Exposition at Chicago next December.

The Baltimore & Ohio has awarded 50 scholarships to date, 33 of which the winners chose to use for educational purposes at their respective State universities, while 17 chose the educational trip. Of the 33 Club members who elected the scholarships for educational purposes, 18 are now in college in the States of Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

Maryland farm boys and girls who have won Baltimore & Ohio scholarships to date are: Katharine Baker, Edgemont, Washington county; Norwood C. Thornton, Elkton, Cecil county, Maryland.

This scholarship is independent of and not offered in connection with the Baltimore & Ohio Poultry Clubs being conducted in certain Maryland counties, the prize winners in which are awarded with high quality breeding pens of poultry. However, both the scholarships and poultry clubs are offered by the railroad through the Agricultural Department, in charge of O. K. Quivey, General Agricultural Agent, and in close cooperation with the University of Maryland Agricultural Extension Service and the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation.

A Woman Protests.

Last Friday morning's issue of the Baltimore Sun, in its People's Forum, printed the following vitriolic letter from an Oakland woman protesting against the antagonism shown the Volstead law, which is always given a prominent place in the columns of the Sun and in other papers of like wet tendencies. The author of the letter is quite well known and has no hesitancy at any time and upon any occasion in giving voice to her convicitons as expressed in this letter to the Sun:

To the Editor of The Sun—Sir: I as one woman born and reared in the State of Maryland, arise to refute the assertions of certain women who seem to pride themselves on their attitude concerning the liquor question. I inwardly seethe and could heartily adopt Carrie Nation's methods if I were physically fit and there was the ghost of a show such methods would be effective.

First, that the whiskey purveyors were never respecters of persons or laws either before or since the reign of Volsteadism and the boys who were lured in before are furnishing the recruits of today because nearly all the old topers have gone the way of all flesh. I deny the statement that before Volsteadism liquor was not sold to men under 21. I am speaking now of four very promising young boys who are today filling drunkards' graves.

I hope it is a libel on the women of Maryland that "they take the strongest pride in Representative Hill and his efforts for modification." God forbid! I as one woman abjure Representative Hill. I am ashamed of Representative Hill and all he stands for. ONE WHO KNOWS.

Oakland, Md., Feb. 27.

DIED.

SUSAN C. AND HENRY W. ROTH.

Mrs. Susan C. Roth died Monday morning and her husband, Henry W. Roth, died yesterday at noon. They resided on their farm near Hauser, south of Oakland. The funeral will occur this afternoon at 2:00 with interment of both bodies in one grave at Red House Lutheran church cemetery. Mrs. Roth was aged 77 years, 10 months and 8 days, while Mr. Roth lacked 11 days of being 81 years old. Both were members of St. John's Lutheran church at Red House and were conscientious Christians. They each leave one brother and two sisters and the following named children: David O. Roth and Mrs. George Smith, Cumberland; Oscar Roth, of Garrett county, with whom they resided. Mrs. Roth had been a great sufferer from rheumatism and for the past two years was helpless. Mr. Roth was stricken with an attack of influenza about a week ago and died as a result. Had they survived until April 17th the couple would have celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary. Following their marriage the couple went to housekeeping on the farm where they lived for more than fifty-nine years. They are survived by 12 grandchildren and 28 greatgrandchildren, twelve of whom will be the pallbearers at the funeral today. The out-of-town relatives who will attend the obsequies are Stewart Roth, Hagerstown; Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Roth and daughter Margaret, DeCoursey and Russell Roth. Mr. and Mrs. George Smith and Carl and Chester Smith, all of Cumberland; Era, Arlie and Pindle Roth, of Masontowp, W. Va.

ZACHARIAH TAYLOR SCHELL

Zachariah Taylor Schell was born March 30th, 1848 and was united in marriage with Susan Tabitha Sears, September 1st, 1881. To this union were born eight children: Mrs. Cora Ethel Miller, Riley Taylor Schell, of Mt. Lake Park; Andrew T. Schell and Alston Dayton Schell, of Cumberland; Mrs. Pink Edith Bell, of Oakland, and the following who are deceased, Elmer Blaine, Emerson William and Clare Elsie. Mr. Schell had been in poor health for ten years, but it was only recently that he became critically ill. He will be greatly missed by his devoted family to whom he was a kind and loving husband and father. His death removes one of Mountain Lake Park's oldest and most respected citizens and the neighbors and friends of the entire community will miss his kindly presence and his good will toward all. Very early in life he became a devoted follower of his Lord, joining the church of the Disciples and was a consistent member of that denomination. Some twenty-five years ago he became affiliated with the I. B. S. A. The idea of a broad plan of redemption and salvation through Jesus greatly appealed to him and was the means of drawing his heart and life closer to his Lord. He died in full assurance of faith that in the resurrection he would be united to his Lord, and so be ever with him.

A FRIEND.

MARTHA ELIZABETH WILT.

Miss Martha Elizabeth Wilt, of near Frankville, died on March 4th. Her age was nearly 70. She had retired to her room and was kneeling by her bedside when stricken in which position she was found by other members of the household who placed her upon her bed, her death occurring in a few minutes thereafter. Her funeral took place from her home on Sunday, Rev. D. B. Brown officiating. Interment was made in the Beckman cemetery near Frankville. The deceased was the daughter of John and Caroline Hook Wilt. She is survived by three brothers, John R., Samuel E. and Archibald Wilt.

GARRETT COUNTY PORKER DRESSING 1120 LBS. KILLED

Monster Hog Raised In Garrett County Slaughtered Monday—Hams Weighed 180 lbs. Each

Besides being a good farmer, an excellent citizen and a stockman of repute, Courtney Wilson, of the Ryan's Glade section of Garrett county, excells in one other respect—that of raising and butchering the largest hog ever produced within the county and probably within the State of Maryland, as was attested at his farm Monday when a "whale of a hog," tipping the beam at 1120 pounds, dressed was swung up. How the animal was handled The Republican has not been informed—whether by man power or a tractor, but the fact remains, nevertheless, that the hog actually dressed one hundred and twenty pounds more than half a ton.

The hame weighed 180 pounds each and the shoulders, before being trimmed weighed 160 pounds each. How much lard was rendered from the immense carcass was not stated by the informant who brought this piece of news in to The Republican yesterday.

To verify the accuracy of the figures submitted, The Repuhlican got first-hand information from the Harvey homestead last night. The information in the possession of this office was pronounced correct in every respect, and so those who peruse this article may rest assured that no hoax has been put over.

The hog measured 8 feet nine inches in length and stood 47 inches high.

If anyone, anywhere, can surpass or even equal this record The Republican would like to have detailed information. As the record now stands, Garrett county is ahead of the State. If the entire country were covered in this statement it is possible that too much territory would be taken in.

Meeting of Farmers and Business Men Proposed.

Mr. J. D. Harvey, past master of the Ryan's Glade Grange and as an officer of that organization advanced the idea that all products of the farmer should be graded and sold upon that basis, was in Oakland yesterday interviewing the merchants and interesting them in the matter. He was so successful in advancing his plans that he has asked The Republican to announce that on Tuesday, March 23, a meeting of all the farmers, merchants and consumers will be held in the Court House to further discuss and arrive at a conclusion as to how the products are to be graded. This matter will be taken up and treated in a more elaborate manner by County Agent Jester in an article to appear in The Republican next Thursday.

Cashier For New Bank Here

Mr. Berne Teter, of Belington, W. Va., where he was associated with the Citizens National Bank for several years as its cashier, arrived in Oakland on Thursday of last week and will be permanently located here, assuming the cashiership of the new Farmers' Bank which will be opened for business some time during April, the stock for which has all been subscribed. The bank will be located in the McIntire building, the furniture, vault and safe having already been received and are being placed in position. Mr. Teter will bring his family to Oakland as soon as he is able to secure a dwelling. He comes to Oakland highly recommended by his former employers and will devote his time strictly to the interests of the new bank.

TAIT CHARGES GOVERNOR WITH PARTISANSHIP

Republican Chairman Says Judicial Appointments Constitute Challenge to G. O. P.

(Baltimore Sun of Feb. 27, 1926.)

Galen L. Tait, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, yesterday gave out a statement charging Governor Ritchie with showing partisanship in the appointment of judges. Mr. Tait said the Governor's attitude constituted a challenge to the Republicans, presumably to nominate candidates against the Democratic nominees next fall.

In making mention of a "recent Baltimore judicial vacancy," Mr. Tait evidently refers to the appointment of Eugene O'Dunne, who was named to the Supreme Bench to fill the place left vacant by the death of Judge W. Stuart Symington, Jr.

Says Charge Is Vindicated.

"On behalf of the Republicans," Mr. Tait said, "Governor Ritchie was recently charged with exercising extraordinary Executive authority, usurping legislative powers and politically meddling with the judiciary.

"This last charge is vindicated by the strong protest emanating from the Bar Association against what was declared to be a political appointment to a recent Baltimore judicial vacancy. It is hoped the Bar Association will stand by its convictions, notwithstanding the letter of mandate to it from the Governor.

"Governor Ritchie has appointed eight Baltimore judges to vacancies. All were Democrats, including those appointed to three vacancies created by the death or retirement of Republicans.

"In the Fourth Judicial Circuit William C. Walsh, Democrat, of Cumberland, was defeated for associate judge by A. A. Doub, Republican. Governor Ritchie then appointed Mr. Walsh to fill a vacancy and jumped him over the head of his previous opponent, Mr. Doub, making Mr. Walsh chief judge of the circuit, thus placing him, though previously defeated by the people, as the Governor's appointee in the Court of Appeals. If this is not politics, what is it?

Calls Appointments Partisan.

"All judicial appointments to vacancies made by Governor Ritchie, both in Baltimore city and the counties, have been exclusively members of his party. After being intrenched as partisans in office, the claim is made that the judicial elections at the end of their appointive terms should be nonpartisan, and all incumbents reelected. The result is simply to rivet in office, with fifteen-year terms, Governor Ritchie's personal partisan judicial appointments to vacancies.

"The natural result of the Governor's policy would be to establish a one-party State judiciary and Court of Appeals. Such a court decides, among various important matters, all legal political questions and election matters appealed to the higher courts.

Challenges G. O. P., He Says.

"The composition of courts can scarcely be called nonpartisan if the bipartisan principle be ignored as Governor Ritchie has constantly done.

"In the face of all these facts now so plainly emphasized through the last political appointment, protested by the Bar Association, it is futile for Governor Ritchie and his friends to utter exalted sentiments about a nonpartisan judiciary.

"Governor Ritchie's whole attitude toward the judiciary is, therefore, an open challenge to the Republicans. The Governor has nailed to the mast his standard of a partisan selection of the Maryland judiciary."

Are You a Good Citizen?

"The obligations of citizenship do no rest solely or chiefly in the exercise of the privilege of voting, or in conducting campaigns or in holding offices. Important as are all these duties, their performance will amount to nothing unless our citizens are imbued with the spirit of our institutions which means respect for a government of law, a sincere desire to better in every practical way the conditions of human life and the disposition to be kindly and fair in all dealings with one's fellow men."—Chas. E. Hughes.

CONVICTED OF MURDER IN PITTSBURGH COURT

Glad LaRue, Former Garrett Countian, Found Guilty By Pennsylvania Jury.

Glad LaRue, formerly of Garrett county where he resided with his parents on a small farm located along the National Highway eight or nine miles east of Grantsville, was found guilty of first degree murder last Saturday in court at Pittsburgh, Pa., for slaying near that city on September 11, Mrs. Mollie McGinnis. The dead woman was found beaten to death near her home.

The jury sitting in LaRue's trial deliberated 70 hours and recommended life imprisonment for LaRue.

LaRue was arrested at his home on the National Highway a few days after the slaying and was charged with accosting the woman on a road near her home and beating her to death when she tried to escape from him.

Mrs. McGinnis was returning to her home from a shopping trip in Wilkinsburg. She was nearing the home of Mrs. Howard Moore, a neighbor, with whom she left her children, Howard, aged four, and Edward, aged six, when a man accosted her. Observing a piece of lead pipe in his hand, Mrs. McGinnis ran into the Moore house and bolted the door.

The man pursued her and when admittance was refused, battered down the door and chased Mrs. McGinnis out of the house. He seized her at the head of the stairway leading from the yard of the Moore home and beat her on the head with the pipe. She struggled until she lost consciousness. Her husband, Howard McGinnis, was asleep in his home about three hundred feet away.

LaRue had been in jail at Pittsburgh on a concealed weapon charge and was paroled in July.

LaRue formerly boarded at the home of Mrs. R. E. Jenkins, mother of Mrs. Moore, at 128 Lambert street, East Liberty, Pa. Police learned that Mrs. McGinnis had refused to rent LaRue a room in her home shortly before the killing. LaRue, according to the authorities, had threatened to "get someone" after Mrs. McGinnis and Mrs. Jenkins had refused him board.

LOCAL BOOTLEGGER TAKEN INTO CUSTODY IN PENNA.

William Durr Sent To Jail at Somerset, Besides Being Assessed $100 Fine by Court

The Salisbury correspondent of the Meyersdale (Pa.) Republican gave an account in his letter of last week of the arrest and conviction of an alleged Garrett countian on the charge of bootlegging at Salisbury Saturday night, February 27th. The article follows:

William Durr, one of several Garrett county (Md.) bootleggers who have long been transporting illicit liquor into Salisbury, was arrested last Saturday night by Constable F. J. Swartzwelder, at the instigation of District Attorney Cober. Durr had long been suspected of transporting booze into Salisbury and when arrested five pints of whiskey were found on his person in that many bottles. The liquor, as well as the offender's Ford car, was confiscated and the culprit was locked up in the borough jail until Sunday when he was committed to the county jail by Squire R. A. Kidner in default of bail in the sum of $1,000. A few local "rummies" appeared before Squire Kidner and offered to go on a bond for Durr, but the squire regarded the whole aggregation not worth more than about 15 cents financially and a good deal less morally and refused all overtures of the would-be bondsmen. The prisoner was accordingly taken to Somerset on Monday where he had a hearing before Judge Berkey. Durr admitted that he had been trafficking in wet goods, but when questioned by the court as to the name of the person he obtained the liquor from his memory was so bad and his answer so unsatisfactory and evasive that the court gave him 30 days in jail in addition to a hundred dollars fine and also required Durr to pay the costs of prosecution.

THE LAST WORDS OF JESUS WITH HIS DISCIPLES.

John 14-17.

I am the way, and the truth, and the life—John 14:6.

E CLASS BANQUET.

One can readily understand the refusal of a Scotch preacher to use any part of these chapters as a sermon text for fear he might mar something of their transcendent beauty. If John is the heart of the Bible then they are the heart of his Gospel. They are the high altar of Christianity's cathedral. And like that earlier model given in the sixth chapter they are builded by our Lord with a bit of bread and a sip of wine. Two disciples had prepared the material with no more notion that from the meager store Christ would rear a structure that would span the centuries and shrine the faith of all believers through all the ages than had the boy of what would result from his offered lunch. It was the Maker of worlds who sat at the table that night.

It was their class banquet. They had completed their course of three years in the school of Christ and were the first class to be graduated. Their education was no more completed than will be that of the class of '26, but there had come the close of a period that must be fittingly marked, and Jesus "desired" to eat with them before He suffered. So they sat together in that Upper Room of Jerusalem while symbols of other classes stirred their memories, for had not Moses been Head Master in the early days? It was as appealing as Napoleon's word to his army in Egypt: "Soldiers, from yonder pyramid, twenty centuries look down upon you!" With such a Teacher and such a past, it is little wonder that an ineffacable impression was made upon the minds of those who were there. Garrulous Peter, silent John, James the big, and James the little, canny Andrew, practical Philip, radical Simon Zelotes, cautious Thomas, expectant Jude, prompt Matthew, dour Judas and the rest gathered about the one figure who accounted for the group itself. It was a strange company differing in so many ways but united by the attraction of Him they called "Teacher." Why had He chosen them? Not because of attractiveness in many cases, nor of age or occupation or capacity, but because they were growable. Peter of the letters is immensely bigger than the fisherman shrieking with physical fear. James the stout defender of the faith in Jerusalem lost his head instead of his temper as he did in the Samaritan village. Jesus picked folks for friends who were open-minded enough to be able to catch a new thought and allow it to come to harvest in their lives; they were responsive souls, and such He seeks today.

THE TABLE TALK.

Much we have here in the give and take of a group in frank talk over the board. The first task was to get rid of Judas whose face and presence stilled the tongues of the rest. Jesus challenged him to change and held a sore heart because of his hard determination in the fact of all the gentle wooing of his Lord. There is an artist's touch in the phrase concerning his going: "It was night," for he strode into the darkness away from the light that has lit this upper room with a glowing glory ever since. Relieved by the removal Jesus became radiant in His revealing of His heart. He began to talk of returning to the Father when Peter naturally interrupted with the request to go along. The reply was a promise, but it carried with it the declaration that he was so far from ready that he would be lying before morning. Under the pressure of the asserted treachery, the failure of "Rock," and the suggestion of His departure, the meal seemed to promise little cheer. It was to relieve this that He turned the talk to the country of "Plenty of Room" to which He was going to prepare for their coming. Thomas, who would dare any journey for his Leader, spoke here a bit testily with his statement that they didn't know where He was going, how could He expect them to know how to get there; why couldn't He be plain? The answer swept into the realm of character that made acquaintanceship with the Father inevitable. In the tribute of Bishop Quayle, "A man like Naphtali Luccock makes heaven necessary and immortality compulsory." It was here that the soul of Philip was stirred so that its deepest desire found expression for a vision such as others seemed to receive. Why couldn't he have the experience of the winged imagination soaring into the unspeakable and the unseen And Jesus took every day of those years of walking along the roads, of eating under trees, of toiling at fishing, teaching, healing, helping or what not, and told him that in their plain every-dayness had been the presence of the Father. Not in the extraordinary but in the humdrum is God's place, because we spend our time there. Jude raised the same question in another form to be told that the abiding place of the returning Lord would be in loving hearts instead of in the clouds to dazzle beholders. So Jesus gave easy access to every question, making the interruption an additional unfolding of His main desire for the disciples.

THE GIFT OF KEYS.

Jesus pressed into their hands keys to great doors that night. One was to a successful organization. That must be made if the world would be won, and they were to love one another as He loved them. That is the distinctive mark of discipleship and the only command of Jesus that applies only to believers. Such unity runs like a golden thread thru all the hours of converse that reach their crown in that prayer of wistful tenderness that marks its close. They were to be one. The betrayal of His cause is in our lack of love and unity that dvide us into competing instead of cooperating groups. Another key is that of obedience that unlocks the door to the friendship of God. "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments. And he shall be loved by my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself unto him. Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." This is not arbitrary but it is the key that unlocks the door to friendship with the soul of every realm, for he who obeys the commands of music becomes the musician, of art the artist, of chemistry the chemist, of mechanics the mechanician. A third key is the faith key to peace. "Believe in Me. If it were not so I would have told you. My peace I leave with you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." In the last year of his life in the African jungle Livingston wrote, "He will keep His word; no doubt of it. He WILL keep His word: doubt is here inadmissable, surely." And his heart was at peace while the body toiled and dropped. A fourth key is the prayer key to power. "If ye ask anything in My name, that will I do." It was the well-worn one of His own using that was placed in their hands and passed on to our own by using which we may learn surely that prayer does change things.

WORK FOR FASHIONABLE SOCIALISTS.

Lady Cynthia Mosley and her husband, Capt. Oswald Mosley, now visiting Chicago, are members of the socialist wing of the British labor party. Their aristocratic affiliations, as well as their high financial rating, naturally attract attention to their radical ideas.

Unquestionably they are sincere in associating themselves with the wage workers and agricultural laborers of Great Britain in attacking the injustices of the present social order in that country, and in advocating thoroughgoing reconstruction on the basis approved by the several schools of socialist—Fabian, Marxian, syndicalist and what not. They repudiate class privilege and preach brotherhood and equality.

Apparently, though, it has not occurred to them to inquire whether socialism, with the elements of State tyranny, bureaucracy, intolerance and inefficiency inseparable from it, is the only feasible substitute for the mixture of feudalism, Toryism and Manchester liberalism represented by the British economic system.

While in the United States they might investigate with profit to their own country the effects of a democratic land tenure, equal opportunity and healthy individualism.They might read Prof. Thomas N. Carver's books on the only economic revolution worth more than a "hill of beans" that is taking place—the diffusion of ownership of property in America by means of employe and customer investments in corporation stocks and bonds. They might learn something of the possibilities of democratizing industry without destroying or paralyzing private initiative, and something of the limitless field open to voluntary co-operation.

Upon their return to Great Britain, and with America's object lessons and tendencies in mind, they might turn to such problems as the abolition of monopoly in land, the systematic development of national resources, the increase in production necessary to a higher national standard of living and the application of democratic principles to education.

Thinkers and students of history and the social sciences should know that the socialist-communist remedies are unsound, repugnant to human nature and the result of extremely superficial diagnoses of the ills of modern society.

THE DEMOCRATIC SITUATION.

Political leaders of all sorts in Washington are somewhat interested now in watching the course of those who have the fortunes of the Democratic party in charge and it is admitted that the path of the lieutenants of the party of Jefferson is not an easy one.

For the Democrats are having more difficulty in getting hold of a live issue than they have experienced in some years. The record of the Democrats in Congress up to this time has not been conducive of good issues. This is admitted by such staunch Democratic organs as the New York World; and Senator Jim Reed, the brilliant and caustic Missourian, recently charged his Democratic compatriots in the Senate with having joined the Republican party.

Up to this time the session of Congress, or more especially the Senate where issues are generally made, has been busy with two principal subjects—the tax bill and the World Court. In both of these measures the Democrats joined almost solidly with the majority in putting over the administration program.

Therefore the Democrats can make no issue out of the World Court. And they are no better off so far as the tax bill is concerned, because most of them lined up for the administration measure. It is now planned to adjourn Congress in May or June and if this is done little time remains for the making of issues.

Some of the Democratic leaders hope to make an issue out of the tariff, but even this is embarrassing to them. For protective tariff sentiment is growing surprising in the south in Democratic strongholds and is not nearly so much of a party issue as it was a few years ago.

The Democrats will enter the Senatorial campaign, of course, with a decided advantage in the fact that in all close states where Seators are to be elected the present incumbent is a Republican. This means that the Democrats have several chances to gain Senators, but are in no danger of losing any. But this advantage is somewhat offset by the lack of issues. Senatorial campaigns, however, are more or less personal, and issues do not always count so much. But the election of 1928 is looming ahead and up to this time the Democrats have made no preparation for it in the way of issues. Unless they can repair the situation materially within the next two years the chances will remain decidedly favorable to the Republicans. At least this is the general opinion of nearly all impartial observers.

AGAINST THE PRIMARY

It looks as if that ill-timed and unnecessary expense to the taxpayers—the state-wide primary—will be abolished at no distant date. It was originated in most states by demagogues and has—ever since its establishment—enabled blocs and minorities to work their will over the desire of the great majority of the voters. The solid, closely organized minority, with selfish men, and personal gain as the chief stimulant, have been, through primaries, able to defeat the will of the divided and unorganized majorities. Inferior men have been able to secure office that would not have had a look-in with the old-fashioned, representative delegate convention. The United States—and Indiana in particular—now have a saner vision and will abolish this un-American, pernicious primary system.

In Indiana the Democrats, under the leadersrip of Thomas Taggart, are now against the primary, and a majority of Republicans have always been so opposed. There is now a clear swingback to the old-fashioned, representative, American form of control of political parties and opposition to direct primaries and bloc system of government.

The Public Health Nurse the Physician's Helper.

The advent of the public health nurse in all of the counties of the State has led to numerous questions in regard to the status of the nurses in the communities they serve. "In some instances," said Miss C. Ethel Monroe, the advisory nurse of the State Department of Health, "the mistake has been made of thinking that the public heath nurse in some ways supplants the practicing physician. This is not the case.

"Public health nurses, like all other nurses are trained to assist physicians in their fight against disease. Just as a prviate duty nurse is an assistant to the physician in charge of the case she is nursing, so the public health nurse is an assistant to the physicians with whom she works. Any sick care that is given by the public health nurse is given only when the patient is under medical care. The doctor's work is in the field of medicine. He diagnoses the case and prescribes the treatment that is to be followed. The nurse supplements the work of the physician by her knowledge of nursing. The physician tells the patient what to do; the nurse, at the request of the phsician, goes into the home and shows the patient or the person who is taking care of him, how to do what has been ordered.

"In every part of her work, the doctor and the public health nurse are allies in the fight for health. For instance, in the work in the schools, after the physical examinations have been made by the health officer, the advice that is given to the parents of children in need of medical attention is, 'Get in touch with your family physician.' The nurse gives her help then in carying out the doctor's recommendations for the improvement of the children's health.

"When a nurse comes in contact with an expectant mother her advice is 'place yourself at once under medical supervision. Visit your physician. Get him to advise you in regad to your diet; to make the necessary examinations and to do all in his power to bring you through this ordeal safely.'

"The nurse is the physician's helper. The two work hand in hand for the promotion of health, the prevention of disease and the conservation of human life."

Pythian Banquet Sidelights.

We respectfully submit the following verses for your approval or disapproval. If you approve of them the publicity committee of Garrett Lodge No. 113, will feel amply repaid for their efforts. Should you disapprove, our peaceful slumbers will be undisturbed. We wish to state with special emphasis that we do not have to resort to personal allusions to keep the order of Knights of Pythias in the minds of the people. Were this lodge located in a teeming metropolis or in a more congested territory, these verses would be out of place. Since our locality is but sparsely populated and every man knows the other we opine that in this case personalities are permissible.

It is not the intention of the banquet committee to revive the ancient customs of banqueting as was in vogue in mediaeval times, but in order to give you some idea of what it will be like we state that—

"In days of old when knights were hold
And knighthood was in flower,"
Come, partake of the delicacies
Prepared by Henry Lauer.

Our Castle Hall, we are glad to state,
To the Sisters is Garrett Temple—
All entertainment is in charge Of Brother H. L. Stemple.

A tireless worker with earnest zeal,
Who strives to make things better;
No small part does this man play—
George Jacob Altstetter.

Small of stature like Zaccheus,
Mighty, nevertheless;
Ready to lend a helping hand
Is our K. of R. and S.

H. P. Stuck will be on the job,
Willing to do his bit—
Directing a score of tray bearers
As hither and yon they flit.

At his desk calm and serene,
Jovial, out of breath,
A smile illumines the countenance
Of our diligent M. of F.

When the festivities are o'er,
The evening's pleasure at end,
Place some credit to the account
Of Brother R. E. Friend.

Automobiles Wrecked on Crellin Road.

Tuesday afternoon, quite unavoidably, the automobiles of Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh and Deputy Sheriff W. D. Casteel were injured in an accident occurring on the Crellin road near the Menear farm where the roadway, on account of the ice and snow blocking it is a one-way thoroughfare. At the point where the accident occurred there is a sharp curve and with the snow blinding both drivers they were unaware of the proximity of one another until too late to stop. Officer Casteel plowed into the snow with his car, as did also Dr. Hinebaugh, but the rear wheels of the former's car failed to give sufficient clearance for passage and the result was that both cars were more or less damaged. Dr. Hinebaugh's car lost its headlights, windshield and bumper and was otherwise less seriously damaged while Officer Casteel's car came off with a badly crimped fender and damaged wheel. Neither driver sustained any injury.

"YOU ARE ENTITLED TO KNOW THE FACTS"
DODGE BROTHERS, INC.

Only STEEL could meet a test like this!

A Dodge Brothers Motor Car . . . A speeding truck racing down hill and out of control . . . A collision . . .

Take one look at this photograph. It is not pretty, to be sure, but it will convince any sensible man that all steel construction is the only safe construction for a motor car body.

That is why Dodge Brothers introduced the all steel body more than eleven years ago, and this year greatly improved and perfected it.

In fact, Dodge Brothers are convinced that the day is not far off when wooden motor car bodies will be a curiosity. People will shudder at the thought of having ridden in them and will thank Dodge Brothers for the greater safety, durability—and beauty, too—of all steel construction.

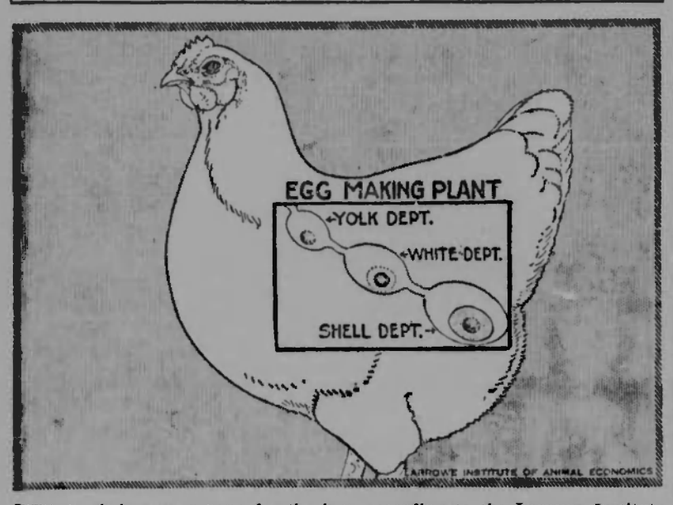
A steel body will stand up under impacts that would crush the average body to bits. Steel cannot splinter. Steel cannot burn. Steel is an armor of protection on the crowded, hurrying highway.

Outwardly, nearly all types of bodies appear to be all steel. In reality, however, most of them are simply frames of wood covered by a metal shell.

Dodge Brothers Motor Car bodies are steel through and through—steel reinforced by steel—buttressed and braced by steel—even the frames and running boards are steel.

And slender, stronger steel corner posts replace the customary bulky posts of wood, affording full, unhampered driving vision on all sides—a safety feature of the first importance!

Travel in safety! Powerful, quick-action brakes, a chassis world-famous for its sturdiness, and a body of steel — these explain the enviable reputation for safety enjoyed by Dodge Brothers Motor Car —and the enviable feeling of safety enjoyed by those who drive it.



The car will continue to be a "four". No reasonable buyer will be distracted from the issue of QUALITY by mere CYLINDER propaganda.

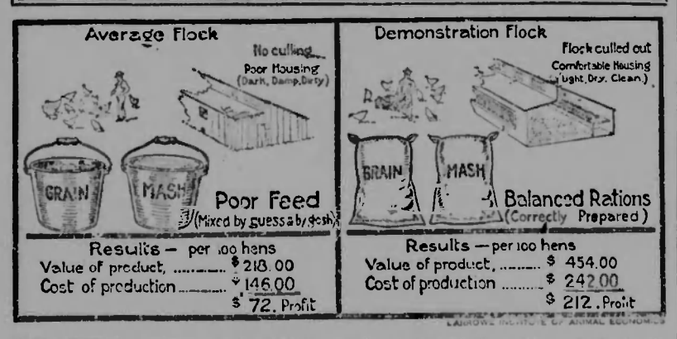
Hen's Own Egg Factory Is Run Like Real Plant



IT'S A whole egg or none for the hen, according to the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. Being an honest manufacturer she does not make half an egg. Her egg "factory" is run like a real plant. When the yolk is made it is then passed into another department where it is surrounded by white, then into a third where it is encased by a layer of the purest form of carbonate of lime, forming the egg shell, after which it is ready to greet a hungry world.

The average hen lays about 72 eggs a year, mostly during warm weather. She should manufacture twice that number, state the institute's experts who, in experimenting with hundreds of laying hens, discovered surprising differences in the number of eggs produced by various poultry rations. If the hen's egg-making apparatus fails to work up to a standard of efficiency it is probably not the hen's fault, but rather that of the poultryman who unknowingly does not provide her with the food material the hen requires to keep all three egg making departments working full time. When the hen is fed sound grains and an efficient mash containing egg-making nutrients that make for the greatest efficiency in her plant, she can't help but make eggs! Feed is the most important single factor in egg production. It is also the biggest item of cost. Profitable results cannot be secured with poor rations.

In addition to providing the best rations for egg production the wise poultryman will watch his flock, to continuously cull out the naturally poor layers, thus building up a flock of heavy-laying fowls. Every effort should also be made to see that the hens are comfortably housed, especially in winter, because dark, damp, dirty quarters may nullify all the advantages resulting from culling and better feeding.

Poultry Profits Tripled by Proper Feed, Care and Culling

UNLESS a poultryman is clearing at least two dollars for each layer in his flock every year, there is something wrong with the methods he is using, says the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. It may be a case of poor layers, poor housing or just plain poor food.

Even the best bred hen will not lay day after day unless she is fed with those elements which she must have to turn into eggs. Any hen will lay in the spring—it's her nature to do this—but if poultry keeping is to be a profitable business the hen must be induced to lay throughout the year. During the cold weather season the days are short and the fowls require additional food. Quantity of grain is important but it takes mash containing egg-making nutrients to produce eggs from Labor day to Easter.

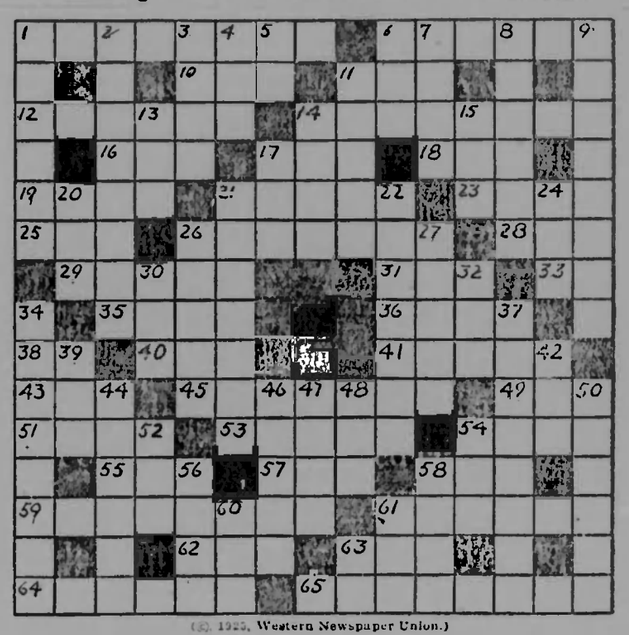
New Way to End Dangerous Cough

The most stubborn cough is relieved with the first dose, and is very often broken up entirely in 24 hours by a new method based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs.



Here is the method: You simply take one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but also loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. So with the cause removed, the severest cough usually disappears quickly.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

DOES GOD CARE?

By F. F. CORLISS.

Physical nature is absolutely indifferent to the welfare of men.

The lightning strikes a church as often as it strikes a saloon. The volcano belches forth its molten lava and destroys a whole city. The earth trembles and starts a giant boulder down the mountain slope and crushes all the inmates of the poor, honest workingman's cabin.

In the wilderness and the jungle animal life hungers and thirsts for blood. The strong fight with tooth and claw to devour the weak and in the seas the big fish live on the little ones.

So nature, whether we speak of it as animate or inanimate, is heedless of life and the well-being of men.

We love to think of our Creator as the perfection of love, wisdom, power and mercy, but if He cared would He not guide and protect man at least from unnecessary loss of life?

Materialists don't believe the universe has any creative design, hence there is no designer—no God. Deists believe in a Creator that is omniscient, omnipotent and omnipresent and that nature reveals a supreme wisdom and purpose in all created things.

To deny Him these attributes would be making Him something less than the Supreme Ruler of the universe.

But when we ascribe the above attributes to our Maker we know that He must be cognizant of the thoughts and acts of men, of the animal life below man and the physical laws of nature.

Hence He knows all about the cruelties of the jungle and of man's inhumanity to man; all about our wars, religious, racial and economic questions, and yet He tolerates them with no more thought than man has in killing potato bugs.

This indifference to physical life throughout nature looks as though life in the cosmic scheme of things has nothing but a transitory value: had an experience to gain only.

When millions of men are sacrificed on fields of battle to gain a privilege or a principle and no one cares but those bereaved and left to suffer, it looks as though the Creator considers the life of the human body no more than He does the cutting of grass or the falling of a tree.

This thought leads one to believe that spirit, the soul, the mind within is all that really matters either to God or to man. Circumstantial evidence would convict the Creator of injustice and cruelty, but it is not our business to judge our Maker. There may be much evidence in His favor that man is not able to discover.

Reason, tempered by justice, ought to be the final arbiter in the settlement of individual or national disputes or rights, but so far in history it never has been. The court of last resort is force—war.

As a nation we can not be called fully civilized, or christainized while we believe that might can make right.

As men think and believe so they act. Man is an imitator of nature in all his ways and works and if he believes that God don't care and that nature rules animal life by the forces that are the strongest, why should he not do likewise?

A Christian Science preacher once said to me:

"Why, Mr. C., God don't know any more about human beings on earth than we know about life in Mars. If you should interrogate the sun, saying, 'Mr. Sun, what can you tell me about darkness?' he would reply, 'I know nothing about it; all is light where I am; light is all that I know.' So with God. He knows nothing but a state of perfection which He is striving to reach in all created things."

Of course I was amazed by such remarks from a man who was supposed to instruct others, so I replied:

"If that is your belief, then you must deny that God is omniscient and omnipresent; also you must deny the power of prayer and yet you are praying to this God who does not know that we exist, for help, favors and guidance."

To such inconsistencies does an illogical belief lead men.

The mind of man has been permitted to interpret the Divine purpose in creation as fast as he has gained an understanding of nature's laws and followed them. To him has been given dominion over all things beneath him and all nature's resources are his to command and to use for the unfoldment of one grand design.

Hence the mind or spirit of man has been given a body through which he could express mind's desires and motives and through which he could use nature's energy in constructive work.

As man has shaped tools and instruments out of elemental material for the better performance of his work, as he has made microscopes and telescopes to aid his vision, as he has made motors and telephones to annihilate distance and all these things being made to serve one ulterior purpose—for the betterment of the physical man. So it seems that God gave men bodies as mere instruments with which to serve the mind, to gain wisdom through experience and to co-operate with Him in unfolding the cosmic plan of the universe and the ultimate perfection of the mind or spirit in humanity.

The preacher was right in believing that God is striving for perfection of that which is imperishable and eternal.

But wrong in thinking that God don't know anything about the existence of human beings and their trials and tribulations and who express His noblest attributes, because God is an ever-present indwelling spirit in the subconscious minds of all men.

My opinion, which has very little value save to me, is that God is unconcerned about the death of man's body, which is but a temporary vehicle, knowing that in due time He can give him a new and better embodiment.

TELEPHONE PIONEER

Charles J. Bell, the Oldest Man in Point of Service, Still Active.

Charles J. Bell, a director of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company and Associated Companies, and President of the American Security and Trust Company, Washington, is the oldest telephone man—in point of service.

Mr. Bell's connection with the telephone business dates back to 187- when he, as a young lad, was associated with his cousin, Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, while he was making his experiments at Tutelo Heights, Brantford, Ontario.

Dr. Bell was at that time studying sound vibrations and making experiments with the harmonic telegraph. To produce the vibrations he used a human ear, to the drum of which was attached a stylus, which recorded the sound waves on a glass plate covered with lamp black. Mr. Bell says that his chief duty was speaking into the human ear and making photo prints of the plates on which the sound waves were recorded for the use of Dr. Bell.

HARRIS & EWING

Shortly after helping with these experiments, Mr. Bell entered the Imperial Bank of Canada but in 1879 resigned his position to act as secretary to Dr. Bell, who at that time was carrying on his photophone experiments, and in connection with Dr. Chichester A. Bell and Sumner Tainter perfecting the graphophone.

In 1881 Mr. Bell returned to telephone work in the service of the Bell Telephone Company of Philadelphia. While there, he opened the Germantown central office and was manager, troubleman and installer. Later in the year he went abroad as general manager for the National Telephone Company of England. He established the first telephone service in Leeds, Bradford and Hull, the first three offices opened in the north of England.

Later Mr. Bell became a director in the International Bell Telephone Company, which operated in several European countries. Mr. Bell came to Washington in 1883, where he has since been located. He was director of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania from its organization until its merger with other companies.

He was born in Ireland in 1858, and was educated at Wesleyan College.

Poor Excuse.

The man who is blind to his neighbor's faults may be so merely because he thinks that affords him an excuse for having faults of his own.

What other phase of agriculture is as profitable as dairying, when it is conducted by a person with sufficient personal pride; and one who knows his cows and understands his business?

What offers so little encouragement as does dairying to the careless person, who knows not what kind of cows he milks, or what kind of milk he produces or sells?

THE REPUBLICAN

VOLUME 51. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, MARCH 18, 1926 NUMBER 4.

BECOMES BRIDE FOR THIRD TIME IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mrs. Amanda J. Connor Weds George Smoot, 78, Canoe Man at Colonial Beach, Va.

Last Saturday evening a special telegram to the Cumberland Times was wired from Washington, D. C., containing the details of a marriage taking place in the Capital City Saturday afternoon, the bride being a former resident of Garrett county. She had spent the past several months in Oakland, going from here to Washington Saturday morning. The woman is a sister of the late Alexander Sowers, of Oakland. Her first husband, Conner, died at Kitzmiller several years ago. She then married George Bowers, from whom she ootained a divorce and again assumed the name of Conner. Mrs. Conner is the mother of a number of children, all of whom are grown. One daughter, Mrs. DeAtlie, is the owner of a hotel at Colonial Beach, Va., with whom she resided during the summer months.

The telegram to the Cumberland paper, which appeared in the Sunday morning edition, reads as follows, it being printed under a Washington date line of the 13th inst.:

Blessing of at least one of the children of George L. Smoot, seventy-eight years old, are upon his head today following his marriage to the former Mrs. Amanda J. Conner, of Oakland, Maryland, sixty-nine-year old widow.

Mrs. Beulah McAlwee, of Washington, is the pronouncer of the blessing upon her father's head. She said that the seventy-nine-year old, three-time benedict, has the right to venture again upon matrimony if he so desires.

The ceremony was performed this afternoon by the Rev. William Hoffman, at the Waugh Methodist church.

Canoe Man at Summer Resort

For many, many summers, ardent swains and their fair maids have sought out Smoot, who is the canoe man at Colonial Beach, Virginia. He has set them all a good example, for up to today he has been married twice. Now its three times for him. His other two wives died. Smoot is the father of four children, the grandfather of eight and the great-grandfather of six.

Met Two Years Ago.

The Oakland woman met the canoe man at Colonial Beach two years ago and there is the atmosphere of the Potomac love's loveship weaved her spell over him. Smoot was one of Mosey's raiders during the Cival War. During the winter he lives with his daughter here. He was born in West Moreland county, Virginia, and ever since Colonial Beach became a summer resort he has been part of it. According to the Rev. Hoffman, Smoot looks like a man many years younger than the age given on the marriage license.

Dolled Up For Event

Today a reporter found him in a barber shop just before the ceremony. He was ordering the whole bill of fare, including massages, hair singe and other frills of the tonsorial artist. From under the steaming towels he let it be known that he was happy as a prospective bridegroom, but not nervous. He had been married too often to permit a third ceremony to mar his serenity and besides most of his recent life had been spent among the love ships where romance becomes the common place by reputation. Smoot has a son, William H. Smoot, from whom he has not heard for a year or more. This also is Mrs. Smoot's third matrimonial venture. One of her other husbands was divorced and the other died.

SUFFERS BROKEN LEG

Stanley Ashby, Crellin, Victim of Accident at Stanley Coal Company's Mine Tuesday

Stanley Ashby, pit boss at the Stanley Coal Company's mine near Crellin, was seriously injured Tuesday afternoon by being run over by a loaded mine car as it was being shifted from the main track to a switch running to the stone dump of the workings.

At the point where the accident occurred there is an incline and the car loaded with rock had attained considerable headway. To avoid a wreck and consequent delay in the operation of the mine Mr. Ashby attempted to stop the car by applying the brakes, but losing his balance he fell with his leg across the rail and the car passed over it producing a compound fracture as well as crushing the leg and bone to a pulp.

As quickly as possible Dr. McComas responded to a hurried call for surgical aid and made the injured man as comfortable as possible.

Mr. Ashby recently recovered from a serious injury which he sustained at the same mine when he was struck on the head by an overhead piece of timber and which resulted in a slight fracture of his skull.

Ancient Sugar Vessels.

When Henry C. Werner was scalding his sugar keelers a week or two ago, preparatory to making sugar, he found one vessel with the brand, "Peter Meyers, 1822." It is therefore 104 years old and still in good state of preservation, the white pine staves being in good condition and only the bottom of the vessel showing signs of decay. He also found another vessel with the Peter Meyers brand, dated 1866. Peter Meyers was the pioneer business man of Meyersdale. He died in 1870. The sugar camp on the Meyers farm was closed some years ago and the keelers were sold. Henry Werner purchased some of them but did not notice until now how old some of them are.—Meyersdale Republican.

FEDERAL AGENT HARVEY HAS A NARROW ESCAPE

Still, Containing First-Run Liquor, Exploded When He Attempted to Destroy It.

Prohibition Agent William R. Harvey narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday afternoon when a 200-gallon still, which he attempted to destroy, located in the woods near the village of Henry, Garrett county, exploded and flames fifteen feet high shot into the air. Harvey escaped with bruises, received when he fell over a pump as he jumped backward to escape the flames. Henry is located about fifteen miles south of Oakland on the Western Maryland Railway.

Harvey and Agents C. D. Jarvis and H. R. Stotler went to Henry yesterday from Cumberland and after doing a little scouting found the huge plant in operation. Believeing the still was filled with mash, Harvey chopped a hole in the side of it, whereupon the first-run liquor, which it actually contained flowed down into the fire beneath it and caused the explosion. As a result of the blaze the shack containing the still and other paraphernalia was completely destroyed.

The agents, in addition to the 200-gallon still discovered in operation, also found a 40-gallon still, 72 bbls of whiskey mash and 255 gallons of moonshine liquor at the plant. A vat of a thousand gallons capacity, and containing 200 gallons of mash was also discovered and destroyed.

Fory Whitmer and Philip Helbig, who were said to be in charge of the outfit when the officers arrived, were arrested and taken to Cumberland where they are being held at the police station for a hearing today before United States Commissioner Thomas J. Anderson.

The two men, according to the federal agents, stated that the plant captured by them yesterday had been in operation for two years. It was complete in every detail and according to Agent Harvey was one of the best and largest outfits every seized in this section.

The officers also stated that their prisoners attempted to use a twelve-guage pump-gun in the shack, but they were taken so completely by surprise that they were unable to get the gun in action.

Much In Little.

The following little note, containing a whole lot of truth, was written by a native born Garrett county boy to his grandmother, Mrs. Charles Browning, from Sebring, Florida, a few days ago, the writer being a son of Mr. and Mrs. Cheston Browning, of Deer Park, who have been at Sebring and other Florida points during the winter:

Sebring, Fla., Feb. 19, 1926.

I was born Sept. 14, 1915, at Deer Park, Garrett county, Md. I went to school in the village by the name of Deer Park. I had a lot of friends up there. I caddy in the summer and make a little spare change. I lived there nine happy years but when I hit Florida my unhappy days began.

TREES FOR ROADSIDES

Will Be Furnished Free by the State Department of Forestry

The State Forestry Department offers to furnish this spring a sufficient number of trees for planting 5 miles of improved, public highway. Four species of trees are available—black walnut, black locust, cypress and American elm. The trees will be distributed to responsible organizations or individuals for planting not less than one-quarter mile, nor over one mile, on both sides of the highway. There must be sufficient space to place the trees within the right-of-way of the highway, and far enough from the center of the roadway to meet road requirements.

Applications will be filed in the order in which they are received, but preference will be given to the locations that are best adapted for tree planting and where the greatest public benefit will be secured. Prompt action is necessary as the planting season has already opened in Southern Maryland. Full particulars and application forms will be sent upon request to the State Department of Forestry, 1411 Fidelity Building, Baltimore, Maryland.

The Forestry Department will examine locations where plantings are proposed t odetermine their adaptibility for tree planting and to what extent each meets requirements. In cases where planting is practicable a definite plan will then be prepared and submitted to the parties interested.

NEW LIFE INJECTED INTO GARRETT COUNTY FAIR

At a Meeting of Business and Professional Men Held Here Last Night.

At a meeting held last night at the City Hall, sponsored by Mayor Fraley and others interested in the success of the Garrett County Fair, a representative number of the business and professional men of Oakland was present and showed keen interest in all the proceedings. The moral and financial support of almost every person present was pledged to the officers and directors of the Association with the result that this body of men will likewise take new interest and hearten up to their responsibilities to a greater degree than heretofore.

Attorney Julius C. Renninger was chairman of the meeting which had as its secretary Mr. Joseph E. Harned

In the few remarks made by Mr. Renninger the keynote of the meeting was sounded when he so well said that "the annual fair was of vital interest and benefit to the entire populace of the county, whether townsmen or those living in the rural communities." And continuing he said that it was his opinion that the townsmen were not working with the farmer, and vice versa, and that if the fair was to be made the success it should be and reflect the community's interests it behooves the entire populace to plan and work for a mutual objective.

Dr. Henry W. McComas, president of the Fair Association, also addressed the body of citizens and talked very fluently upon the needs of the Association to make the fair of 1926 the largest and best assembly yet held in Garrett county. After his remarks, Mr. Daniel Orendorf, who has been manager of the Association for the past two years, made an earnest plea for cooperation between business men and agriculturalists to make the fair the success it should be. Mr. Orendorf's earnestness showed his interest in the fair and its success.

The consensus of opinon was that to make the fair what it should be finances were necessary and to raise money a motion was made to open the books of the Association for the sale of stock and also to place upon sale at once several thousand season tickets for admission to the 1926 fair. As a result of this several hundred dollars of stock was disposed of to those present and tickets approximating $360 were sold.

Dr. T. B. Symons, Director of Maryland Extension Service, was also present and made a few impromptu remarks upon the necessity of publicity in making a fair as well as any other undertaking a success and suggested that now is the time to begin advertising the Garrett County Fair. He said the best advertising writer procurable should be engaged and put to work now.

It was further proposed that in addition to selling tickets in advance to business and professional men of Oakland that tickets be placed with the public school teachers of the county who are to dispose of them and thus earn a reward for their efforts.

This afternoon at 1:30 at the Court House Dr. Symons will address the agriculturalists and others on the subject, "The value of a County Fair to the Farmer." This meeting has been advertised through the granges and otherwise and a goodly number of citizens are expected to be present.

ROTARY CLUB ADDRESSED BY COUNTY HEALTH NURSE

Miss King, as Guest of the Organization, Touched Upon the Duties of Nurse and People

Miss Rhesa M. King, public health nurse of Garrett county, working under the direction of the State Department of Health of Maryland, was the guest of the Oakland Rotary Club on Friday evening of last week when the members of that organization assembled for their luncheon at the William-James Hotel.

Miss King, by invitation extended a week previous, addressed the club on her work in the county and what she hoped to accomplish and asked for the cooperation of the club as individuals and a body in carrying out her program. Miss King's remarks at the club dinner are given below:

Mr. President and Members of the Oakland Rotary Club:

I stand before you tonight as the Public Health Nurse of Garrett county. You have all heard of nurses—the graduate nurse the registered nurse, the trained nurse, and the public health nurse. Are they all one? If not, what is the difference? The graduate, trained or registered nurse is the same, but the public health nurse is a little more—she is trained especially to look after the public health—she is the Public's Health Nurse.

The nurse as a whole looks after the sick, but a public health nurse teachers, thru demonstrations, talks and various ways, means of protecting one's self from disease, or in other words, she teaches prevention. She does not diagnose cases; she is not a physician; she does not give nursing care only on rare occasions, and then only under the doctor's directions. She has a variety of duties though, which usually consists of her own work as well as every other kind of work which no one else has time for.

In the short time I have been in Garrett county and after having several conferences with various people, I feel sure Garrett county has been completely sold to better health.

I came at a bad time of the year, as there will be only about three months more of school and the roads are bad now, but with patience and doing what I can here in Oakland I will try and do the best I can until the roads open up. I am a firm believer that the way to a parent's heart is thru the child; therefore, I am planning to start my work in the schools. We all know the child of today is the adult of tomorrow and the health of the child today, to a very large extent determines the health of the future adult. Most of us know that good health habits the year around does more to keep the body in a healthy condition than any thing else. A balanced diet, including milk, fruit and at least one leafy vegetable daily, regular hours of sleep with windows open, plenty of outdoos exercise and attention to posture.

My plans are to do as many physical examinations of school children as possible from now on until school closes; also getting into as many homes as I can, offering my assistance wherever it is needed and in general getting acquainted and making myself known.

Perhaps you do not know what I mean by giving a physical examination. Please remember we nurses are not doctors, therefore we do not diagnose cases, but we do call attention to conditions we think a doctor should be consulted about. The physical examination consists of a preliminary examination of eyes, ears, teeth, nose throat, skin, enlarged glands, posture and whether the child is under weight according to the average child. If a condition is found which we consider a doctor's attention should be called to, a note is sent home to the parent telling of this existing condition, and in as many cases as possible a home call is made to see why the correction has not been made. Oftentimes the reasons are: (1). He has always been that way, therefore he must continue to go thru life that way; (2), his grandfather or grandmother were always that way, therefore every generation following must go thru life in the same condition, and various other reasons like that. Then we come to the one big reason: Wanting to consult the doctor and wanting to have the correction made, but because of financial conditions, cannot. We nurses try and find a way to make it possible to have these corrections made if an investigation is made and conditions are found that it is impossible for the parents to take care of it.

I do not believe in giving and giving. Don't misunderstand me, please. I do believe in charity to a certain extent but not to the extent that you will pauperize your people. They should be made to understand that they should try and be self-supporting, and if you ask me I think you need a good—please understand me—a good social worker. Some center to direct your charity work from or you are going on and on and your county is going to keep on being pauperized.

I understand this county gives freely to the Near East Relief fund, a very worthy cause, I am sure, but where in this wide, wide world is there someone collecting funds to send to help the poor of Garrett county? and you have plenty of them, too. Charity should begin at home.

There are a few ways in which you can help your county nurse:

(1). Find out what your nurse is doing;

(2). See if the public approves of her;

(3). Is she worth the money spent for her services?

Think these things over in your mind and then see what you can do to help. Help her to stamp out tuberculosis; encourage clinics, such as prenatal, pre-school child, baby clinics, etc. This stimulates the public to the extent that they realize the meaning of prevention: in other words, boost for better health in Garrett county.

We want to make Garrett county free of tuberculosis; we want the healthiest children in the country; we want the best babies in the world; the healthiest parents, the most self-supporting people to be found anywhere. How are we going to do this? Simply by cooperation.

We must educate our children in the best way to live, as they are our coming generation. Therefore, let us work together to give Garrett county health in education and education in health. I am ready to do my part. Are you?

BROWNINGS TO BROADCAST FROM KDKA SATURDAY

Garrett County's Premier Fiddlers Will Go To Pittsburgh And Play That Night.

Sponsored by Messrs. G. A. Fraley & Sons, merchants, and by Kerins Bros., owners of the Kerins' Garage in Oakland, both of which firms have shown considerable enthusiasm in the KDKA, Pittsburgh, a member of the Fraley firm will leave Oakland Saturday morning for Pittsburgh, accompanied by Messrs. Abel and Thomas Browning, old-time fiddlers, and John Browning, harpist, who is a nephew of the fiddlers, and at 7:30 the trio will broadcast their program from the Pittsburgh station under direction of the management of the Stockmen's Exchange studio in East Pittsburgh. The program will be on from the hour above stated until ten o'clock.

In order that many persons in Garrett county who do not have radio outfits in their homes, several private owners have arranged to install their sets at central points. Messrs. Kerins' Bros. will have one of their high-class outfits at the Hall of the Sunnyside Grange, at Fraley's store and also at their place of business on Green street in Oakland.

The Messrs. Browning appeared at the Maryland Theatre in Oakland on Monday night where they entered a contest with the Fiddling Mountaineers of Kentucky and Tennessee and in which the local musicians were proclaimed easy winners, Abel Browning receiving first prize and Thomas J. Browning second prize.

These two are the surviving members of a family of six sons of the late John L. Browning, each of whom were violin players of prominence in Garrett county. When all together the six brothers would play together and produced music so closely in unison that it appeared that one great instrument only was being played.

They are unable to read a note of music but can play any violin number upon hearing it executed once. It is said of them that once a noted German violin professor heard the brothers play and he was so impressed with their peculiar style of harmonics that he asked them to allow him to learn their execution. The music master was invited to visit their big and hospitable home where, he said, he would remain a few days to learn what they knew. His visit lasted four months and then the professor said that he had accomplished some of their peculiar technique.

OHIBITION A FAILURE?

Frances E. Willard memorial address delivered by Rev Perry J. Cook, pastor of the First Church of Christ at the annual W. C. T. U. meeting held at Elkins, West Va., February 21st, 1926).

As a basis for the discussion of the question at hand, I want to call your attention to one of Frances Willard's favorite verses of Holy Writ which sets forth not only the program of the prohibition forces but the program of every high and holy endeavor movement that has ever succeeded in all history and which was and is the program of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. It is set forth in the first verse of the first chapter of Acts: "The former treatise I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and teach." DO and TEACH. Each supplements the other, while both are essential to prohibition enforcement. We must do, be active, in creating sentiment; and we must teach, enlighten the public as to the success of enforcement and the benefits derived therefrom.

The nucleus of American manhood, born of Anglo-Saxon stock, feared not to face the threat of death but dared to venture out that right and liberty might prevail. Born of this stock and spirit, the American people have never been afraid to launch out on great programs; first, of colonization; then constitutional organization; then, defense of liberty; then, the abolition of slavery; then, the passing of the Eighteenth Amendment; and lastly, the enfranchisement of womanhood; all because they have had great moral and spiritual convictions that right and liberty must prevail. Having put her hand to the plow of great moral issues America has never turned back, and never will, in spite of false reports, gloomy forebodings and dire prophecies to the contrary.

The heroic women of the Crusade days did not know very much about legal machinery and enforcement laws, but they did know the corrupting influence of the life-wrecking and soul-damning liquor traffic, and they had faith and courage to venture forth. They were imbued with that superb spirit which cannot be defined, but which makes conquerors. Upon this basis was started this great movement which has given us the Volstead act and placed in our constitution the eighteenth amendment. People laughed when first told that the great west and then the south was going dry, but they did. People laughed when told that national prohibition was proposed, but it came by overwhelming adoption. Once adopted, some started laughing when told it would be enforced. But today with enforcement only a few years old it has been so successful that it is the chief subject of conversation and occupies the front page of the press the country over, and is attracting favorable attention abroad.

Is prohibition a failure? Let us not hasten to answer until we have judged it from at least two logical viewpoints: First, its enforcement; second, its benefits. Bearing in mind, first of all, that a feeble enforcement can best be measured by the trend of its enemies efforts to repeal or to nullify the law. And with each succeeding year of prohibition the wets are pouring additional millions with increased efforts into its opposition. Mr. Haynes says, "You can tell how tightly the shoe pinches by the loudness of the yell." The wet public press had been glutted with the stories of theft, murder and bootlegging and dragging all the blame to the door of prohibition. This yell, however, is but the evidence of the tightly pinching shoe. The wets are grasping at straws and are drowning by degrees.

Federal Judge McClintock, before whom liquor cases have been tried through the years, and who therefore speaks with authority, says there is not now as much liquor sold and drunk in a month as there was formerly on a single Saturday night. The Christmas season just past was almost free from the drunken brawls and murders which were so common in the days of the saloon. Dr. A. G. Rutherford, superintendent of the State Hospital at Welch, West Va., verifies this by asserting that with each succeeding year the number of cases brought to the hospital as a result of intoxication becomes less and less. Federal Judge James Wilkerson, of Chicago, recently announced that "jail sentences instead of fines will be imposed on soft-drink-parlor owners found guilty of violating the prohibition law" when they are taken before him.

The Sixty-eighth Congress rejected all wet legislation, voted over $9,000,000 for enforcement; $50,000 for posters appealing for law observance and $50,000 for special counsel for prosecutions. The use of forfeited automobiles and other vehicles by the coast guard and prohibition unit was authorized. The Sixty-ninth Congress, in its first test vote, in December, defeated the wet attempt to cripple enforcement by limiting the purchase of evidence of illicit sales. Only 17 wet votes were cast to 139 drys.

Anti-smuggling treaties with eleven nations have been drafted and nine of them are now in effect. More effective control of liquors and industrial alcohol is provided by ten new regulations just issued. The department of justice has announced that it will prosecute all offenders, both large and small. During the last fiscal year there were 38,925 convictions in federal courts alone, while in many cases the majority of offenders apprehended by federal officers are tride in State courts.

The United States court during the past year upheld the right of officers to search an automobile without procuring a search warrant when they had reasonable cause to believe liquor was being illegally transported, and they establish the power of Congress to regulate the manufacture and distribution of non-beverage alcohol. While 17 state enforcement codes were strengthened in the past year. As to the cost of enforcement, let us bear in mind that fines and penalties imposed in federal cases alone totaled $7,934,534.69, which nearly replaces the $9,201,534.06 expended for enforcement.

President Coolidge declares for enforcement of prohibition in his budget message to Congress, saying that "every available resource of the government must be employed for prohibition enforcement." Are we making progress? Of course we are making progress! Entirely too much progress to suit the opposition, for prohibition enforcement and observance are gaining rapidly now in the United States. And in this epochal contest against the liquor evil let us remember that this governmental policy is but here in America, but it is coming to the whole wide world. And, friends, the achievements of enforcement have just begun.

Now, what benefits have we derived? We all too well know from past experiences that lawless drinking is a menace to the republic itself. From actual statistics we have benefitted by a lowering of our national death rate; by having 1,878 less prisoners in the jails of our State in 1923 than we had in 1910; public drunkenness and disorder has greatly decreased; we have a lowered rate of alcohol insanity; a falling off in the cases of destitution; a rapid improvement in school and college attendance; increased activity in home building and bank accounts and abandonment of institutions for the cure of drunkenness. This alone is indisputable evidence that prohibition, even imperfectly enforced as yet, is making mighty strides against the downward influence on society and is creating in society a new and more healthful life.

A saloon ridden America could not have bought 2,427,000 motor vehicles purchased in 1924. There is more money in the pockets of the average man since the bartender's cash register rings up no more drinks. Herbert Hoover declares that prohibition has had a mighty influence on the increased efficiency of American labor. Dr. Hoffman, the foremost health statistician in the country states that bright's disease has decreased 20 per cent since 1917 and he attributes this blessing to the diminished use of liquor.

America's prohibition laws are not only benefitting the United States but are wielding a healthy influence to the outside world. Some of England's wisest statesmen are earnestly considering the question and even the government of Germany has provided for scientific temperance instruction in its schools. Shall not we of America continue to hold high the torch of Liberty and total abstinence from alcoholic liquors and prohibition in the traffic of the same? Shall not our liberty and prosperity continue to enlighten the world until the demon rum has been banished from the earth? For never were clear eyes, steady nerves and sober brains so essential to society as today. Modern inventions of machinery has absolutely revolutionized the world until today a drunken mind is not only an enemy to the soul within but is a menace to society. In these days of fast time and congested traffic, with 60,000 engineers at the throttle and with 17,000,000 automobiles traveling our highways, our nation would be insane to think that we could afford to have these brains befuddled with alcohol. It would be nothing short of national suicide. No, this must not be. John Barleycorn has been caught in the fast revolving machinery of American progress where he shall be ground back to the dust from which he came.

He is indeed blind who does not see in this struggle the great spiritual impulses whose progress is not stated by figures, and years, and tabulations, but by the benefit accruing to the great masses of the people in their home life, social and moral betterment, and economic advances. We are pleased but not satisfied with the progress of prohibition. Our work has, without question, been effective and well directed. But we must not underestimate the strength and activities of our country's arch-enemy, the liquor gang, who with their selfish and ulterior motives have never before in all their long and sordid history spent more money, engaged more agitators, given more attention to publicity, nor been as bold in mocking the law with the destructive spirit of anarchy as they are today.

Hence as pure red-blooded Americans and as Christian citizens, fully cognizant of the sancity of the prohibition cause, and as keenly alert to the Satanic strength and spirit of the enemy, let us go forward in the spirit of the advice given by the immortal Lincoln: "Who after the freedom of the human slave, said, turn now to the temperance revolution. In it we shall find a stronger bondage broken, a viler slavery manumitted, a greater tyrant deposed—in it, more want supplied, more disease healed, more sorrow assuaged." "Happy day when all appetities controlled, all poisons subdued, all matter subjected; mind, all conquering mind shall live and move, the monarch of the world. Glorious consummation! Hail fall of fury! Reign of reason, all hail!"

GRANTSVILLE

A very interesting Parent-Teacher meeting was held at the high school Wednesday evening. A large attendance of parents and patrons were present. Prof. M. W. Whiteford, president, presided and the minutes were read by Miss Angela Getty, secretary.

Several songs were sung from the new song books, recently purchased by the association. Miss Ada Lobach at the piano.

Three demonstration lessons in appreciation were taught by the teachers of the grammar school department. Miss Wilson conducted the study of a picture with grade one, two and three. Miss Lobach, the study of a poem with grades four and five, and Miss Hershberger gave a lesson in music appreciation with the victrola, in sxith and seventh grades.

At the conclusion of the lesson Miss Bannatyne, supervisor, explained the value of such studies in appreciation and the place they have in the school curriculum.

Miss Bannatyne also gave a splendid talk on "The Parent-Teacher Association, Its Purpose and Function." In the course of her talk she pointed out that if a Parent-Teacher Association is to justify its existence and fulfill its purposes it must function in two ways. First, by adopting a program of work, and second, a program of study.

Several texts dealing with school problems of vital interest to parents were suggested which might profitably be taken up and studied at each meeting.

The improving and beautifying of the school grounds was suggested as a very worthy project which might be undertaken by the association this spring. Miss Bannatyne's address has called forth much favorable comment in the community and it is expected that the members will take steps toward carrying out this project in the near future.

A piano solo was rendered by Master Clyde Bender.

Miss King gave a short talk on the importance of toxin-antitoxin as a preventative for diphtheria.

The Grantsville Musical Club devoted its tenth program to the following selections appropriate to the season.

Piano, "Lento Religiosi," Chopin, Mrs. George Diefenbach.

Sketch, Sacred Music, Miss Ethel Broadwater.

Voice, Aria from "The Messiah," Handel, Mr. George Diefenbach.

Piano, "Adagio," Hayden, Mrs. W. Harold Miller.

Sketch, Music's Mission, Miss Winterberg.

Voice, "I Need Thee, Precious Jesus," Strelezki Mrs. Harry Bender.

Reading, "David Before King Saul," Miss Mary Miller.

Piano, "Consolation," Listz, Miss Wallace.

Current Events, Mrs. A. C. Stanton.

Mrs. Levi Resh, of Bittinger, is a patient at the Western Maryland Hospital.

The Men's Club was delightfully entertained at the home of Dr. B. T. Keller, Thursday evening. The honors in five hundred were won by Otto Bender. A delicious luncheon was served by Mrs. Keller.

John Hanft, from Deal, Pa., is spending several days with his family.

William Winterberg attended the funeral of Undertaker Louis Stein in Cumberland this week.

Word was received here this week of the death of Mrs. D. M. P. Loughry (nee Anna Lowenstein) of Greensburg, Pa., which occurred Sunday. The funeral was held Wednesday. Mrs. John Zehner, Mrs. C. H. Bill, Miss Christina and William Winterburg are all relatives.

Harold Stanton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. U. Stanton, has accepted a position in the Dairy Department at the University of Maryland, College Park.

THE WOMAN TO PAY

In these days of so many developments we have almost ceased to be surprised at anything, yet it is a little startling to read that a wife has been awarded $200,000 from a woman for alienating her husband's affections. Our legal code has been built up on the assumption that women are more in need of special provision and protection than men, and, though modern feminists spurn all this and demand abolition of such insulting discrimination, there are still old-fashioned conservatives who believe that our original theory was well based. But now, it would appear, the courts are tending toward the feminist view—that a woman should be held responsible in every particular equally with a man, she also being liable to offend and being fully as able to take care of herself as he is to look after his own interests.

At any rate the Supreme Court of New York has ruled that a woman must pay the bill this time. Instead of divorce and heavy alimony paid by the man, as usual, Miss Corliss Palmer, screen actress, must pay $200,000 to Mrs. Brewster for capturing and carrying off Eugene V. Brewster, "wealthy New York magazine publisher." The decision implies that a man may be weak and misled and that a woman may be the resolute perpetrator of the mischief. It is rather a startling reversal of the current ideas of former times, but it is possible that those ideas were not always strictly correct or wholly equitable. At all events we live in a new age, with new developments out of harmony with old customs liable at any time. As regards this particular case, our feminists, at least, ought to be satisfied—and presumably Miss Palmer is well able to pay the bill for her family-disrupting amusement.

IMPATIENCE FOR WEALTH.

The newspapers tell us about this or that person who earned a big sum of money in a short time through mov inpgteieru eoni taoin mm mm moving picture work, baseball, football, etc.

Which tends to create a little discontent in the minds of some. They contrast these glittering prizes with their own hard struggle just to keep a meagre foothold in this slippery world.

High rewards are paid to a certain few who can amuse or arouse the admiration of the public. The actor who can make the people laugh, may earn many times as much as the statesman who confers benefits on the whole nation and makes an imperishable name in history.

Will such contrasts disguest the ordinary person with the slow and patient processes of daily toil? Will they incite him to branch out in some risky speculation or hazardous adventure, hoping to find some short and easy cut, avoiding that long, steep and roundabout path to the City of Gold?

It is well to reflect that the winners of these sensational prizes usually gained them because they had learned to do some one thing surpassingly well. They put their whole energy into that one effort.

The average person can not achieve and sensational success. But that same determination to do some one thing surpassingly well will give him a long boost ahead on that toilsome path.

The City of Gold is not the only place where people can find a happy home. Many who have gone there say it isn't so much after all. They claim there are as many troubles there as anywhere. Most of the fun was in getting there, but once they reached the town they say is seemed to be a pretty dull old kind of a burg, after all.

And they do say that along the old rough path that looks so dusty to the most of us, there are beautiful haunts of friendship and love, with sweet music and the laughter of children.

Card f Thanks.

I want to thank the voters of Oakland for their loyal support of my candidacy resulting in my election as Treasurer of the town of Oakland, at the recent election. I shall endeavor to discharge the duties of the office faithfully.

HALF OF H. S. GRADUATES CONTINUE THEIR STUDIES

Most of Remainder Seek Clerical Work, According to Statistics —Boys Lead in Withdrawals

Virtually half the boys and girls who graduate from high schools in the counties of Maryland continue their education in higher institutions of learning, it is shown in statistics made public Saturday by the State Department of Education at Baltimore.

For the remaining 50 per cent it is shown in the first data on the subject to be collected by the State, clerical work furnishes the most general occupation.

Withdrawals and failures, the department found, were more frequent among boys than among girls, while among specific courses failures were more numerous in the study of Lafin than of any other subject.

Percentages Given.

Of 822 boys and 1,394 girls who graduated from high schools in the counties in June, 1925, 3 per cent of the boys went to normal schools, 34 per cent to colleges or universities and 9 per cent to private commereial schools.

Twenty-one per cent of the girls went to normal schools, 14 per cent to colleges and universities and 9 per cent to private commercial schools.

Seventeen per cent of the boy graduates and 19 per cent of the girls went into clerical work. Trade and agriculture furnished employment, respectively, for 8 and 7 per cent of the boys and 6 per cent of the girls took up nursing, while 20 per cent remained at home.

English Leads List.

The department also made a study of the enrollment in the courses offered in the 152 high schools during the school year ended June, 1925, to show in a general way the preparation which graduates receive for their subsequent vocations.

English was found to be the only subject required of all students. Mathematics was next in importance, having 82 per cent of the boys and 75 per cent of the girls enrolled. Seventy-two per cent of both boys and girls took the so-called social studies, which include civics, history and the problems of American democracy. Science was taken by 69 per cent of the boys and 53 per cent of the girls.

Given Manual Training.

Fifty-eight per cent of the boys took courses in manual training offered in 60 schools for two periods a week and 69 per cent of the girls were instructed in general or vocational home economics in 87 schools.

Latin was studied by 28 per cent of the boys and 34 per cent of the girls in 117 schools; French by 20 and 24 per cent, respectively, of the boys and girls in 29 schools. Spanish was taught in 3 schools and German in 1.

Agriculture was taken by 11 per cent of the boys in 40 high schools, the work being on a vocational basis in some of the cases.

Other Studies Noted.

Stenography, typewriting and bookkeeping were taught in 48 schools to juniors and seniors, comprising 28 per cent of the junior and senior boys and 30 per cent of the junior and senior girls in all the high schools. In addition, 23 schools gave second year courses in commercial arithmetic, spelling and penmanship, which were taken by 24 per cent of the second-year boys and 18 per cent of the girls in the same class.

Approximately one-fourth the boys and girls took courses in physical education two periods a week in 23 schools, while 40 per cent took courses in music for one or two periods a week in 63 schools. Art work was given in 1 school to 76 girls.

Boys Lead in Failures.

The per cent of boys withdrawing and failing in each high school subject is considerably larger than that of the girls. In English, mathematics and social studies and science, withdrawals of boys amounted to approximately 15 per cent of the group compared with 10 per cent of the girls. Failures in these subjects ranged from 9 to 15 per cent of the boys and from 5 to 15 per cent of the girls.

Latin, it was said, more than any other subject, seemed to be a stumbling block to promotion. Failures amounted to 17 per cent of the boys and 10 per cent of the girls studying it. In mathematics 15 per cent of the boys and 10 per cent of the girls failed of promotion. Withdrawals and failures in stenography, typewriting and bookkeeping were somewhat lower than in other subjects. This is attributed to the fact that only juniors and seniors in high school are admitted to these courses, and the majority of those who are unable to do passing work or who are not interested in study probably have been eliminated before the third year.

Time Given by Teachers.

A tabulation of the reports for 800 high school teachers showing the proportion of each teacher's time spent in teaching the various subjects indicates that the total time given to English was equal to the full-time work of 115 teachers. The equivalent of the full-time work of 122 teachers was required for mathematics, 109 for science and 106 for the social studies.

These four subjects required approximately 60 per cent of the total time given by all teachers. The time of 62 teachers was needed for commercial subjects and 99 for Latin, French and Spanish. For home economics, manual training and agriculture the time of 105 teachers was used, and for physical education and music, 12 and 17, respectively.

M. E. CHURCH BOARD CALLS BOOM FOR RITCHIE "JOKE"

Temperance Organization Scores Maryland Executive as Presidential Candidate.

The possibility of Governor Ritchie of Maryland becoming a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency is regarded as a "joke" by the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal church.

"They have been talking of Governor Ritchie of Maryland, for the Democratic Presidentiai nomination," the board observed in its weekly clip-sheet issued some days ago, without making it plain to whom it refers by "they," but any intelligent observer can easily read between the lines as to the identity of the crowd behind Ritchie.

"When they get through joking, why not trot out a few real candidates?

"If Ritchie were nominated, the Republicans could send any cub reporter to Annapolis and get enough real dope in one-half hour to make every real Democrat wish that Ritchie had never been born.

"What do the people who talk of such nominations as this mean anyway? Are they utterly indifferent to the political welfare of scores of Democrats now in Congress who come from communities where prohibition and patriotism are considered almost synonymous?

"Sometimes it seems that the Eastern Democratic machine has not the slightest interest in helping these men maintain their political positions.

"Ritchie's nomination would take dozens of them out of Congress and would be nothing less than an outrage upon them."

PYTHIAN ACTIVITIES

Generally speaking, last Friday's convention of lodge was a quiet one insofar as degree work was concerned. Three of our new members passed their final examination in a creditable manner and are now full fledged Knights. In passing, we wish to compliment these gentlemen on their proficiency in so readily acquiring the necessary knowledge to be real Knights. To the casual passerby all was tranquility within our portals, while in reality discussions of greater or less magnitude were in order.

We wish to report much progress in connection with the banquet arrangements. Bear the date in mind, Friday, April 9th. You will receive your application on which to make your reservation in ample time. Do not fail to answer promptly, else you may be denied the privilege of attending this banquet. Plan to attend with your lady for it will undoubtedly be worth your while.

The entertainment for Friday night, March 19th, promises to be one of the outstanding events of the year. To those with literary inclinations two addresses should appeal. Lovers of music will note with interest that the orchestra will render several selections. The fact that refreshments will be served will attract perhaps greater numbers than either of the other features.

The first address will be given by Brother Walter Wyatt Dawson, banker, philanthropist, traveler, big game hunter, lecturer extraordinary—the Mark Twain of Oakland. He will narrate in his usual dramatic style the thrilling experiences of his recent hunting trip to the wilds of Maine. Perhaps he will describe how he encountered and outran a bear. We take the liberty of making the assertion that should any of that hunting party have sighted a monstrous bruin, Willie Ritola, Jackson Scholz or Paavo Nurmi would have been in the rear of those mighty nimrods. At any rate the account of his travels will be well worth hearing.

Brother H. P. Stuck will also dwell at length on his recent trip to California. He will tell of the scenic wonders of our western coast. He may mention the luxurious modes of travel experienced by himself and family on their transcontinental trip. Who can tell but what he may give us some enlightenment on the "yellow peril" as it exists on our western shores. By all means avail yourself of the opportunity of hearing these vivid accounts of travel.

Don't forget the music and refreshments. Come.

Some Questions And The Answers.

"A county Library—What is it?"

Answer—A central library free to all residents of a county because it belongs to them.

"How shall a beginning be made?"

A.—Create public sentiment by talking about the advantages of the Central Library System; see if a county library law has been passed; If not, get the necessary Enabling Act through the Legislature.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

Cooperative Marketing.

Announcement has been made in The Republican of the proposed system of grading of farmers' products by the local merchants of the county. This idea is being fostered by the members of the Ryan's Glade Grange and the meeting will be held at 10:00 o'clock a. m., Tuesday, March 23rd, 1926.

For a great many years the problem of the farmer was to make two blades of grass grow where one originally grew. But now the problem has become more complicated and the farmer must not only produce the two blades of grass but must market them successfully. Farmers are getting out of the habit of planting in faith, of reaping in hope and marketing by chance and are beginning to realize the value of cooperative marketing. The popular faith of cooperation as a means of improving marketing methods has been very strong and has brought about much more cooperative marketing. While a great deal may be accomplished through organized effort when it is properly applied and correctly employed, too much emphasis cannot be placed in the fact that cooperation is not automatic and not a cure for all ills. Faith in the possibilities of cooperation is essential to its success but faith must be expressed in deeds as well as in words.

Cooperation may be considered a remedy which, when properly applied at the proper time to the proper patient, may be expected to give relief. When farmers in a district undertake coopoerative activities they must have faith in the remedy. Each must be willing to lay aside his individual desires and take the whole remedy, the bitter portions as well as the sweet. This means each must be willing to surrender a portion of his freedom of action; must abide by the will of the majority; must be willing to bind himself to a definite contract and then live up to that agreement, even though there may come a time when to do so would result in a temporary loss.

One of the principal obstacles to successful cooperation is the selfishness of the individual. The success of a cooperative undertaking depends largely on the support it receives from those interested in it. Selfishness and petty jealousies have no place in any cooperative undertaking. Standardization of products grown in a community require a common understanding and concerted action by the farmers of that community. By effective cooperation the farmers in a community producing potatoes for sale can select a certain variety upon which to specialize. Standardization, however, is being carried further than this in many localities.

In order to have standards and grades we must have methods of tests by which the fidelity of these standards can be determined. We must have a definition of terms which we apply to these standards. We must have a formulation of specifications to express these terms. These standards also extend the determination of the specific names. For when we speak of number one clears in lumber we must define what it consists of. We need standards not only of quality but also of dimension. Standards of quality, standards in terms and standards in dimensions at once eliminate a vast amount of unnecessary varieties.

Cooperative marketing and the grading of the farmer's produce according to the suggested plan allows the farmer just what his product is worth according to a standard. This means of marketing is coming to be recognized as a means by which the farmer can get away from the condition under which the buyer fixes the price and reaches a point when he can ask and get a price which will yield him a just reward for his toil.

Some of the essentials that are involved in a successful cooperative marketing plan are:

1. The impossible must not be attempted nor must effort be made to reach the ideal in one bound.
2. There are several distinct and separate general divisions of marketing, such as grain, live stock, dairy products, fruits and vegetables, each of which requires a knowledge of trade conditions, consumer's requirements, credits and transportation different from any of the others.
3. Any system of distribution that is dependent on local market conditions is subject to violent variations, ranging from extreme scarcity to large gluts. The idea is to put the product where it is needed and when it is needed.
4. The consumer's needs must be ascertained accurately from day to day and this information put in the hands of the producers as soon as possible.
5. Products should be standardized or graded on the basis of all their inherent qualities as well as other factors affecting their value.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, MARCH 21, 1926.

JESUS DIES AND RISES FROM THE DEAD.

John 18:1-20:23.

Therefore doth the Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I may take it again.—John 10:17.

INTO THE TUNNEL.

Into the shadows of the garden pressed the throng from the rulers with Judas leading. Commotion followed, blows and blood were turned aside as unworthy weapons of a King and the procession found its way to the house of Annas on Mount Zion. Here the semblance of a trial, a preliminary examination, was hurried through and the prisoner was taken to Caiaphas who held the sentence already determined. The Sanhedrin pronounced its verdict at dawn and before six o'clock they were clamoring at Pilate's door for his confirmation. Now Pilate took small pleasure in the business, for he bitterly despised the group that was in control of Jerusalem affairs. Jesus was only another Jew, but the fact that these wished His death roused his interest and enlisted his effort at securing His release. Convinced by a brief conference that there was no peril in His Kingdom, he sought to have Herod take up the matter. Then he tried to go to the people, but the whip held them steady to the cry of "crucify." Responsibility was accepted with loud shouts as he washed his hands of the affair. Their humanity refused to be placated by the bloody scourge. National pride brought the astounding lie of loyalty to Caesar. Their threat to report him to the emperor convinced him that there was no chance of saving the prisoner and after all what was one Jew more or less, any way? He had better have a legal execution than a lynching, but the efforts made by this Roman offers high evidence of the wonderful personality of the man Jesus. Sentence was pronounced and the sorrowful journey to Calvary was begun. Simon was impressed to bear the cross under the compulsion of Roman spears, but somewhere in the journey he caught sight of the face of love and fell under its spell so that his children became the members of that early group of believers in the Way. So they climbed the hill.

The silence of Jesus is significant. There was all the dignity of a King whose love knew the uselessness of any appeal to holding hate. His colors might be captured, but they would be unlowered. Why bandy words with butchers? The vociferous Pilate is another surprise. That a Roman should befriend a Jew condemned by their highest court was practically unknown among these worshippers of law. Once more it clothes Jesus with kingliness and crowns Him with worth. The determined men who hurled the whole weight of their racial, church and governmental power against this lone figure presents Him again as the most regal form that ever walked the earth.

THE DARKNESS.

Into the tunnel the procession passed. Some of its darkness was that of brutality. The world still was under the rule of tooth and fang and it is only in recent years that something of its horrors are being abated. Fifteen centuries brought only its refinement under the hands of its best people and Sherwood Eddy still reports Methodist and Baptist lynchings in the South. It was under the darkness of greed. There were the blood-spattered soldiers callously gambling for the clothes of those who watched them from their crosses, avidly clamoring for the largest share. Man was nothing; loot was everything. Has the day passed? Has it anything to do with our industrial struggles? Does it share in giving us the most criminal record in the world? Is it ever heard of in our political affairs? Has it ever been hinted that our munitions makers are war makers also? Another black shadow was that of hate. It was heard in the raucous cries of the rabble that trailed their leaders to see the spectacle. It cut in the cultured tones of the rulers who sneeringly demanded that He came down from the cross. It stuttered chokingly from the lips of praying priests. Does it still cloud our world and rear a cross for those who run counter to our desires, our prejudices, our passions? Does it stifle industry, cause lynchings and stir up war?

But there are lights in the darkness. One is above the sufferer's head in the writing in Hebrew, Greek and Latin declaring in the languages of religion, of learning, of power that Jesus is King. Emotion, intellect and will, the whole man bows before His sovereignty and crowns Him Lord of the whole life. There shines the lamp of forgiveness. Torn and suffering He prayed for those who caused the pain. There too is the light of hope. When the thief confessed his wrong and asked for remembrance there was the promise of glorious company in paradise. When Mary's sobs reached His ears and He saw John beside her the lamp of His love flamed upon a welcoming door for her. Calvary could not be built upon a neglected duty. Service to others is not the child of abandoned home ministry. So the darkness has not overcome the lights hung within it by our Lord.

THE RETURN TO DAY.

Talk about "Black Friday!" It was nothing to the "Black Saturday" that followed it! Jesus was dead. The shocked brain was beginning to feel its terrific hurt more keenly as the hours passed. The bloody body of Judas had been found. For once Peter was voiceless except for an occasional shaking sob. Mary was lying prone in the house of John. When the bazaars were open they bought what was lacking of their hasty preparations of Friday and in the gray dawn were at the tomb where they found neither guards nor seal but an open door within which the angels of emptiness and order proclaimed a risen Lord. That vacant tomb is the most eloquent thing in history. And its order declares deliberate power for a Christ returning from a swoon would have made sad disarrangement of the wrappings as would any ghoul who may have sougth to carry the body away. Mary was first to see Him and sped on her joyous errand in the dawn of an everlasting day. Others joined in proclaiming it until most of the disciples were crowded into the Upper Room when night came. Suddenly the babel of everyone talking at once, each trying to report a new rumor or tell a new report of having seen Him, was stilled as He Himself stood in their presence and the well-known voice said: "Peace be unto you!" Convinced, there was high joy that day of days commemorated by every "Lord's Day." Convinced, He commissioned them, "As the Father—so send I you;" He empowered them, "Receive ye the Holy Spirit;" He charted the field in which that power would find exercise and fixed responsibility for its use, "Your failure in restoring sinners is God's failure."

"YOU ARE ENTITLED TO KNOW THE FACTS"
DODGE BROTHERS, INC.

Over a Cliff in this STEEL BODY without injuring the DRIVER!

A careless driver . . . A triple somersault over a cliff . . . and this is the car—a Dodge Brothers all steel safety car.

A triple somersault over a cliff with the car you see in this picture! Such was the experience of its owner, who came through the fall uninjured.

After an hour of repair work, he drove the car from Montana to Minneapolis—a more sensible driver and much wiser.

All steel construction saved his life, as it has saved many other lives in the past, and will save thousands more in the future . . . . . .

Dodge Brothers print this advertisement because they believe motorists are entitled to all steel safety and should insist upon it.

That's why Dodge Brothers introduced all steel construction more than eleven years ago—and recently announced additional all steel safety features.

The streets are swarming with 20,000,000 motor cars—millions more are on the way.

Safety is the issue. Armor yourself and your family with steel.

Dodge Brothers Motor Cars—both open and closed—are all steel in the strictest sense of the term. Steel reinforced by steel—framed, braced and buttressed by steel—with all seams solidly and permanently welded together by electricity.

Slim steel pillars replace the old bulky wooden corner posts—permitting unparalleled driving vision—a safety feature of the first importance.

Compare such bodies with the usual wood, or wood-and-metal body, and you will be astonished that every automobile builder has not adopted this advanced safety construction.

Remember, also, that safety is the watchword of Dodge Brothers construction throughout, as witnessed by Dodge Brothers exceptionally large, quick-action brakes, and the exceptional ruggedness and dependability of Dodge Brothers axles, frames, steering parts, and other vital units.

This car will continue to be a "four".

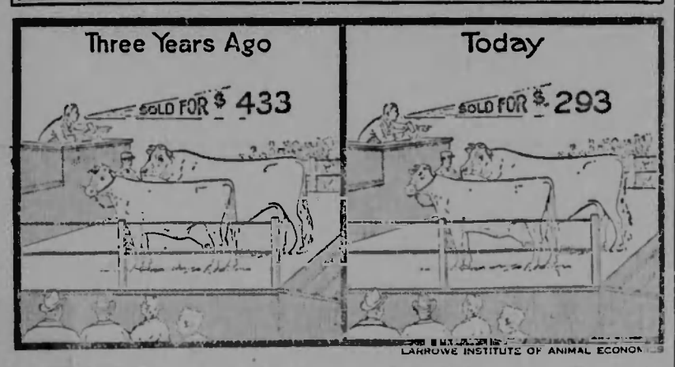
Chicken Prices in 1925 Highest in Four Years

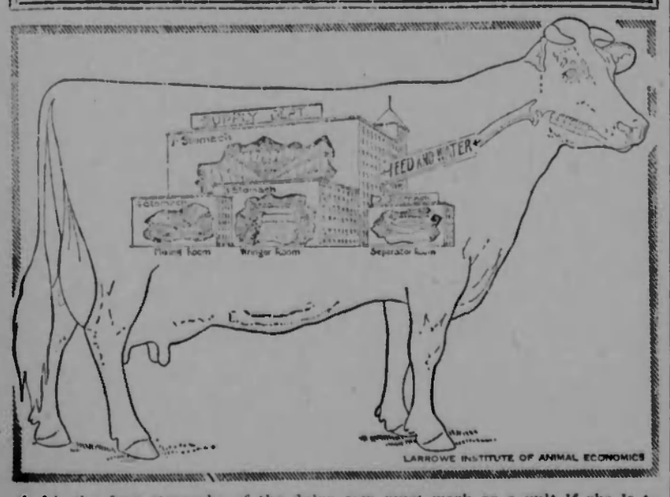


A STEADILY expanding market for table poultry in recent years resulted in an average 1925 farm price per chicken of 68½ cents, the highest since 1921, according to the 1925 market review of the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. Prices for fowls on the New York market during the year were highest in late January when extra quality reached 37 cents a pound. Since then they have ranged between 35 cents and 24 cents until early November when the usual heavy receipts of this time of the year began to be felt. Prices then dropped to 21½ cents a pound, but recovered rapidly as the colder holiday season came on.

Increased demand for poultry in 1925 over the previous year is due in some measure to a lesser consumption in 1924, caused by a wide-spread poultry epidemic in that year. Storage stocks of poultry did not accumulate as rapidly during the past year as they did in 1924, which is an indication of continued good prices during the spring months when this poultry is taken from storage.

Comparatively lower feed costs since 1920 have made poultry profits in recent years the highest in thirty years. Present market demands and industrial conditions in general point to good prices for poultry and poultry products for another two years at least.

Bargain Pure Bred Prices Boost Dairying Profits



A PURE-BRED sire is the first step to profitable dairying, according to the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics, which is urging farmers to take advantage of prevailing low prices of good breeding stock to organize their herds for greater production. A pure-bred bull and cow which three years ago sold for an average of $433 at auction may now be obtained for only $293, statistics show.

"Sire profits" may make all the difference between a farmer's labor income of $500 a year and another farmer's income that is twice that amount. In one agricultural college survey it was found that whereas the average labor income on farms heading their herds with pure-bred bulls was $837 in a year, farms using grade bulls returned a labor income for the year of only $480. But even as he breeds up better cows, the farmer can realize a greater profit from the cows on hand if he will but give more attention to proper feeding. The average cow under ordinary farm conditions is not producing profitably because her grain ration lacks milk-making elements or because she is underfed or overstuffed with poorly balanced food.

There are "poor" pure breds as well as "good." "Pedigree" alone only guarantees pure blood, not results. It takes a good cow, a good dairy ration and good management to succeed. Records of performance and the actual test are what need to be watched in these days of business farming.

Cow Uses Four Stomachs to Digest Its Daily Food

ALL the four stomachs of the dairy cow must work as a unit if she is to produce the most milk year after year, states the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. The first stomach serves as a storehouse for bulky feeds and the second as a separator room, while the third stomach acts as a wringer to squeeze out water from the food, leaving it in a mealy condition, ready for the fourth stomach, where real digestion begins.

How the four stomachs, backed by a plentiful supply of well-balanced feed and pure, fresh water, can be made to pay big profits, is well illustrated in the official cow-testing association record of Sadie, the world's second highest record grade cow. In one year through the stomachs of this plebeian daughter there passed 6,803 pounds of a prepared dairy ration, 777 pounds of dried beet pulp, 2,133 pounds of mixed clover hay and 5,182 pounds of corn silage, which were turned into 21,689 pounds of milk—enough to fill over 10,000 quart bottles! In other words, for every pound of grain entrusted by Sadie to her quartette of stomachs, they repaid with three pounds of milk in the bucket.

Stubborn Coughs Quickly Stopped This New Way

It is often surprising how the most persistent, hacking cough that not only robs you of strength and sleep, but often leads to more serious trouble, yields quickly to a simple but wonderfully effective treatment.

This treatment is based on the prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You take just one teaspoonful at bed time and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of night coughing. So with the cause removed, coughing stops quickly, your sleep undisturbed, and the entire cough condition soon disappears.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, sore throat, hoarseness, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children as well as grown-ups—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

What other phase of agriculture is as profitable as dairying, when it is conducted by a person with sufficient personal pride; and one who knows his cows and understands his business?

What offers so little encouragement as does dairying to the careless person, who knows not what kind of cows he milks, or what kind of milk he produces or sells?

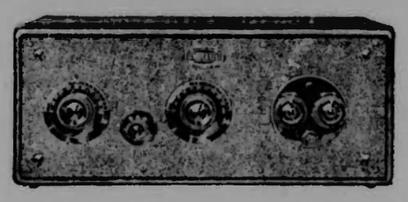
Motor car owners who will listen to sound advice from the experienced often save themselves much worry and a great deal of cash.

F'rinstance: The idea that one should have a NEW car every season or two is an extravagance born in the fertile brain of some motor salesman.



If you have a good car—a car that has stood the test of many thousand miles—then you have ONE good reason for keeping that car.

An overhauling during the winter months—new piston rings—valves ground—ignition tuned—carbon removed—all oil cases cleaned and refilled—fender dents ironed out—then when spring breakes, the old engine will be humming as of yore and you'll be all ready for another summer of pleasure.

We have workmen who are MACHINISTS—and we give you a strict accounting of time consumed.

ESCAPED DEATH WHEN CAR TURNED OVER; BUT JAILED

Patrick E. Raley Is Committed In Default of $100 Fine For Driving While Drunk.

An hour after he miraculously escaped death when his automobile turned turtle after crashing into the Six-Mile-Run bridge, six miles west of Cumberland on the National Highway Friday afternoon, Patrick Edward Raley, 21 years old, of Finzel, Garrett county, was lodged in the Cumberland Jail following his conviction before an Allegany county Justice of the Peace of operating a motor car while under the influence of intoxicants.

Accompanied by another man, whose name the police did not get, and who escaped after the accident, Raley was drivnig his car, a new one, on the National Highway toward Frostburg, when it skidded, turned over and rolled a distance of fifty feet, bringing up against the stone parapet of the bridge spanning the stream. Raley and his companion were both thrown out of the machine, which fact probably saved their lives.

Learning of the accident Corporal Dyas, of the State Motor Police force, hurried to the scene on a motorcycle and found Raley wandering aimlessly about the highway. He took him before Magistrate John J. Dressman, at LeVale, and charged him with operating the automobile while drunk. Magistrate Dressman found Raley guilty and imposed a fine of $100 and costs. In default of payment Raley was sent to the Cumberland Jail.

The accident occurred about 100 yards from the Six-Mile-House. The automobile is a total wreck, its rear end being completely torn out; the wheels smashed and the body dismantled.

Stranger almost than the escape of Raley was the fact that while the automobile was practically a total and complete wreck, having turned over everal times, the windshield does not bear a scratch from the accident.

Castle Hall of Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Scene of Much Merry Making Friday Night

Although other attractions had a tendency to make inroads on our attendance last Friday night, yet the regular attendance records were broken, thus shattering the grave doubts and misgivings entertained by the men in charge of the evening's merry-making as to how many would be present. Knights, not a few responded to the appeal or rather the opportunity to attend en masse and enjoy the program as announced by our new broadcasting station KPPC (Knights of Pythias Publicity Committee). It is most gratifying to the officers and entertainment committee to see such interest manifested as on that occasion.

After the closing of the lodge Mr. F. E. Rathbun assumed the chairmanship and delighted all with the clever manner in which he introduced the speakers of the evening, his introductory remarks being interspersed with dashes of brilliancy and bits of humor.

Brother W. W. Dawson not only demonstrated that he is possessed of all the qualifications attributed to him in our last writing, but earned one more title, that of statistician. His personal adventures as well as the data offered proved highly interesting. We wish to make a correction in connection with the bear story in last week's news. Instead of being a bear that disturbed their equilibrium and almost precipitated a hasty retreat from their well fortified cabin, the cause for alarm turned out to be a porcupine.

Brother H. P. Stuck touched briefly on the most notable features of his trip. The facts he presented, as well as the description of the places visited, made an impression on his listeners. In short, the excellent music, the splendid addresses and the refreshments served were all that anyone could wish.

Do not lose sight of the banquet, hich we predict will eclipse any held former years. More banquet news be given next week.

ROBBERY LAST NIGHT

Oakland Pharmacy Burglarized and Attempt Made to Enter Sincell's Store.

Some time during last night and prior to four o'clock this morning, at which time the discovery was made by Policeman B. B. Nethkin, burglars entered and robbed the Oakland Pharmacy of goods and cash roughly estmated at $100, and an unsuccessful attempt, which was discovered later, was also made to enter the store of H. C. Sincell, which adjoins the pharmacy building.

Entrance to the drug store was effected by forcing a window in the rear. Eversharp pencils, fountain pens and several cameras, in addition to about $15 in cash, taken from the cash register were stolen. The discovery was made by the policeman in his rounds, who at once notified Mr. Jos. E. Harned, the proprietor, by telephone, but no clue, up to this time has been found that would lead to the identity of the burglars.

Entrance to the Sincell building was likewise effected through a rear window of The Republican press room, which adjoins the store room and is separated by two doors. The first door leading into a small lobby was unlocked by the robbers, but the doors leading from thence into the store room withstood the efforts, although a heavy machine wrench taken from one of the work rooms of The Republican was used as a jimmy to force them.

WESTERN MD. ROADS TO BE OILED BY JULY FIRST

Repair Work, Preparatory to Oiling, Has Already Been Started In The Counties.

With the prospect of warmer and fairer weather, Leo T. Downey, district engineer of the Maryland State Roads Commissoin, has ordered all of his maintenance men to patch up the damage done by snow and cold weather to the Garrett-Allegany county roads under State control. After the patching work has been completed the roads in many sections will be resurfaced with the aid of rollers.

With the roads placed in good condition, the maintenance crews will aid in the oiling of 48 miles of State and county roads. Work of oiling the roads will start on May 15, and Mr. Downey is of the opinon that this work will be completed by July 1st.

Maryland roads are only oiled every other year, as it has been the experience of Chairman John N. Mackall, of the State Roads Commission that annual oiling is damaging to the road surface as well as being a great inconvenience to travelers.

A Few Things a County Library Should Do For Its County

1. It should provide the best reading for towns and country, maintaining a public reading room; a children's department and afford a meeting place for civic and literary organizations.

2. It should gather and arrange material for club programs; furnish community helps; provide Sunday school aid.

3. A story hour should be maintained in the children's department, and during the school year weekly book talks held for children in the grades with the purpose of interesting them in the best literature.

4. A special department should be maintained to supply the high school students with supplementary reading. The school department should also furnish material for debates, stories to read aloud, plays and poems.

5. Parcel post, telephone, jitney and express should be freely used to get books to all parts of the county.

6. A net-work of service to the country should be maintained by deposit stations, small collections with a weekly exchange at permanent branches wherever suficient interest is aroused. An automobile should be especially fitted up to go over the county weekly leaving books at the county centers. COMMITTEE.

THE BROWNING BROTHERS GAVE TOWN PROMINENCE

Hundreds of Their Friends In Garrett County and Elsewhere Delighted With Program

The Browning Brothers, Messrs. Abel and Thomas, seconded by their nephew, John Browning, gave Oakland and Garrett county considerable publicity on last Saturday night at which time their reporteire of violin and harp music was broadcasted to all points in the eastern United States from Station KDKA, Pittsburgh, Pa., to which point the party motored from Oakland, accompanied by Mr. Neil Fraley, on Saturday morning, the return to Oakland being made Sunday afternoon.

Hundreds of people in Oakland and other hundreds in various parts of Garrett county heard the program with varying degrees of delight and pride that the county produced such able fiddlers which drew to the studio in Pittsburgh great crowds of the residents of that city who went to greet the entertainers and to express their appreciation.

From many parts of the country letters commending the fiddlers for their entertaining numbers have been received by them and also at the broadcasting station. The Republican office is also in receipt of one or two notes from friends of the editor as well as friends of the Browning brothers. The program came in splendidly at all points in the county. Several numbers were played for especially good friends of the performers whose names were announced from the studio by the director.

Tuesday afternoon Mayor Fraley, who sponsored the entertainment in conjunction with Kerins Brothers, of Oakland, was in receipt of the following letter from the studio in Pittsburgh:

Mr. L. M. Fraley, Oakland, Md.

Dear Sir:—In behalf of the Stockman-Farmer officers and personal, wish to thank you for the excellent feature provided in the shape of the entertainment by the Browning Brothers and their friends. They gave over a wonderful exhibition and it is needless to say that we of the Stockman and KDKA were greatly pleased with these old gentlemen. We hope that sometime in the near future that we may again be able to feature them in a special program, one which will take the form of an old fiddlers' contest.

Yours very truly,
J. H. WEIR, Program Director.

FRALEY DECLAIMERS WILL CONTEST AT ACCIDENT H. S.

Date Has Been Definitely Fixed for Next Wednesday Evening, March 31st.

The Fraley Declamation Contest as sponsored by Mr. G. Arthur Fraley, Cashier of The Garrett National Bank, Oakland, Md., will be held, as announced by Mr. F. E. Rathbun, County Superintendent of Schools, in the school building at Accident next Wednesday evening, March 31st, at 8 o'clock.

In this Declamation Contest, one representative from each of the five high schools of the county will render a declamation with a view of selecting the declaimer who comes first and the declaimer who comes second.

The judges who will render the decision will be from outside of the county.

In view of the fact that the seating capacity of the assembly room of the Accident school building is for about two hundred people, the number of seats will be apportioned according to the plans of forty seats for each of the five high school centers which seats will be reserved until 10 minutes of 8 at which they will be available for anyone present.

The contest at Accident will be for girls only, while the one in which boys only will participate, as sponsored by Mr. Walter W. Dawson, Cashier of The First National Bank, Oakland, Md., will be held at Kitzmiller early in May.

These two contests—the Fraley Contest to be held at Accident next Wednesday evening for the girls, and the one to be held at Kitzmiller in May for the boys—are viewed by the people generally as two of the most interesting and important school activities of the year and wide interest prevails in these two coming events in which a very enjoyable and profitable evening is anticipated by all those who will find it possible to be present.

This year's Fraley Declamation Contest will be the fourth such contest held among the five high schools of the county. The three previous contests have been held at the centers and dates given below which follow the name of the successful contestant in each of the contests, the name of the selection as used by each lady also being given:

Miss Elizabeth Engle, Grantsville High school, "Sister and I," Oakland, Md., April 27, 1923.

Miss Myra Custer, Grantsville High school, "The Fiddle Told," Grantsville, Md., May 9, 1924.

First Prize, Miss Mary Ours, Oakland High School; "Bobby Shaftoe"; second prize, Miss Dixie Walker, Kitzmiller High school; "The Famine"; Friendsville, Maryland, April 3, 1925.

The first and second prizes that are awarded do not go to the individual contestants but will be awarded to the high school which the successful contestant represents, with an individual medal being given to each contestant from the school she represents, the prizes usually being books to be added to the library of the high school which the successful contestant represents.

This year, the prizes offered are as follows:

First Prize.

One complete eighteen volume set of "Popular Science Library," to be presented to the library of the High school which the successful contestant represents. Furthermore, a banner with appropriate inscription is to be presented to the principal of the High school until the next annual contese (girls) to be held in 1927.

Second Prize.

One complete ten volume set of "Mark Twain," to be presented to the principal of the High school which the contestant awarded second prize represents.

Individual Awards.

Each of the five contestants is to be presented by the school she represents in the contest to be held Wednesday evening with an appropriate gold medal or other individual award, at the graduating exercises to be held next June.

The program for the Fraley contest to be held at Accident next Wednesday evening, Mr. H. A. Loraditch, President of the Board of Education of this county, presiding, is as follows, the name of the high school which each contestant represents being omitted for the present for reasons which have been found very justifiable in order to secure unbiased decisions, the program being interspersed with musical selections, the order of the contestants being determined alphabetically:

Some Activities of the Bureau of Child Hygiene.

Recent reports from the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health show that the total expenditures for 1925 amounted to $29,313.39.

The largest single item amounted to $10,077.13, the sum that was opportioned among fifteen counties toward public health nursing service, with special reference to maternity and child hygiene. The salary of the Chief of the Bureau for full time service and the compensation of the doctors who had charge of the child health conferences—part time service—amounted to $5,000. The amount paid for field expenses, including traveling expenses of doctors and nurses and for other field activities connected with the child hygiene work of the public heath nurses amounted to $5,867.66.

Other items were: Salaries of clerical staff, $3,245.00; health education, $2,500.00; printing, $682.03; exhibit material, movie films and miscellaneous, $1,189.85; supplies, $519.76; telephone service, postage, express and freight, $231.91.

The Bureau of Child Hygiene is the youngest of the eight bureaus of the State Department of Health. It was established in 1922 and is financed partly from State and partly from Federal funds. Its activities are limited, in accordance with the laws under which it operates to the advisory care of mothers and of children under school age. The funds expended during the calendar year of 1925 were derived as follows: From State appropriations, $15,818.62; from Federal funds, $13,494.77.

The field work of the Bureau is done in co-operation with the deputy State health officer, or local health officer of each county, with the assistance of the local public health nurse. Clinic physicians are sent out on invitations from the deputy State health office of local health officer to conduct the child health conferences that have been organized in the counties. Local physicians are notified in advance and are invited to take part in all of the conferences.

These conferences are held at regular intervals, usually about once a month, at some centrally located place. No medical treatments are given, but any child who needs such treatment is referred to the family physicain. A report is sent to each physician outlining the results of the examination of his patient.

The total number of conferences held in 1925 was 310. The total number of places visited was 191. Of the total conferences, 105 were held during the summer months in connection with the tour of the healthmobile through the counties on the Western and Eastern shores of the Chesapeake Bay. The total number of children brought to the conferences was 4,993. Follow up clinics were held as follows: 19 dental clincs; 1 eye clinic; one for crippled children and one women's clinic.

A very delightful surprise was given Mrs. A. R. Martin on Sunday, in honor of her birthday, when a number of her friends visited her. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Wiles and children, of Terra Alta; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Wheeler, of Terra Alta, and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Constable, of Oakland. A very pleasant afternoon and evening was spent a delicious dinner was served.

Mrs. Lewis Bush and Miss Ora Bush were visitors to Cumberland on Friday.

LAD DEAD OF EXPOSURE FOLLOWING INTOXICATION

Lewis Harvey, 17, Found and Drank Moonshine and Then Laid Out In Woods.

Lewis Harvey, aged 17 years, son of Truman and Mary Harvey, near Kitzmiller, died of exposure at his home Monday night at seven o'clock following a night of exposure while in an intoxicated condition caused by the finding and drinking of a quantity of moonshine liquor at a point in the woods near his home.

Harvey, in company with another lad, Oris Gowers, who is a nephew, went into the woods above Kitzmiller whene the Gowers boy stated upon returning to his home Sunday night that they had found two barrels of moonshine mash buried in the earth. Uncovering it theyprocured a quantity of the liquor which they drank. Harvey, it is said, became so intoxicated that he wandered off deeper into the bush and falling into a stream his clothing became soaked as a result. Crawling out upon the bank he made his way into a laurel thicket where he partly disrobed and got upon a fallen log, where he fell asleep and remained until nearly noon when he was discovered by a posse of men and taken to his home, his death occurring the same evening as a result of the exposure to the cold and the imbibing of the liquor.

Gowers, it is said, was so bewildered that he could not give an accorate account of his actions nor that of the Harvey boy until Monday morning nor could he tell the posse the direction of the stream from Kitzmiller into which Harvey had fallen. The men searching for the boy found the mash as detailed by Gowers and a sample is now in the hands of the officials. The makers are unknown.

Harvey is survived by his parents and several brothers and sisters.

ROTARIANS ENTERTAIN

First Ladies' Night of the Local Club Very Successful.

The first ladies' night of the Oakland Rotary Club, last Friday night, at the William-James Hotel, was a success in every particular. The members of the club had as their guests their wives and friends, numbering in all about sixty.

The dining hall was decorated very beautifully with cut flowers and varicolored lights. The favors were corsage bouquets for the ladies and buttonaires of carnations for the gentlemen.

Dr. Moore, who is a loyal and leading member of the club, offered the invocation and an address was delivered by President McComas.

Rotarian Henry Lauer, chairman of the entertainment committee, was the toastmaster who presented in turn Mr. F. E. Rathbun, who spoke on Rotary and what it stands for. His address was a masterpiece and was applauded most generously. Mr. William Cramer, of Cumberland, a member of the Cumberland Kiwanis Club, entertained the guests very pleasingly with an address of witticisms and personal experiences as a member of the "Y" during the World War. Messrs. Gilbert and Littman played several instrumental selections.

The club and the guests present enjoyed the singing of the Rotary songs, of which there were many.

The menu consisted of a bounteous turkey dinner with all that goes with it upon an occasion of the kind.

Rev. G. L. Curtney, who recently resigned the pastorate at Red House, is now located as pastor of the Woodbury, Pa., Lutheran church, having taken up his new work during the past week.

WHEN THE MAPLE SUGAR WATER IS RUNNING

Some Of The Rare Delights of Sugar Making In the Forests of Maple Trees.

(Dearborn Independent)

When you see the vapor pillars
Link the forest with the sky,
You may know the days of sugar-
Making then are drawing nigh.
Frosty night and thawy day
Make the maple pulses play,
Till congested with its sweetness,
It delights to bleed away.
—Perrin B. Fisk, 1860.

Maple sugar making in the old days was a far different process from that used at present. In the region where I was reared expensive evaporating pans and fire arches were unknown. Northern Michigan was covered with virgin hardwood forests; maple had little value other than firewood.

About the latter part of February we would "feel the spring" in the air. Noisy crows would congregate in the tree tops. Mist was in the valleys, and the sound of dripping from the trees tinkled musically on the deep-crusted snow. A tinge of wood-smoke, hanging low, foretold a rain storm. The mellow light of the late winter sun brought memories of the Indian summer days of autumn.

Cold, frosty nights followed by warm, sunny days brought ideal sugar weather.

To tap the tree we chopped a 16-inch gash diagonally across the south side about three feet from the earth. Just below the base of the cut we would drive the iron spile maker two inches into the tree. Removing the iron from the cut, we would pound into the incision a sharpened wooden spile. The sap would run down the gash and out on the spile, dripping from the end in a steady stream. For sap containers we used shallow milk pans eighteen inches in diameter and five inches deep. These were blocked level at the foot of the tree. A sled drawn by a yoke of oxen was used to collect the sap. On the sled were two large barrels, with screened holes in the top and each barrel had a spigot near the bottom.

The sap was gathered in large pails suspended from the ends of a wooden yoke by means of a heavy cord or fine chain, and stored in barrels about the fire. It was boiled down in huge black kettles, such as are used today by the Negro mammies of Georgia and Florida, to do their washing in the open.

Ten feet from the open fire a hardwood post ten inches in diameter was set into the grund extending five feet above the surface. In the top of this post was driven an iron rod two iches thick, extending eight inches above the post top and exactly in the center. A hardwood pole, nine inches thick and twenty feet long, thoroughly dried, was then laid on the post and a two and a half-inch hole was drilled into the pole six feet from the smaller and lighter end. Through this hole the iron rod stuck up an inch or so above the horizontal pole. The kettle was chained to the small end of this pole. The other end, being heavy, acted as a counterbalance, making it an easy matter to swing the kettle on or off the fire to refill or empty.

The product was strained and placed in containers for distribution. Boiled in the open the sirup was somewhat darker than that boiled in the evaporators. This was due, no doubt, to the fact that rain-washed twigs and bits of shaggy maple bark, moss and other forms of "clean" dirt would find its way into the kettle. But it was good. After a lapse of twenty years I can still taste the maple taffy we made by pouring the last of the kettle boilings on the snow, where it hardened.

As the demand for maple sirup grew, the more enterprising farmers and lumbermen replaced the old kettle with the more modern evaporator. This evaporator was a single shallow pan, resting on an arch made of stone mixed with clay. It was usually built in the open, on a hillside with the hill dug out a bit for the back end of the arch. The smokestack was at the upper end to insure a good draft. Sometimes it was built under a shed. The inflow of sap was regulated by means of a stopcock on a hose leading from a barrel containing the oldest sap, placed at an elevation above the evaporator. Later on the single evaporator gave way to the more modern evaporator divided into sections.

As the sap became thicker it was run from compartment to compartment until the last pan held only sirup. As it thickened it was tested with a spoon to determine its proper consistency. The sirup consistency is governed by statute in Michigan and the sirup maker must test his finished product with a hydrometer. These hydrometers, as well as thermometers, are used to get the sirup to a point where it is not so concentrated as to rapidly turn to sugar nor so thin as to ferment and sour when summer comes. If is sours, vinegar is made of it.

The sap sled is still used, but the yoke has disappeared as the sled trails are made nearer the trees. No longer are the maples slashed, cut and disfigured. Small holes are bored into the trunk and an iron cirular spile is driven in. A sap bucket is then hung on the spile and the run is on.

The season usually lasts three or four weeks, sometimes longer.

In certain bushes it takes as high as 50 gallons of sap to make one gallon of sirup or 7 1-2 pounds of sugar. The first run is generally richer in sugar, hence it takes less for a gallon of sirup. From 6 1-2 to 9 pounds of sugar, according to the kind, can be made from one gallon of standard sirup, with an average of 7 1-2 to 8 pounds. A bush of 100 trees should produce 40 gallons of sirup or 300 pounds of sugar

The old days are passing. The pleasure of driving a yoke of oxen attached to a sap sled through the early spring wods is of the past. The saucy squirrels, scampering up the maple trees, would kick bark, spiders and lichen into the sap pail. But I would delight in again breaking the ice of one of those pails and drinking the sap of an early spring morning when the frost whitened the old rail fence and ice hung from the spiles. The sun would break through the trees and the red-headed woodpecker drum his tattoo on the dead hemlock. At the next tree we might disturb the cock grouse and hear him fly off on thundering wings. One must penetrate far into the bush to find these things now.

On cold winter morning when the rich maple sirup trickles over hot buskwheat cakes or the crisp, brown waffles, one is apt to see a mental picture of a sturdy old-timer, muffled up to his ears and, perhaps, shod with snowshoes, trudging over snowdrifts that crunch under his tread. Over his shoulder one visions the yoke with a pail dangling from each end, brimming with sap. All about him stand towering maples denuded of leaves. To the uninitiated they look like rugged oaks. Hardwood trees, they have little in common with the soft maples of our roadsides. Here and there between the maples grows a clump of hemlocks, some tall and spreading with dark, green needles, others little more than mere shrubs. The perennial green of the hemlocks add a touch of color to the still hardwoods, a touch of life in an apparently dead forest.

THE PRESIDENT'S FATHER.

The late John C. Coolidge, whose mortal remains were interred in the Vermont hills on last Saturday, helps to explain Calvin Coolidge, the President. The son is the perfect produce of the father's character and training. The old-fashioned New England settler had to win a living from an unfriendly country. It took hard work and thrift to succeed. In that frugal Vermont home there was no softness, no indulgence. John Coolidge worked hard himself. He brought up his son to regard hard work as part of the common lot.

The story of the penny that the elder Coolidge gave his young son back in the campaign year of 1880 is significant. Confronted late in the campaign by the appalling possibility of Democratic victory and hard times, Colonel Coolidge explained to his son that this was no time to squander their resources and took the penny back. On Garfield's election the penny was returned—but probably was not spent.

His training in the ideas of his Vermont father brought Calvin Coolidge his horror of waste, his estimate of money in terms of human effort, his passion for efficient government, his belief in industry, that have so characterized his career in Washington.

John Coolidge lived the quiet life of millions of other Americans. He did his duty, he practiced the homely virtues that are at the basis of civilization, he reared his son to meet responsibilities. It happened that this wholesome home life gave the foundations in character of a President of the United States. But even without that distinction the life of John Coolidge contributed its share to the fabric of spiritual qualities that we call America.

STILL THE BEST SELLER

According to the annual report of the American Bible Society, more copies of the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments were sold in 1925 than at any other time in the 110 years of the organization's history.

Of the greatest and most influential of all books there were sold in twelve months 9,069,120 copies in no less than 150 languages.

One of the greatst services of the Bible to mankind is often forgotten. Missionaries, in order to make it available in the dark spots of the earth, have had to turn unwritten language into written ones in order to do their work as translators. Hence the steady growth of the "literary" speeches of the world.

Then, too, as long as the Bible continues to be "the best seller of all," there need be no fear of the serious deterioration of the English language.

Spring began last Sunday with clear skies and bright sunshine and as a result the owners of sugar groves were busy in their camps on Monday taking care of the accumulated sap.

LETTER OF PRESIDENT R. B. HAYES HAS BEEN FOUND

By A Resident of Cumberland in Which the Capture of Generals Crook and Kelly Are Depicted

(Cumberland Sunday Times)

One of the boldest exploits of the Civil War was the capture in Cumberland hotels on February 21, 1865, by a party of Confederates of Major Generals George Crook and B. F. Kelly of the Union Army, and the latter's adjutant general, Major Melvin, without gunfire and while approximately 6,000 Federal troops were encamped in and around this city.

The capture was made by a troop of 65 cavalryment of the Confederate forces under Lieut. Jesse C. McNeill. The generals were bound, placed on horseback and taken to Richmond under heavy guard, but were later released in exchange for other prisoners of war.

In connection with the capture of the Federal officers, an interesting historical document in the form of a letter which was exchanged between two men who later became Presidents of the United States—R. B. Hayes and U. S. Grant—has been uncovered here by a resident. The letter, in the handwriting of Hayes, and addressed to General Grant, who was with Federal troops at City Point, Va., gives a vivid account of the capture of Crook and Kelly. Hayes was with the Federal troops of the Department of West Virginia, his rank being Brevet Major General, at the time of the capture and who took charge of the troops after his associates were taken prisoners.

Soon after the capture of Crookand Kelly, Major General Hayes sent a telegraphic report of the affair, following it up with this letter:

Headquarters Department W. Va.
Cumberland, Md., Feb. 21, 1865.

Dear General:—

I sent you a dispatch this morning giving the fact of the capture of Gens. Crook and Kelly and of Capt. Melvin, A. A. G. of Gen. K.

About half past three this morning a party of probably fifty Rebels crossed the Potomac above town and captured the picket post on the road in that direction. They wore blue overcoats and the sentinel who hailed them supposed they were Union cavalry. One approached him as if to give the countersign and stooping forward as if to whisper it in his ear, pressed a pistol at his head and compelled him to surrender. This is the sentinel's story. The Rebels rushed directly to the hotel where Gen. K. quartered. A part passed on to Gen. Crook's headquarters and succeeded in capturing the sentinels on their beats in much the same way as at the picket post. They went direct to the rooms of the generals and secured them. In the meantime a few horses—three fine ones of Gen. K.—and four or five others were taken, and the telegraph office broken open and the instruments destroyed. The party hurried off, not being in town more than a few minutes and crossed the Potomac below town in the direction of Romney. One telegraph office was left undisturbed and in a very short time word was given to Martinsburg and to Gen. Sheridan at Winchester. Gen. Lightburn went on a locomotive to New Creek, and directed instant pursuit in that quarter. Gen. Kelly was in command of the post and no doubt the same arrangements as to picketing which were adopted months ago were still continued. I have been in the habit of staying in camp, and most probably uncared for—for at any rate no inquiry was made for me or Gen. Duval. Gen. D. was absent. Gen. Sheridan ordered his cavalry to pursue at once from that direction. A recapture is possible, but considering the nature of the country, I do not think it probably.

Sincerely,
R. B. HAYES.

DIED.

MRS. LOU THAYER WATERS.

Mrs. Lou A. Thayer Waters, daughter of the late Ralph Thayer and Mary Mitchell Thayer, was born at Selbysport, Garrett county, Maryland. She came of New England stock, the Thayer progenitors having migrated from Massachusetts to the hills of Western Maryland more than a century ago, the journey through the then comparatively unsettled country being made in the primitive manner then prevailing.

Mrs. Waters began teaching school early in life and at a time when Garrett county was still a part of Allegany county, being one of the pioneer teachers in her native county. She married the late George W. Waters, of Clarksburg, West Va., whose death occurred some twenty-four years ago. Following the death of her husband, she returned to her home in Oakland and lived here until her death on Sunday morning, March 21st, at 9:30 o'clock, following an illness of several years.

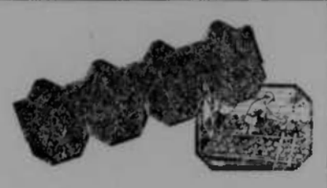
Mrs. Waters was a very active member of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church; a member of the Ladies' Aid Society of that body and for many years was a teacher in the Sunday school, only relinquishing her activities when her physical faculties became impaired. She always participated in town and county affairs and was a charter member and officer of the Oakland Civic Club and an officer of the Maryland S. P. C. A. Although advanced in years and practically an invalid when women were enfranchised, she was registered as a Republican voter and voted at every succeeding election until confined to her bed by failing health. She is survived by one brother, Fred A. Thayer, of Oakland.

The funeral was held at St Paul's M. E. church, Tuesday morning, March 23, at 11 o'clock, with brief services conducted by Dr. Archibald Moore; interment in the family plot in the Oakland cemetery. Relatives attending the funeral from out of town were Miss Virginia T. Johnson, a niece, of Washington, D. C., and Mr. Glen Waters, a stepson, of Clarksburg, W. Va., and a number of others from various portions of Garret county.

MRS. VIRGINIA PRICE.

The funeral of Mrs. Virginia Price, who died at her home in Kitzmiller Monday morning after a lingering illness, was held at the home on last Wednesday afternoon with Rev. Geo. C. Stratton, her pastor, officiating. Interment was at Bloomington Thursday morning, where her remains were interred by the side of her husband, whose death took place sixteen years ago. Mrs. Price was aged 71 years. She was a member of the M. E. church of Kitzmiller and also of the Ladies' Aid Society connected therewith and they feel that they have lost a faithful co-worker. She was also a member of the Order of the Eastern Star and the Rebekah Lodge. Mrs. Price was born at Moundsville, West Va. Six children survive, Mrs. William Davis, New Haven, Conn.; Mrs. Tyler Arnold, Vindex, Md.; H. L. Price, Buckhannon, W. Va.; W. L. Price, of Kitzmiller; J. M. Price, Charleston, W. Va., and Russell Price, Cumberland. The pallbearers were Messrs. Dan Walker, J. M. Craver, J. Weight, Bert Pew, Guy Barrack and L. Price, of Bloomington.

MISS SARAH C. DICK



Miss Sarah C. Dick, aged 91 years, 6 months, died Wednesday, March 17, and was buried Saturday, March 20. Miss Dick resided with the family of Mrs. John M. Browning for several years preceding her death which followed an attack of influenza, having been in good health until ten days preceding her demise. Four nieces, Mrs. Elizabeth Jamison, Mrs. Florence White and Mrs. Statia Flanigan, all of Fairmont, and Mrs. John Wilson, of Oakland, one nephew, Joe Browning, of Fairmont, West Va., survive. She was a great aunt of the late John M. Browning, of Garrett county. The funeral services were conducted at St. Peter's Catholic church Saturday morning, Rev. J. F. Eckenrode officiating.

LUPTON FRANTZ.

Lupton Frantz, whose illness as a result of a stroke of paralysis was noted in The Republican last Thursday, died at his home in Friendsville Friday morning. Mr. Frantz is survived by one son, Ellis Frantz, of Braddock, Pa. His funeral took place on Sunday after services held in the M. E. church at Friendsville. Interment was made at Addison, Pa.

REV. JONATHAN BROADWATER.

Jonathan Broadwater was born May 19, 1847, in Garrett county, Md. Here he grew to manhood and at the age of twenty he went to Minnesota where he worked for one year, returning to Maryland at the end of that time and after a year spent at his former home at the age of 22 he again went west. This time he purchased land, broke it and started farming. He also worked for other people who needed help and in this manner he kept on farming in summer and teaching school in the winter months until he was married. The first term of school in the present Prairie Queen (Minn.) school house was taught by Mr. Broadwater. He also taught one year near New Germany, Garrett county. On April 16, 1871, he was united in marriage with Miss Mary Shook, of Bristol, Minn. To this union six children were born, one of whom died in infancy. In the spring of 1874 Mr. Broadwater purchased the old home place in Minnesota, known as the Nedro farm, where he continued to reside until his death. For many years he was pastor of the Brethren church in Preston, Minn. He was a faithful Christian and was respected and honored by all who knew him. Many sought his counsel. On February 24, 1926, while on a visit at the home of his daughter, Mrs. L. B. Pratt, he was stricken with paralysis and on March 2 he passed into eternity, at the age of 78 years, 9 months and 11 days. Besides his wife five children survive, namely: Mrs. L. B. Pratt, Mrs. H. Dormink, W. H. H. and J. W. Broadwater and Mrs. J. C. Tammell, all of whom reside in the west; 21 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren; two brothers, three sisters and many nieces and nephews, all of whom mourn the loss of this kindly gentleman. On April 16, 1921, Mr. and Mrs. Broadwater celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. All the years he resided in Minnesota he traveled back and forth to Maryland to visit his parents, brothers and sisters and friends, making in all twenty-four trips.

A Department Employe in Washington Takes Exceptions To An Editorial Appearing in The Republican Recently In Which the Remarks of Congressman Davey, of Ohio, Were Cited Showing the Laxity of Government Employes Generally—Our Correspondent Was Not One of this Class, However, But He Wants to Pave The Way So That He May Pay His Annual Visit to His Garrett County Home in Safety Next Summer.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE.
United States Patent Office.
Washington, D. C., March 13, 1926.

Mr. Benj. H. Sincell,
Publisher, The Republican,
Oakland, Md.,

My dear Sir: Enclosed find my check in payment of subscription.

I am also enclosing a letter which I wish you would publish, provided your conscience will permit. I felt right hot over the way you and Davey lambasted Federal employes generally and I know that I have not done justice to our side, but it will help some. At least it may pave the way so that I may show my face again in Garrett county next summer at vacation time. The government service appears to many people like the weather—it is something to kick about and nobody does anything towards improving it.

Your remarks may have been true concerning some of the purely clerical offices, such as the Veterans' Bureau, at one time, but you certainly got the technical and professional bureaus all wrong.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES H. SHAFFER.

Mr. Shaffer's letter, above referred to, follows:

To the Editor of The Republican.

Sir:—The statement made by Congressman Davey in the recent issue of The Republican does gross injustice to the very large number of government employes found in the technical and professional service of the country, such as the Patent Office, Public Health Service, Geological Survey and the Bureaus of Mines, Standards, Chemistry, etc. As a result of twenty-five years in this service, I can honestly say that taken as a whole the employes in these bureaus are as conscientious, loyal and hard-working as can be found in any other occupation in the country. As a rule these employed must pass a very rigid technical examination before appointment, and therefore practically all are college men; many have also professional degrees.

The volume of work required of these bureaus is enormous and rapidly increasing. It is true that many are chronically behind with their work, but this state of affairs cannot justly be charged against the employes, but rather to the system under which they operate. The number of employes allowed by law are never more than enough if the whole force was functioning at its full efficiency, but in the last decade the force in none of these bureaus has been up to its theoretical efficiency due to a ruinous turnover. In the Patent Office this has been especially bad.

In the division of which I have charge there has been an average of eight assistant examiners during the past six years and in that time seventeen have left. Some divisions have fared worse and some better.

Since the first of this year over fifty have left the Patent Office, many of them being from the higher grades. While an assistant is in training he is but little help to the office during the first year and needs at least three years to reach his maximum efficiency. This high turnover prevails in practically all the technical and professional bureaus.

Training in these bureaus always increases one's earning capacity, and it is this training feature that attracts the class of men usually found in these bureaus. When they leave for outside work, it is always for greatly increased compensation, sometimes double the government pay. It is true the government service has many attractions. The work is very interesting, the hours are reasonable, the allowance for vacation and sickness is liberal and there is a pension for disability and old age. The administrative heads of these bureaus are generally high-grade men and they have done all in their power to hold their forces intact, but the pay, except in the highest grades, is not sufficient to hold the men, especially if they have children to support and educate.

The work performed by these bureaus is generally recognized as essential to the industrial life and health of the nation and hence cannot be suspended. Upon Congess rests the responsibility of providing means whereby they may function in a business-like manner. Even if the present force in these bureaus were made up of thoroughly trained employes, it is not probable that the numbers could be greatly reduced, but the work would be kept up to date and the quality would be of much higher order.

If Congressman Davey can bring about legislation that will put these bureaus on a business basis none would be more pleased than the employes themselves.

CHARLES H. SHAFFER.

GAUER

The men of our community have been busy hauling rock to fill in the bad places in the roads. The condition of the highways have been very poor owing to the immense snow drifts melting and knocking the bottom out. We hope to have everything in good shape in a short time.

Mrs. Joe Martin and Mrs. Henry Schmidt were in Oakland Monday and Tuesday on business.

The ladies of the Oakland Presbyterian church will hold a food sale at Smouse's store on April 3rd, the Saturday before Easter, at 2:30 o'clock.

:REVIEW THE GOSPEL OF JOHN.

These are written, that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye may have life in his name.—John 20:31.

THE MOST WONDERFUL BOOK IN THE WORLD.

No book has the hold upon the heart of the world like that of the Bible. And if you ask almost any reader of it, "What is your favorite Bible book?" the answer will be, "John's Gospel." It is the select of the select and in this fact alone gives justification to the heading above. To attain such popularity is a unique distinction. One reason is its artistic perfection. Excluding everything that does not minister to its main purpose it paints a picture of a Christ-like God that satisfies the heart, the reason and the aesthetic sense. It is pictorial and conversational in style, both of which popularize a page. It is intensely human in its presentation of Jesus and no other setting forth is quite so winsome as the one given here. Its purpose and its passion is to throne Him as Lord of the hearts of men and this is never lost sight of anywhere in the message.

Every word of it was spoken many times before a line of it was penned, and it represents the preaching in that Church in Ephesus that stirred the whole city and added greatly to the growth of the Christian church there. The golden text declares what he was attempting to do. First he wished to unite Jesus and the Christ. They had become separated in the thinking of many so that Jesus was held to be merely the body in which the Christ Spirit lived, the two having no vital connection. Therefore the material body and its appetites might be indulged without affecting the Spirit imparted at Baptism, licentiousness resulting. Therefore Christ did not suffer, God does not, and the "Passion" became nothing more than a painted pageant. These are written that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ. More than that, He is the "Son of God" and bears the family likeness so that knowing Him one comes to know the Father also and finds them both making "Their abode with him." And belief in Him opens the door to life. John always insists that the "now" life and the "eternal" life are all of one piece, differing only in the circumstances of its living; one within the body of flesh and the other outside of it. In his mind belief was not an emotional or mental matter, these were accompaniments, but in itself it was the active daring to project the whole life along the lines indicated by Jesus. It was the actual launching of the ship and the setting out upon the voyage under the piloting of our acknowledged Lord.

The evangelistic purpose is always clear. Much of it concerns the methods of Jesus in dealing with inquiring minds. As John might have said, "This is the way Jesus did it—now you do it." For he would have an evangelistic Church. Peter was gained by insight into the inner most desire, Philip by a simple command, Nathanael by praise, Nicodemus by shock and so the cases may be studied and applied to stimulate the non-Christian to acceptance because of the appeal of this other man or woman's act and to arouse the Christian to follow Jesus in the active winning of men to Him by the practice of the habits of Jesus in using every opportunity to guide the conversation toward a full surrender to the truth presented.

PRIMARY: BEAUTIFUL STORIES TOLD BY JOHN.

Use the beautiful pictures provided by Wilde or Perry (90 cents for a selected lot for the year); no money can be better invested. They may be given as a recognition of well recalled work or they may be used as guides to the story. Placed on a screen they may be all exposed at once or a single one taken. One may be described by a pupil, the others not seeing it, while they guess the lesson story. A dozen ways of using will be thought of by every teacher.

JUNIOR: THE GREATEST THINGS IN JOHN'S GOSPEL.

Here again pictures may serve as a point of recall. Drill work will need to be given and it will depend upon what has been done by the class during the quarter. If a time-stick has been kept it will very well serve for this part of the review. Map work will do the same thing. If little copies of the Gospel have not been used during the quarter then it would be well to get copies from the American Bible Society (from one cent to a nickle) and give each member a copy. If note books have been kept they may be used as a recognition of the work done. Or they may be auctioned off for so many questions answered as payment for each. Use this presentation of Jesus as an opportunity to declare acceptance of Him as a personal Leader with Easter church membership as an expression of it.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR: GREAT SCENES IN JONH'S GOSPEL.

Copies of the Gospel may well be used with these groups also. Chapter headings may be prepared by the members and the best for each one chosen as the class's selection for a class copy of John. Letters may be assigned covering the various events studied: Andrew may write a letter home telling about that first day; Nicodemus can send one to a friend in Rome; the Samaritan woman to the husband with whom she can no longer live; the boy with the lunch to another boy, etc. Drama may be introduced by assignment of the various characters to members of the class, each to to tell the story of the event of the lesson. Question contests may be staged within the class or between classes. Beyond all else use the period to present Jesus as a personal Savior and church membership as an expression of the new attitude.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS: GREAT TEACHINGS OF JOHN'S GOSPEL.

Be sure that a clear view of the Gospel as a whole is given. If some one outside the class will do this it may prove both helpful and attractive. What does John teach about immortality, the new birth, worship, sin, the Holy Spirit, dignity of service, God, Heaven. death of Jesus, worship? What particularly helpful thing have I gained from this study? may bring a very fruitful discussion. A debate, Resolved: That John's is the greatest of the Gospels, may offer another form of review that will be serviceable. Place the emphasis where John placed it, upon the evangelistic note and bring each member of the class face to face with John's Christ with an opportunity for accepting Him as Lord.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CARS

FROM FOREST PRIMEVAL TO WAVING WHEATFIELDS

Remarkable Transformations in The Mountain of Western Maryland.

By LEO J. BEACHY
Mt. Nebo Studio, Grantsville, Md.
In Motor Travel Magazine

Trees have always been of great interest as well as of practical benefit, to travelers along the highways of all countries.

The biggest problem to the pioneer settlers in the forested Eastern States was that of clearing the ground preparatory to raising garden truck and farm crops.

Before the advent of the primitive sawmill and during the days of the old log cabins and the open fireplaces, many fine specimens of the most valuable oak, beech and hickory trees were cut down for firewood or rolled into log heaps and burned to ashes.

When, about fifty years ago, Governor Frank Thomas of Maryland made a speech in Grantsville, and stated his belief that the day would come when oak timber would be as valuable as pine, people said that he was foolish and did not know what he was predicting. But that same generation saw the time come and go when those extensive oak and hardwood forests were sought after by lumbermen as the most valuable natural resources between the summits of these two high mountains—Negro Mountain and Meadow Mountain.

In 1900, the Jennings Lumber Company of Towanda, Pa., made its appearance in this region near Grantsville, Maryland, and started to build a fourteen-mile railroad up the Casselman River valley; they also erected a large band sawmill and founded the town of Jennings, Maryland. This mill was operated until about 1922, cutting from forty thousand to eighty thousand feet per day, thus taking out in all many hundred millions of feet of lumber.

Famous Tracts of Land Denuded.

Among the large tracts of virgin timber cut in these operations were such as the "Manadier Tract," the "Brenneman Tract," "The Beachy Tract," "The Esther Seibert Tract," the "Broadwater Tract," the "R. Engle Tract," the "William Durst Tract" and the "Cunningham Tract" at the farther end of the road in the Bittinger section of the valley.

The "Cunningham Tract" contained 1700 acres. After some of the finest timber on the whole of the Jennings operation was cut and removed from this tract a crew of men was put to work cleaning up the slashings and plowing the ground with shovel plows and then they sowed wheat between the many thousands of charred stumps. This was in 1910 and 1911.

When the grain was ripe men with cradles were set to work cutting and binding the wheat into sheaves; the self-binder reaper could not be used on account of stumps. The crop of wheat amounted to 1,100 bushels.

Large Sugar Groves.

In this valley and county (Garrett) are the only large groves of sugar trees in the State of Maryland. Here and in Somerset county, Pa., adjoining, are Elijah Livengood's groves, which are among the largest maple sugar producers in the United States. Mr. Livengood was pronounced "Sugar King" by the U. S. Government officials in 1893 for having received the largest check for bounty on maple sugar.

Not many of the sugar groves in the Casselman River Valley were cut by the Jennings Lumber Company, but within the past two and a-half years the Back Creek Lumber Company has come in and cut at least fourteen of these sugar groves, which gave, each, from 120,000 to 1,100,000 feet of lumber.

A Giant Primeval Oak.

Some very large trees grew in this valley. My father told me of a monster oak 7 feet in diameter, a mile north of Grantsville on the "Miller Church" road, with which he had something to do when he was 22 years old, in 1873, while attending school in Grantsville and boarding at Minister Joel Beachy's where Bishop Moses D. Yoder now lives.

This big tree stood only a few hundred yards north and up the hollow from the present site of the Amish Mennonite Children's Home, on land which was then part of the Joel Beachy farm. This tree was cut down for the value of a colony of honey bees harboring in its trunk about 20 feet from its base.

After a tree of this size was cut down it was an easy process to work it up on the spot, cut into rail lengths of about 11 feet, or move it to a saw mill. The reader may imagine seeing a six-foot man standing alongside such a regular giant of a tree trunk when he was still a foot short for looking over the top, and thus get an idea of its size.

Or may we consider a man standing on top of the big log trying to chop it off with an axe with handle of ordinary length, two and a-half feet. Or let us imagine how difficult it would be for an axeman with an extraordinary long handle in his axe—say 7 feet long—to stand on the log, swing the axe and chop straight. A crosscut saw of ordinary length would not reach across the log.

Fire Used to Cut Logs.

In cutting the big logs off in those days, they did what they termed "niggering them off." That was burning the logs off by standing small dry logs, 18 inches in diameter, against them on each side of the big log. Then a fire was built to burn up back of the short dry pieces and up along the big log. If the live coals were rubbed from the big log every now and then with a hand-spike and the fuel kept up the flames ate their way faster across the big log.

Joel Beachy offered my father a pair of half-soles for his shoes if he would "nigger off" that big white oak log on his way to and from school. He accepted the offer, secured the half-soles and earned a second pair for "niggering off" the big tree trunk a second time. He was also paid 2½ cents each to do the same with smaller fallen trees in the same field.

The Kendall Lumber Company, which operated at Crellin, Md., in the southwestern part of the county and which finished that job a few months ago, built 30 miles of railroad and was cutting lumber there for 30 years. Other extensive lumber operations were conducted by the Meadow Mountain Lumber Company and the Bear Creek Lumber Company near the Deep Creek region where reforestation has been going on since 1921.

Large Reforesting Project.

The largest forest planting project in which the Maryland Department of Forestry has co-operated, is on the lands of F. F. Nicola, at the southern extremity of Meadow Mountain, 2,600 feet above the sea, where Mr. Nicola owns 7,000 acres of this mountain plateau which, prior to his ownership, was cut over between 1900 and 1905. A portion of this, "The Rights of Man Tract," comprising about 500 acres and which contained virgin stands of white pine and hemlock timber, was burned so terrifically by a forest fire in 1905, after logging, that not a living tree was left.

For nearly twenty years this land remained in a devastated condition, with no prospect of a remunerative second crop. However, in 1921, the owner, upon the advice of the Maryland Forestry Department, decided to reforest these waste lands; and in the spring of 1921 the first planting was done with large-sized white pine and Norway spruce for immediate effect, using about 500 trees.

In the spring of 1922, about 22,500 white pine transplants, averaging 12 inches in height, were planted with a spacing of 6 x 6 feet. Allowing for a few small patches of natural reproduction, the area contained in this planting project was about 25 acres.

The planting was continued in the spring of 1923, using a variety of species as follows: Scotch pine, 5,000; Norway spruce, 5,000; European larch, 5,000; red oak, 5,000; black locust, 5,000; and black walnut, 1,000. With the exception of the walnut, the different species were planted on separate blocks of nearly five acres, for the purpose of establishing demonstration planting of sufficient size to show conclusive results. At the time of planting in 1923, all wild currants and gooseberries were eradicated from the planting area as a preventative against any possible attack by the white pine blister rust.

Young Trees Doing Well.

During the summer of 1923 a count of the trees was made to determine the per cent living, with the following results; white pine, 90 per cent; Scotch pine, 85 per cent; Norway Spruce, 85 per cent; European larch, 15 per cent; red oak, 90 per cent; black locust, 90 per cent; and black walnut, 85 per cent. The larch had already started to leaf out when received at the planting site, and in this condition a severe freeze a few days after planting caused great damage and accounts for the heavy loss.

Mr. Nicola has been securing the trees from the State Forest Nursery at cost and wants to increase his planting program to 50 acres a year as soon as the nursery can furnish the stock. The planting was done under the supervision of Assistant State Forester Karl E. Pfeiffer and Warden Clark Glotfelty.

This interesting work was continued in the spring of 1924, when there were set 27,000 white pine, 1,200 arbor vitae and 2,000 black walnut trees. As a result, the plateau will not be left as a bare forsaken area, and future travelers will realize the benefit of the work now being done. This forest was once the favorite stamping ground and winter home of thousands of deer, with many glades at the edge of the woodlands. Here Meshach Browning had most of his thrilling experiences, as preserved in his remarkable book, "Forty-Four Years of the Life of a Hunter."

Nicola's "Rock Lodge."

On the Nicola forest reserve and plantation is "Rock Lodge," a large and unique native stone bungalow, erected on a flat solid-rock foundation upon the top of Negro Mountain. Near the bungalow on this high plateau, Meadow Mountain and Negro Mountain converge, only Cherry Creek being the thin border line between them. Into the lodge are built two hugh dressed stone chimneys and flues with great arched stone alcoves, open fire-places and stone seats in the alcoves.

"Rock Lodge" was built and developed in 1919 by Mr. Nicola, a wealthy Pittsburgh man, as a place of quiet rest for himself and friends in summer; but every week people make pilgrimages to see the bungalow on the mountain top among the pine stumps, ferns and native mountain laurel. It is located about one and a half miles east of McHenry and the Accident-Oakland State Highway, with a hard surfaced road leading from it to the lodge.

A few hundred yards east of Mr. Nicola's place on Negro Mountain and just across Cherry Creek, one observes on Meadow Mountain a strange looking, broken-up cliff with deep crevices, bordering on a level tract of many acres of pine stumps. Into this cliff den, Meshach Browning, the mighty pioneer hunter, chased many wild beasts of prey.

Right on the border of this cliff, in a once dense forest, 42,000 shingles were made in 1847 for my grandfather's big red barn, by a man named Mason, for the sum of $100. This wilderness of noble pine trees was a grand setting for a stage in a great hunting cathedral for a quartet of famous hunters—Meshach Browning, William Fern, Holmes Wiley and William Bittinger.

Meshach Browning's Tree Dormitory

A few miles southeast of "Rock Lodge" stood the great yellow poplar tree that marked the spot of Meshach Browning's camping ground on Meadow Mountain—and in whose hollow, living and standing trunk he often slept when out on hunting trips. The tree was cut down by the Mountain Meadow Lumber Company about 1902, and was recognized as being one of the largest in these mountains.

Within the area of this primeaval forest was "Big Beech Flat," where Browning killed many of his 400 bears. Cranberry Marsh Glade," and the "Green Glades" are also near there.

The butt of the tree was hollow only about 10 feet up, and at one side had an opening just large enough to allow a man to pass into its interior. Here the great hunter had his "dormitory," and slept in security many a night while his hunting dog dozed and kept guard at his feet; for Browning was accustomed to say that he never kept a dog upon which he could not depend for his life.

GRANTSVILLE

The postoffice here in Grantsville has undergone some necessay repairs, such as extending the room for parcel post and a number of new boxes have been added. Mr. Stewart Rodamer, the postmaster, is quite active and interested in the office and is making every effort to relieve the congested condition and give the patrons of the office better service wherever possible. The incoming mails are so heavy that a new rural route from Grantsville through the New Germany community has been established, the latter made possible through the efforts of Congressman Zihlman. The length of the route is 26 8-10 miles and will serve over a hundred patrons every day where now a number of these patrons receive their mail but once or twice each week. After the service has been started a rural carrier examination will be given at Frostburg for any interested applicants.

Night Coughing Relieved At Once
Why suffer continually from a persistent, weakening night cough when you can get almost instant relief, and usually break the cough completely in 24 hours by a new method based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery?
Here is the method: You simply take one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. It has a double action. It not only soothes and heals irritation, but also removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. As a result even the worst cough usually disappears quickly.
Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

AN ADEQUATE AND BETTER GARRETT COUNTY FAIR

Text of an Address Delivered By Dr. T. B. Symons Before Oakland Business Men's Group

Aa a recent meeting of a group of Oakland business men held for the purpose of furthering the more successful annual Garrett County Fair, Dr. T. B. Symons, Director of Extension of the University of Maryland, took a great interest in the deliberations of the meeting and addressed the assembly.

Dr. Symons remarks upon the occasion were spoken earnestly and give much food for thought by those having the interest of a more successful and better fair at heart.

Dr. Symons remarks at the meeting were as follows:

"It is doubtful if the citizens of Garrett county fully appreciate the real possibility of an agricultural fair in the county. A good fair is one of the most educational influences that can be introduced into a community. It arouses the pride of the individual in the possibilities of his home county. I have not much use for a man or woman who does not think his home town and county are the best in the State. You have had a most commendable fair in the past, but all of the citizens have not been aroused as to its possibilities and what a real fair will mean to the farmers and business interests of the county. I am glad to see a movement such as has been launched that will bring the farmers and business men together for the promotion of a common cause, a greater and better County fair in the future. It is only through cooperation of all interests in a county that the best results can be secured.

"Garrett is the largest county in Maryland, with a land area of 438,400 acres. It has, according to the last census, over 19,000 citizens. It has 1,810 farms. Its primary interest is agricultural. It has hardly begun to develop its great agricultural possibilities. A good County fair, with exhibits of first class products and live stock that are raised in the county, will be an incentive towards improving our standards and inducing our farmers to give greafer attention to the variety and quality of products that can be raised in the county.

"I want every man, woman and child to get interested in the fair. This can be accomplished if you folk start now upon a well drawn up campaign to interest the people in the advertising possibilities of such an enterprise. I believe you should designate Fair Week as "Home Coming Week" for the folk of Garrett county, and the sons and daughters of this grand county who have sought to live, shall I say in more undesirable spots in this country. Garrett is the most beautiful county in Maryland, with scenery unsurpassed, mountains, valleys, lakes and running streams, and a summer climate that is the envy of other sections of Maryland. You should appeal to the tourists who are now passing through Maryland by the thousands during the year. You should commence your advertising campaign for the Fair in the near future, having a definite goal built upon drawing tourists this summer and a home coming of all from Garrett county during Fair Week.

"Some of the points that should be considered in laying the foundation of a comprehensive County Fair are as follows:

"1. Earnest and practical cooperation between all business and farming interests.

"2. The people should be made acquainted with what a good fair will mean to the community. This will include—installing a greater pride in the citizens; providing for the production of better products, and particularly showing the agricultural possibilities of the county.

"3. A fair should be built upon high ideals, backed by good common sense in its development.

"4. You should have broad-visioned and unselfish leaders. These should include both business men and farmers, and the directors should be a joint director.

"5. Concentrate on one or two specialties, so that the Fair can be known far and wide for one or two special lines of exhibits. These might be sheep, or other live stock, or special products.

"6. Provide first-class amusements. People usually go to the fair to be entertained as well as to observe the products of the county. Too much thought cannot be given to providing proper amusements and recreation opportunities for the people.

"7. Provide proper financial support, and arrange to pay premiums for exhibits. Nothing is so disappointing as for farmers or others to make exhibits, win prizes, and receive no pay as premiums.

"8. Provide for the active participation of the women. If the women of the county become interested in the fair, they will make it a success.

"9. Give opportunity for community expression. You have had community exhibits heretofore; emphasize this feature. It helps the home communities and stirs healthful rivalry between different sections of the county.

"10. Provide for explanation of awards, so that everyone will know wherein he has failed or won in the exhibits.

"11. Provide for boys' and girls' contests. Plans can be devised now for getting the boys and girls interested in the Fair through exhibits of their work in the schools, through recreation contests and demonstration.

"12. Feature labor-saving machinery, as this is helpful both to the farm home and to the farmer.

"13. Have a capable secretary who is able to devote considerable time toward promoting the enterprise.

"While an able president, secretary and other officers are necessary, yet their ability to get others to work and enlist the support of the people generally in the county should be their greatest asset. They cannot make a successful fair by themselves.

"Be sure to enlist the support of the Grangers and other farm organizations, as well as business organizations in all sections of the county. Oakland and the other towns of Garrett county are dependant upon agriculture. I would appeal to the business interests of Oakland, who responded so generously at their meeting last night, to join hands with the farmers in devising ways and means to make the Garrett County Fair a real factor in promoting all of the interest of the county.

"I want you to feel that the Extension Service, as represented by Mr. Jester and Miss Green, stands ready to aid you in every possible way. We shall be glad to assist, through our specialists, in judging as heretofore. It is a source of regret that the State does not provide definite funds to enable our Service to more adequately participate in our county fairs. We will, however, do our best to assist you in this laudable enterprise.

"You have made a fine start, and I sincerely hope that, with the enthusiasm that has now been generated among the business interests and the farm leaders, you will all work together for a County Fair which will be successful financially, but, more than that, which will instill into the hearts of the citizens of Garrett county a greater pride and provide a means for developing the wonderful possibilities of the county."

Rolling Boulder Strikes Passing Automobile.

A boulder, about three feet in diameter, loosing its hold on the hillside, rolled down a steep bank along the Friendsville road Sunday afternoon and struck a large Buick sedan belonging to Mr. A. D. Naylor, of Oakland, as he, in company with two sons and Milton Sincell were returning to Oakland after having attended the funeral of the late William Frederick at Friendsville.

The point where the rock came down is about midway between the Cave road and the town of Friendsville. Townshend Naylor, who was driving the car, fortunately saw the rock before it struck, but was unable to stop or to accellerate the speed of the automobile to avoid the rolling boulder, which hit the car on the left-hand side, breaking the running board standards and damaging one of the fenders.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian church will hold a food sale, Saturday, April 3, at 2:30 p. m., at Fraley's Store. The patronage of the public invited.

WILLIAM WERNER FOUND DEAD ON MOUNTAIN PATH

Home was at Mt. Savage—Taken Ill While Walking. His Death Following Exposure

William Werner, of Mt. Savage, Allegan county, was found dead Sunday afternoon near a path crossing Little Savage Mountain, about three miles from Finzel, Garrett county.

Mr. Werner, who lived in Mt. Savage, was employed as foreman of the fire clay mine of the Union Mining Company on Savage Mountain. He spoke of not feeling well while at work Saturday afternoon, and leaving the mining property about 5 o'clock told other workers that he intended going across the mountain to his farm, the Werner home place, near Pocahontas, Pa. There is a path leading across the mountain from the mine toward Pocahontas.

Mr. Werner's family, at Mt. Savage, expected him home Saturday night, but when he did not return, thought he had gone to the farm and would return early Sunday morning. Noting his continued absence Sunday his family became alarmed and his son Herbert Werner, and son-in-law, Wm. Norris, went across the mountain to look for him. Shortly before 2 o'clock, the young men came upon the body, lying in the snow by the path on top of the mountain. The body was discovered shortly before that by Wm. Baker, who lives near the Werner farm and was passing that way.

The county officers were notified and the Coroner, County Investigator, Terrance Boyle and Deputy Sheriff David Mason went to the scene. All investigations showed there were no marks of violence on the body and no evidence of foul play. Mr. Werner's pocketbook, money, watch and other personal effects seemed not to have been disturbed.

From the condition of the body and the fact that the weather was reported as slightly above zero on the mountain top Saturday night, the officers opined that death was caused by exposure and freezing. The body was removed to the Durst undertaking establishment in Frostburg to be prepared for burial.

Mr. Werner was 42 years old. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Christian Werner, of Pocahontas, Pa. He is survived by his widow, who was a Miss Bayer, of Pocahontas, and five children: Mrs. Wm. Norris, Herbert Werner, aged 16 years; Regis, aged 14; Kenneth, aged 10, and Helen, aged two.

He leaves two sisters— Mrs. John Arkin and Mrs. Joseph Clark, and one brother, Simon Werner, all residing at Pocahontas. Mr. Werner was a member of St. Patrick's Church, Mt. Savage.

In Memorium.

In the death of Mrs. Lou Thayer Waters, Garrett County has lost one of her most unique characters. She had great charm of personality in her youth and maturity; she had poise and was very witty. I have known her to keep a roomful of people in an uproar for hours. Wherever she went she was a leader, in the city or in the country.

As a school teacher, and as assistant postmaster for many years, I venture to say she knew more people and influenced more than any other citizen of the county. She always had a cheery greeting for all her country friends who came to market or to the postoffice. She took a deep interest in everything that touched her state, county or town.

I saw a poor reformed inebriate go to her one day in Oakland and thank her for her patient kindness to him during his reformation and I heard him say: "All I am now and will ever be, I owe to 'Miss Lou,"

"Miss Lou" handled a facile pen, and if she had taken up literature she could have produced many a season's "best seller" from the tragedy and comedy in her own recollections. Her buoyant spirit was sadly broken by the death of her sister, Jennie, and later by the passing of her nephew, young Bowie Johnson. A great cloud seemed to gather over her, and got deeper and darker as time went on. Her bubbling spirits sank lower and lower, and her fine mind became "jangled and out of tune."

Peace be to her ashes. We shall not soon look upon her like again.

"The spirit returned unto God who gave it."—Eecl. 12:7.

Miss Ellen Connell died Monday morning, Mareh 29th, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Parley DeBerry, at Romney ,West Virginia. She was born in 1850, at Obin, in the Highlands of Scotand, and was the eldest child of John and Margaret Craig Connell. Her father, the late John Connell, came to Garrett county and located at Hutton, six miles west of Oakland, where he established a home. He later returned to Scotland and in company with Mrs. Connell and their five-year old daughter came back to Hutton where Miss Connell grew to young womanhood. For several years she made her home in Terra Alta, W. Va., and later came to Oakland with her mother where she resided until recently. In Oakland as well as everywhere else Miss Connell won for herself many devoted friends and in many ways proved a helpful, loyal member of the community. It was from Oakland that she went to Romney in 1923 where she was connected with the administration of the West Virginia Schools for the deaf and blind and in that capacity endeared herself to the less fortunate under her charge.

The surviving members of her family are two brothers, John A. Connell, of Hutton, and Richard Connell, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and two sisters, Mrs. Parley DeBerry, of Romney, West Va., and Mrs. Christine Taylor, of Pittsburgh. Members of the family of a sister, Mrs. Dennis Glover, who died thirteen years ago, reside in Keyser. Two sisters of her mother, Mrs. Christine Snyder, of Fairmont, W. Va., and Mrs. Robens McKay, of Tacoma, Washington, also survive.

The deceased was a life-long member of the Presbyterian church, exhibiting ever to a remarkable degree the fidelity and sturdy loyaty of her Scotch forebears. Up to the time of her death she held her membership in the Presbyterian church at Terra Alta, West Va.

Miss Connell's body was brought to Oakland from Romney yesterday morning and taken to the Presbyterian church and the funeral services were held there yesterday afternoon, Rev. Henry A. Grubbs, the pastor, officiating. Burial took place in the family plot in the Oakland cemetery where rest her mother, father, grandmother and other members of her immediate family.

"She herself also hath been a helper to many."—Romans 16:2.

D., of Keyser, West Va., in the absence of his pastor, the Rev. E. E. Compbell. Interment was made in the Bloomington cemetery.

WILLIAM FREDERICK.

William Frederick, a former resident of Friendsville, died at his late home near Markleysburg, Pa., on Friday, following an illness of several years and was buried at Friendsville last Sunday afternoon. While residing at Friendsville Mr. Frederick was engaged in the jewelry and watchmaking business and was also associated for a time with his father in the milling business. He was a member of the Methodist church, his funeral occurring from the church of that denomination Sunday. He was also a member of Oakland Lodge of Masons, many of the members of that fraternity going from here Sunday to be present at the services.

IMPROVEMENTS MADE AT THE FIRE ENGINE HOUSE

Quarters Have Been Given General Overhauling and Made Extremely Inviting

During the past week or so improvements of a marked degree have been made in the Fire Department quarters in the City Hall.

The room has been replastered and painted, and in general has been put in a clean and orderly manner.

A new stove has replaced one of insufficient capacity to heat the room, and a telephone has been installed in the room. The night police headquarter is located in the building and when not on actual duty the police can be communicated with over the phone at any hour during the night. The telephone number at the hall is 10-R.

At the last regular meeting of the Town Council 300 feet of hose was purchased which replaces a like number of feet of worn hose. The remaining part of the old hose will soon be tested and if any does not measure up to standard it will immediately be replaced with new hose.

Great Interest Being Shown in Annual Pythian Banquet.

So much publicity has been given the banquet to be held Friday night, April 9th, that it should be foremost in the minds of everyone in the immediate vicinity ere this. There remains but little to add concerning it.

We wish, however, to reiterate a previous statement that aside from being a Pythian celebration, it is the purpose of the committee to provide an evening of festivities and enjoyment for the ladies. It is unanimously conceded that they are deserving of the very best Garrett Lodge has to offer, both in the form of entertainment and the menu of which so much has been written. Think of it, ladies, you may sit in complacency, your arms folded, nothing to worry about or to mar your pleasure, while Knights will do their utmost to see that you are served and your every whim satisfied. We also wish to emphasize the fact that this is to be strictly an informal affair, so the question of suitable attire should not be a perplexing one to feminine minds.

Prominent speakers will be present, their remarks being in keeping with the occasion. No such celebrities as Paderewske, Hofmann, Grainger or Rachmaninoff will display their technique at the piano, but the pianist in Prof. Gilbert's orchestra is a performer of no mean ability. We are not prepared to state whether any of the musical compositions of Wagner, Rubenstein, Beethoven or Chopin will be included on the program, but we do assure you that Prof. Gilbert's orchestra will render high class music.

If you have not secured your tickets do so at once.

The rank of Page will be conferred Friday night, April 2.

Effective Friday, April 2, lodge will open at eight o'clock instead of 7:30. We hope to see a large crowd both at this session of lodge and at the banquet.

Knights, see to it that you treat your lady, as well as yourself, to an evening of pleasure. Fill our Castle Hall to overflowing and make this an event long to be remembered.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE.

Local Legionairres Hold Enthusiastic Rally.

A rally of the members of the local post, American Legion, was held last Monday evening at which much enthusiasm was in evidence and the fiscal year started off in regular machine gun order. The occasion marked the election of officers for the ensuing year of the following: Post Commander, C. Milton Sincell; vice-commander, R. E. McIntire; adjutant, Neil Fraley; finance officer, Delbert Davis; historian, E. P. Kahl; chaplain, Joseph Gonder.

New headquarters have been established in the Garrett National Bank building in very comfortable and cheery rooms. The annual dues have been reduced from $5 to $4.

The last fiscal year was more or less of a "dud" in Legion circles in Oakland due to several obstacles that confronted the organization, but this year promises to be a banner one for the local post.

The next regular meeting will be held in the new quarters on Monday, April 12, to which all ex-service men of the county are most cordially invited.

The play, Mr. Bob, advertised to be given by the Aurora high school at Sunny Side Grange, has been indefinitely postponed.

DECLAMATION CONTEST AT ACCIDENT LAST EVENING

In Which Miss Gladys Gonder, O. H. S., Received Honors; Miss Speicher, A. H. S., Second

Last night was a gala night at Accident, the beautiful little hamlet located twenty miles north of Oakland, on the State road, the occasion being the annual declamation contest between students of the five high schools of the county, which was sponsored by Mr. G. A. Fraley, cashier of the Garrett National Bank, of Oakland, and in which girl students only are eligible to participate.

The school building was crowded to the door and it is said that hundreds were turned away from the building who could not be admitted owing to the lack of space.

The declaimers were Miss Emma Chisholm, of the Kitzmiller school; Miss Helen Folk, representing Grantsville; Miss Gladys Gonder, Oakland; Miss Eula Guthrie, of the Friendsville school and Miss Nelle Speicher, of the Accident high school.

Prof. O. D. Lambert, principal of the Kingwood high school; Prof. R. E. King, principal of the Kingwood elementary school, and Rev. St. Clair, pastor of the Baptist church at Kingwood, were the three judges chosen by the county school officials to pass upon the merits of the speakers.

Mr. Lambert, who delivered the decision of the judges, paid many compliments to the contestants for their ability, to the schools that foster and train such interest and enthusiasm, and to the people of the county for having such an alert, up-to-date school system that makes such commendable exercises possible for training its boys and girls in such worthy ambitions.

Miss Gladys Gonder, of Oakland, whose subject was "In the Palace of the King," by Marion Crawford, received first honors, while Miss Nelle Speicher, of the Accident school, who chose as her subject "The Rivals," by H. Greenbaugh Smith, was awarded second prize.

The various towns where the five schools above named are located were largely represented by enthusiastic admirers of the various speakers and when it was announced that no more could be accommodated within the building many were the words of disappointment heard on every hand.

Mr. H. A. Loraditch, pesident of the County Board of Education, presided at the gathering and an address on the value of educational features such as the occasion of last night, was made by County Superintendent F. E. Rathbun.

FINED FOR WIFE BEATING

Wm. Shaffer, B. & O. Brakeman, Assessed $20 and Costs for Imbibing in This Pastime.

William Shaffer, 35 years old, living on Water street in Oakland, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace E. I. West yesterday morning on the charge of beating his wife, the assault having occurred on Tuesday morning at the home of the couple. Shaffer was fined $20 and with the costs, his genteel actions upon the occasion totalled $25.25.

Shaffer was taken to jail Tuesday morning after Sheriff Guy O. Yutzy had been summoned to the home by Mrs. Shaffer where she made a complaint that her husband had beaten her. Shaffer was at once placed under arrest by the officer.

At the hearing before the magistrate it was said that Shaffer, employed by the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Company as a brakeman, returned home from his run in an intoxicated condition and found on the dining table a glass of lemonade which Mrs. Shaffer had prepared for one of her children who was indisposed. Shaffer asked that the drink be thrown out. He was told that the lemonade was not "bothering" anyone and as Mrs. Shaffer was engaged in her regular morning housework at the time she would not stop to dispose of it. This angered Shaffer and he attacked her, beating her brutally about the face and producing several bruises.

Shaffer admitted that at the time he was intoxicated and upon being asked where he had procured the liquor stated that he had obtained it in Cumberland that morning.

At the hearing Shaffer seemed to be in a very remorseful mood and stated that he intended to stop drinking.

Mrs. Shaffer, it is said, is an exceptionally good wife and housekeeper and is well liked by her neighbors.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, APRIL 4, 1926.

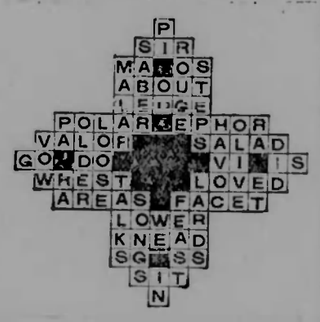
JESUS APPEARS TO HIS DISCIPLES. Easter Lesson.—John 20:24-21:25.

Because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.—John 20:29.

THE LILY THAT BLOOMED LATE.

What an Easter day that first one was! There was the slow journey to the tomb. There was Mary's startled race for Peter and John. There was the swift going here and there of the women with their word, "We saw Him and He's alive!" There was the conviction of John. There was the uplifted face of Peter. There were the warmed hearts of the travelers to Emmaus. There was sudden stillness in the Upper Room when Jesus appeared, gave them "Peace," commissioned them, empowered them and left them radiant with their joy. What glorious fields of lilies bloomed that day. Their fragrance has swept the world and will yet sweeten the last cemetary, make odorous the plains of human endeavor and so impregnate the air that all nettles of sin will die away.

But no flower bloomed where Thomas sat in dull despair. His Beloved was dead. He had seen the slow torture that ended life and had watched the still form wrapped in spices and laid in the grave. After that memorable hour with dying Ann Rutledge Lincoln was a changed man; after her death he plunged into the forest like a deer with its death wound, shunning all its old comrades, hugging its own hurt. Thomas did the same thing. His heart was too raw to bear the touch of any fingers save God's. When the disciples found him after that Easter day and shouted their joy he was amazed, not at their story but at their light-heartedness. They had painted suns upon their spectacles and thought it was real shining that they saw. He knew the world was dark. Throughout the week he kept to himself, escaping the others whenever he could, suffering as only a strong love can suffer. For his love was both deep and heroic, steadfast and unfaltering; but it refused to dream. The week passed and again the Upper Room was filled. Thomas was there with no lightening of gloom but determined to see who was right. Having held his grief so long he was keen to prove its right to live. He would see whether there were any lilies or not! They might laugh at him now but it would be his turn later. Then there was the sudden silence as a figure moved toward him. His heart stopped beating in the clutch of his love and his Lord stood there living and spoke his name. And another lily bloomed—never to die.



THE LILY THAT BLOOMED EARLY

There was another of that company whose experience was unlike that of Thomas tho his love was no less. That disciple that Jesus loved had not seen any other vision than an empty tomb and it had been enough to settle for all time his certainty of a continuing Lord. Now the group went back into Galilee where they were swallowed up by the old associations and the old occupation. What does the next day mean It is here that the hardihood of any flower is tested. Not will it thrive in the hot house, but will it grow in the open is the proof of its worth. Can my new life walk the streets of my old town and keep its vigor? Had they forgotten that they were to catch men? Well, the old job had somehow lost its flavor and the luckless night left them tired and wet and hungry, wondering what the next step should be. Suddenly across the waves came a call, "Boys, have you caught anything?" There was a lone fisherman on the shore who had evidently been successful for they caught the gleam of a fire and had wafted to them the delicious odor of out-door cookery. There were fish in the lake. "Try it on your right," came the same cheery voice, "there are plenty of fish there." And then what a catch they made! In the midst of the flurry and excitement one voice was lifted in assuring conviction. "It is the Lord." To the rest he had been merely a passing fisherman like themselves, to one it was "The Lord." Their problem was the problem of all of us, the recognition of Jesus back in the humdrum on the day after. It was easy enough in the Upper Room but on the shore of our industry is quite another thing. But Jesus of the high hour is the Jesus of the task also, and the glory of love is insight sufficient to recognize Him there. He who had lain upon His breast, had lived nearest His heart was he who knew Him in the unexpected place. And when the lily blooms in toil's pot then is it Easter indeed.

THE LILY THAT HAD TO BE REPLANTED

Stretched luxuriously upon the sand beside the fire these fellows were vastly content and if all were known about that camp breakfast with Jesus new reality would creep over our religion. It was the satisfaction of success, the feeling that none of their old skill was gone, that was one of the contributions of Jesus to that hour. But they must be headed back to the diviner task and Peter, who had led in the race to the boat, must lead them away from its seductions. His lily must be re-rooted if there was to be any such thing and to this Jesus set His hand. It had been frosted by fear before and now there was danger from the lure of the net. "Simon, son of John, do you love Me more than these things?" "Yes, Lord, You know I love you." "Then there are many sheep of mine—shepherd them, Simon." "There are many sheep of mine grow old—tenderly care for them, Simon." So the lily raised its head and sent again its fragrance into life. The vision of these who were his Lord's needing him and his service fixed its roots so firmly that they were never again to need replacing. But Peter was grieved. He was distressed; was it a case of Jesus forgiving and not forgeting? If that were true we might well all of us be distressed. "O, Aunt Dora," said the grandchild of Dr. Weston of Crozier Seminary, "you are not a bit like God. When God forgives any one He doesn't keep flinging it up to him afterwards." Peter never changed the word he used for love but the third time Jesus took his disciple's expression which had not before crossed His lips and it seems to me that the sting lay in His saying, "Very well, Simon, let's put it on your own level; do you love me that way?" And that was enough to kill the impulsive disciple. "Master," he may have responded, "You certainly do understand me, that is the way I love You and You know it fully." It is significant that when he writes his letter he climbed into the very word for love that he refused to utter beside the sea.

Have Your Car Overhauled.

Motor car owners who will listen to sound advice from the experienced often save themselves much worry and a great deal of cash.

F'rinstance: The idea that one should have a NEW car every season or two is an extravagance born in the fertile brain of some motor salesman.

If you have a good car—a car that has stood the test of many thousand miles—then you have ONE good reason for keeping that car.

An overhauling during the winter months—new piston rings—valves ground—ignition tuned—carbon removed—all oil cases cleaned and refilled—fender dents ironed out—then ,when spring breakes, the old engine will be humming as of yore and you'll be all ready for another summer of pleasure.

We have workmen who are MACHINISTS—and we give you a strict accounting of time consumed.

THE EVOLUTION OF TELEPHONE SERVICE IN FIFTY YEARS

(1) The first telephone as it appeared in 1876. (2) A modern central office. (3) When boys were operators in 1880. (4) The telephone of today.

A long row of young women seated at a switchboard; hands moving rhymically as plugs are thrust deftly into jacks; the faint click of metal against metal; a low hum of carefully modulated voices and everywhere an atmosphere of quiet efficiency—such is the modern telephone exchange.

But in the exchange of less than half a century ago a far different situation presented itself to the eye—and to the ear—of the chance visitor. Almost without exception the operators in the first exchanges in large cities were boys, as they were in the Gold and Stock exchange, New York City, in 1879.

And boys were then, as they are now and ever will be, just—boys. Many an operator of that early day delights to tell his grandchildren of the pranks the youngsters played on each other or—it must be recorded in all candor—upon the subscribers. The apparatus was not arranged to permit the quiet operation of the present day, and its youthful guardians had to shout to each other—at the top of their voices, when traffic was heavy—the numbers called for by subscribers.

Even when discipline in the central office was at its best, the air was filled with strident cries, with the shuffling of many feet as the youngsters ran to and fro, with snarling threats and even the sounds of physical combat when the paths of two of these Mercurial Mercuries crossed in the middle of the central office floor.

A strange contrast, surely, with the modern exchange, where the volume of traffic is so great as to make that of one of these early exchanges seem insignificant, but where this vastly more complicated business is transacted with not the smallest fraction of the ado that made the telephone operating room of 1879 little less than a place of unending uproar, a veritable bedlam.

In such contrasts as this the history of the telephone has been written. And yet such contrasts have not been brought about by radical and sweeping changes, but by a process of gradual evolution toward better apparatus and operating methods—a process which is still going on and must continue until telephone service has been made as nearly perfect as it is humanly possible . . make it.

HIGH SPOTS IN A. T. & T. REPORT

Summary of the Annual Report of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

C—U & U
W. S. GIFFORD

Progress in the quality and extent of telephone service is the keynote in the annual report of President W. S. Gifford, of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. He states that more than 813,000 telephones were added to the Bell System during 1925. At the end of the year 16,720,000 telephones were interconnected so that practically any one of them can be connected with any other one throughout the United States, at any time, day or night. Over 50,000,000 toll and exchange connections, each an individual transaction, are handled daily.

Three hundred and sixty-five million dollars was expended by the Bell System on new plant construction, including new plant to replace $107,000,000 of plant retired. Net additions to plant were $258,000,000. This brought the assets devoted to furnishing telephone service up to $2,938,000,000. The number of persons employed, including those in the Western Electric Company, was over 332,000.

The gross revenue of the Bell System, he states, was $761,200,000 and net earnings were 6½ per cent on the amount invested in plant and other assets. Earnings available for contingencies and surplus amounted to 1⅓ per cent on the investment—less than a cent a day a telephone, a necessary but relatively small margin of safety.

It is shown that there were over 362,000 stockholders of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company at the end of the year, making the Bell System in a sense, publicly owned. The amount of capital stock of the American Company outstanding was $921,597,500, an increase of $33,119,400 for the year.

The net income of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company was $107,105,000. Of the resulting balance, after payment of dividends at $9.00 a share, $6,000,000 was appropriated for contingencies and the remainder, $20,360,000, was carried to surplus.

Mr. Gifford says that the nature of the business requires a nation-wide organization operating under state laws and state regulation and federal laws and federal regulation. This requires various inter-corporate relations, which, however, are simple in principle and not arbitrary. It comprises in brief the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, which is the parent company, twenty-five Associated Telephone Companies, and the Western Electric Company, and the report shows the necessary functions of each.

Mr. Gifford says that although the Bell System is growing larger and more complicated, it is less hazardous to manage because of a better knowledge of the essential facts. He says that the population of the country grows at the rate of from one to two per cent a year, general business at the rate of three or four per cent, and the telephone business, due to the higher standards of living and the trend toward the economy of time, increases at a more rapid rate than general business.

Telephone service is not a commodity, he says, or a physical product comparable to that furnished by other industries, or even other utilities.

The problem of furnishing service increases with the number of telephones interconnected and except for economies, many factors of cost would increase greatly. Telephone costs have been kept at the present relatively low point in spite of the unique character of the business, only by constant invention and development of new types of apparatus and by new and better methods of operation.

During the past year steady improvement has been made in telephone service so that it will better meet the requirements of the users. Maintenance and upkeep have been continued on a high plane, with strict attention also to all possible economies. The amount of new construction for 1926 is expected to be somewhat greater than last year.

Mr. Gifford speaks of the continuing work of development and research on more than a thousand problems relating to telephone service, on continuing experiments in transoceanic telephony, and on other phases of radio transmission which might have application in the extension of telephone facilities.

The result of improvements and economies is apparent, he says, in the cost of telephone service to the public. Telephone rates are, on the average, only 33 per cent higher than ten years ago while wages and material costs have increased much more and living costs have increased 75 per cent. Bell System companies do not need nor do they seek to earn more than a reasonable return on their property. Rate adjustments have been made necessary chiefly because of the change in the value of the dollar.

Speaking of relations with the public, Mr. Gifford states that in the telephone business they are founded on satisfactory service at the lowest possible rates. This is the aim of the Bell System. It also aims to conduct its affairs in accordance with American ideals and traditions.

The highest award for the year, under the terms of the Theodore N. Vail Memorial Fund was a gold medal accompanied by $500 in cash given to Anna Leonelda Lennan, chief operator of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, Piedmont, W. Va. This award was made for conspicuous courage and devotion to the public service during a severe flood in the spring of 1924.

Driver Escapes injury when all steel car turns upside down

An icy pavement between Piqua and Dayton, Ohio . . . traffic complications . . . and the car shown above plunged through a wire fence and turned completely over.

"The driver," reads the report, "only found it necessary to operate the window crank in the left front door and crawl out. He had not received a scratch."

Lucky motorist to have been driving a Dodge Brothers all steel sedan!

Imagine what would have happened, under similar circumstances, to a motor car with a body of wood—and to the driver!

Every automobile body should now be all steel just as every sleeping car is now built of steel.

All steel bodies are safer. Anyone knows that. Steel doesn't splinter. Steel doesn't burn. Steel is tough and strong—the modern ship metal—the modern aeroplane metal—the modern bridge and building metal.

That's why Dodge Brothers built the first all steel touring car eleven years ago—the first all steel closed car four years ago—and this year pioneered again in further perfecting all steel construction.

And remember that while nearly all types of motor car bodies appear to be all steel, most of them are simply frames of wood covered by a steel shell—a fragile substitute for the sturdy construction common to Dodge Brothers product.

Protect yourself—and family—with steel. Demand all steel automobile bodies.

They will stand up under impacts that would crush the average body to splinters.

And by substituting slim, strong steel columns for bulky wooden corner posts, they almost double driving vision—a safety improvement of transcendent importance.

Then there are Dodge Brothers dependable quick-action brakes to protect you. And a chassis possessing more pounds of drop forgings and costly alloy steels, in proportion to total weight, than any other car built, regardless of price.

The car will continue to be a "four".

New Way to Stop Night Coughing

Simple Method Brings Quick Relief

For almost instant relief from hacking, irritating, sleep-robbing night coughing there is a very simple treatment which, often with a single dose, stops all irritation and permits sound sleep the whole night through.

This treatmert is based on the prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take one teaspoonful at bed-time and hold it in the throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of night coughing. People who have not slept well for nights are often surprised how quickly this simple method checks coughing and banishes the entire cough condition completely.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, sore throat, hoarseness, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children as well as grown-ups—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

AFTER BEING HANDCUFFED PRISONER MAKES ESCAPE

Norman Bittinger Flees From Officers Who Had Him Under Arrest on Forgery Charge

Norman Bittinger, aged 29 years, a mine employe at the Morgart Coal Mining Corporation's workings at Jennings, this county, made his escape from Constable Wagus, of Midland, Allegany county, and Constable Andrew Shnrtzer, of Garrett county, on Friday last even though Bittinger had submitted to arrest on the charge of forgery and had his wrists encased in a pair of exceedingly strong and handsomely designed handcuffs, furnished by Constable Wagus. Bittinger is still on his way somewhere so far as the officers of the two counties know and they are at a loss as to the time of his return with the State's property, namely, the pair of wrist warmers.

The story as related by Constable Shartzer centers about a check or two cashed at the Citizens National Bank at Frostburg some time ago, one of the checks being for $60 and the other for $40, each of which bore the alleged signature of Perry Bowser, a prominent farmer and land owner residing in the vicinity of Jennings, but which have turned out to be fogeries, alleged to have been perpetrated by Bittinger.

Following the discovery of the alleged crime a warrant for the arrest of Bittinger was sworn out in Allegany county and placed in the hands of Constable Wagus for service. Wagus, being unacquainted with the territory or the people in the Jennings section, got into communication with Constable Shartzer Friday and together they repaired to the mining town where they placed Bittinger under arrest as he came from his work in the mine. He very quietly submitted to the demands of the officers and surrendered. The handcuffs were placed upon his wrists and about the time the party was ready to move in a body toward Frostburg, Bittinger ducked beneath the arm of Constable Wagus, grabbed his dinner pail, which he had brought from the mine, and in another second had plunged back into the opening and was soon lost to sight in the blackness of the pit.

The prisoner's actions were so swift and executed so unexpectedly that the officers were dumbfounded and unable to act before their quarry had disappeared from sight, well knowing that it would be an impossible feat to capture or even to overtake the man in the mine as hundreds of places within it offered points where he could effectually conceal himself.

Bittinger resides near Jennings and when not engaged in mining farms on a small scale.

SAYS BUREAUCRACY MENACES MARYLAND

Maloy Criticizes Governor's Power as Opposing Self-Government.

Frederick, Md., April 7.—William Milnes Maloy, one of the candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor, in an address before the Kiwanis Club here yesterday, asserted that Maryland presents the most highly centralized and most nearly bureaucratic form of government of all the States in the Union. Acquisition of great power by the Governor, he said, had come about within the last twenty years and most of it within the last ten years.

"The Fewer Elections law," said Mr. Maloy, "the power of appointment without Senate confirmation, and last, but not least, the reorganization of the State administrative departments under direct contol by and responsibility to the Governor, have succedded in making the Governor of Maryland the sole embodiment of most of the executive, legislative and administrative powers or our government.

Form Accentuated.

"This highly centralized form of State government is accentuated by the State commissions, boards and agencies that exercise general supervisiory power over health, schools, roads, tax assessments, public service corporations, motor vehicle regulation, agriculture, sea-food conservation and policing. Local self government has almost vanished in the counties of Maryland."

Mr. Maloy said that the creation of the Public Service Commission was expected to take the politicians off the books of the corporations, but that the unexpected result has been, in reality, to put the public service corporation in place of the politicians.

All Trails Meet.

"You Will find," he said, "all trails lead to the same place and the same men doing the work for the public service corporations in all these board and commissions. Stranger still, you will find that the trails lead to the men who make the nominations for high offices. I have stated in previous talks that we have set up a Mikado in Maryland, but the public service corporations have their 'shotgun.' I want you to find out if this is not true.

"I want the political parties of this State to resapture their political powers and restore to the citizens of Maryland their politicnl liberty, for thus only can we have and keep our cival ond individual liberties.

Urges Regulation.

"To this end I want to convince you that it is necessary for both parties to determine to put the public service corporations of this State out of politics and to keep them out and to put them under and keep them under real regulation."

Raymond E. Town, president of the Kiwanis Club, presided at the luncheon at which Mr. Maloy spoke. Leslie N. Coblentz, a cousin of Emory L. Coblentz nnd a formen president of the club, escorted him to the Francis Scott Key Hotel, where the luncheon was held.

Miss Catherine Getty, of Westernport, returned to her home Sunday evening after having been a guest of Miss Adeline Sincell two or three days.

DATES FOR THE GARRETT COUNTY FAIR ARE FIXED

September 28, 29 and 30 and October 1, 1926, Chosen by The Board of Directors.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors of the Garrett County Agricultural Fair Association the dates for holding the fair this year were fixed as September 28, 29 and 30 and October 1.

Since the recent meeting of the business and professional men of Oakland when their support was pledged in a very substantial manner in an effort to make the 1926 fair larger and better than it ever has been, and the address delivered by Dr. Symons, which was given publicity through the coumns of The Republican, new life seems to have been injected into the undertaking with the result that at this early date many producers are making inquiry as to what may be expected at the fair and asking for suggestions as to what they shall exhibit—live stock, horticultural or agricultural products. These queries were answered the other day by Field Secretary Orendorf who suggested that every farmer bring an exhibit for each department of the fair. Should this suggestinn be carried out Garrett county will have the largest fair of any in the State.

The work of gathering material for the catalogue is now under way and the probabilities are that it will be ready for delivery early in June, instead of later as has been the case in former years.

The Soap Server.

According to an announcement made by the Health Gnome, during his latest visit to the State Department of Health, the Health Gnome has a new assistant, a sort of junior officer. Like others who are working in public health, the assistant is a specialist devoting himself to one particular line of work. His specialty is "Clean Hands Before Eating." That implies also, that each child shall have his own individual towel.

For the present, the assistant has been assigned to duty among the kindergarten chidren and the first graders in some of the schools—"those who are beginning to form habits of cleanliness and health in connection with their school work," the Health Gnome explained.

"The official title of my assistant," the Health Gnome said "is 'The Server.' He goes on duty just before lunch time, and you will never guess what he serves, so I'll have to tell you—it is soap. Did you ever see liquid soap? It is the sort you find in some railway stations. Well, that is the kind my assistant carries—of course other kinds of soap would do just as well. He has it put up in little bottles with holes in the top like a salt shaker. The children hold out their hands, palms upward; he sprinkles a few drops of the soap on them and the children scamper off to the washroom, and wash and dry their hands. Then they come bac kand get their crackers and milk.

"Of course each child has either a paper towel or brings his own towel from home. All sorts of diseases that children pick up from each other nt home and in school—especially diseases like measles, scarlet fever, colds, whooping cough, sore throat, influenza and pink eye—can be spread, you know, when more than one child uses the same towel. And that is true of the towels at home as well as of those at school.

"My assistant hopes," the Health Gnome continued, "that every child who learns to wash his hands before eating his school lunch, will remember to wash his hands before he sits down at the table for his meals at home, and that he will be just as careful to have his own towel, and keep his own germs to himself at home as at school.

"Did I hear you say something nbout his drinking cup? Why of course he has his own cup or glass. No child who has learned anything about health and the way disease spreads woud use another person's cup or glass."

Card of Thanks.

We desire In this manner to express our thanks to the many friends for their help, their words and acts of kindness and their sympathy during the long and painful illness of our mother, the late Mrs. Margaret Kerins, and for their tributes of esteem following her death. THE FAMILY. —Advertisement.

Star Route on National Highway West From Frostburg Also Served Twice Daily

Through the efforts of Congressman Frederick N. Zihiman and other interested parties, additional mail service will be provided after April 16th between Frostburg and Grantsville, on the National Highway, when there will be two deliveries of mail daily except Sunday. A motor vehicle will be used except when the road and weather conditions will not permit.

The mail will leave Frostburg at 8:30 a. m. and at 3:30 p. m., and arrive at Grantsville at 10:45 a. m., and 4:45 p. m.

Russell Clise, of Frostburg, has been retained by the Department for the service at the rate of $2,400 per annum.

About forty families are served between Frostburg and Grantsville. The mail will be delivered and collected on the first trip of each day. On the second trip no deliveries will be made or collected, except newspapers.

Proposals for serving mail to Grantsville from Meyersdale, Pa., was made by parties living along the road connecting the two towns. The larger number of requests for the service from Frostburg to Grantsville had the effect of the latter route being selected by the Postoffice Department.

WHY OUR INDUSTRIES SUCCEED.

All Americans should be interested in the findings of two British experts who came over lately to see why American industry was more successful than British industry. They wanted especially to know why our industries can undersell their own, and pay higher wages than theirs and yet make a profit. Here are their striking conclusions:

1. Promotion in America is by merit.

2. America sticks to the principle of small profits and quick returns, and wealth is made by fine margins of profit on immense and rapid turnovers.

3. Rapid turnover is secured by simplification and cheapening of processes which necessitate less capital for given output.

4. American shows endless keenness in devising time-saving and trouble-saving appliances.

5. The American employer is not hostile to high wages.

6. American manufacturers co-operate by exchanging ideas.

7. Americans are vigilant and acute in eliminating waste and in conserving time, energy and space.

8. American welfare methods double high wages in their stimulating effect by surrounding the workers with cleanliness and light and by seeking in every way to increase their convenience and satisfaction.

9. Americans encourage research with magnificent intelligence, scouring the world to obtain the best research brains.

Sometimes we have our own doubts about our industries. Employers complain about workmen. Workmen complain about employers. Outsiders complain about both. But on the whole isn't this British size-up true and illuminating? It gives every American a better understanding of American success, and makes him proud of the men whose brains, hands nnd hearts have made our industrial prosperity possible.

What I Would Do Were I a Minister.

By F. F. CORLISS.

(Published by courtesy of the editor, who in a spirit of broadminded tolerance accepts some articles that he may not approve of or believe. The readers of the Republican are men and women of diverse minds and some there are who like a diversion from the accidents, sports, suicides, scandals and the current events of the day. So an editor lives to enlighten, to please all and offend none. And one of the greatest pleasures of life is the pleasure of pleasing others.—F. F. C.)

Though the writer's opinions differ from others he is always tolerant of the rights of others and deferential to both the church and the clergy. He has been asked to state what he would do if he was a minister.

Leaders of thought and many prominent preachers tell us through the public press that since the World War millions of men and women have lost the God of their childhood and their faith in sectarian creeds; that church attendance is suffering a rapid decline. With many, going to church is just an old-time custom—a perfunctory performance. Others seek amusement on Sunday—go motoring or play golf. So what shall we do about it?

The church has its sphere of usefulness, like all of us. Will it rise to the occasion of new demands for its energy?

Life is a growth, mind is a growth, they affect us in all the affairs of life—in our business methods, social customs, manners, our creeds and our conduct.

Life, mind und thought are ever reaching upward—growing in a geometrical progress. All is vibration and that which tries to stand still stagnates and dies.

The merchant who tries to do business to day like he did it fifty years ago fails. The church is not exempt from the law of life. It must progress or recede.

A great teacher once said: "Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God; but unto others in parables, that seeing they might not see and hearing they might not understand." The church is anchored to a dead and forgotten past that is historical of civilization in its infancy.

It is traditional and relates to man in his crudity, when he was a nomad, a tribesman and shepherd.

The congregations have been fed on fables, taught sectarian theology, of which there are twelve hundred varieties or more, talked to in parables while they looked but did not see, heard but did not understand.

The one religion of humanity, which is for all men, of all nations, for all time, has suffered neglect and we have failed to put righteousness into our conduct, into our daily doings, into work and wages, into our weights and measures. These are the vital things that matter—not our creeds.

Now my way of putting righteousness into the hearts of men is something like the good wife's way of elevating the mind of her husband, by ruling him so that he don't know it.

You can get a lot of work out of a boy if you once convince him that it is just a game and that if he ever wants to be a man he must learn to play it like the grown-ups do. Men and women are like children, only older grown and they like to be amused and they will learn fast from object lessons and example that which you can not drive into their craniums by precept or preaching.

Ministers, who are supposed to lead their less informed followers, are bound hand and foot and told that dismissal awaits them if their preaching deviates from the circumscribed tenets of the church. So I would say to my congregation that they would have to accept my resignation or give me freedom of mind and action. If you wish to retain me I will be responsible for results. I will bring the church out of the darkness of antiquity into the illumination of twentieth century wisdom. I will make your church a power for good in a world that needs it for the making of better men and women instead of making them merely church members.

My church will be called the Peoples House of Learning and people of all denominational faiths will be welcome. We shall have no revivals, no Sam. Jones or Billy Sunday sensations, no money making exhibits which are a travesty of religion.

No, we are not going to turn the church into a theatre, but we are going to make it fully as popular and far more profitable to those attending. We are going to apply modern business methods in our church work and bring the church up-to-date in efficiency for the service and betterment of men.

Now remember, I am going to preserve all the sanctity and hallowed atmosphere that inheres within the walls of a church, but I am going to teach religion through lessons taken from daily life and pictured on the screen. Of course some of the orthodox will rise in holy horror at such an innovation. But they have given me full authority. I am no longer called minister, from now on I am the instructor and business manager of the House of Learning. And under my direction the sole objective of the church will be the making of better husbands and wives, better fathers and mothers, better citizens. If our objective is achieved the means thereto are immaterial, so long as they are clean and honest.

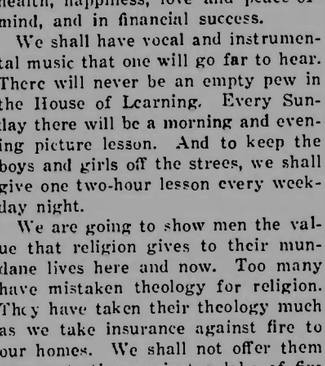
Science and religion have always been in accord but science and sectarian theology have ever been in conflict. Every man needs religion and the good society requires that he should have one and have one that is founded on truth as revealed in the changeless laws of God throughout nature.

As a river never rises above its source, so a man's religion never rises higher or better than his ability to comprehend the laws of God that govern mind, matter, energy and that shape life into conscious and self-conscious being.

So to quote again, "Unto you it shall be given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God." It is these mysteries that I shall teach them in picture lessons. But heretofore the church members have been looking but not seeing, been hearing but without understanding. No fiction or fable was ever written that has power to fascinate and enlighten the human mind like the mysteries of God's truth as revealed in lessons from astronomy, geology, chemistry, biology, history, bacteriology, psychology and other studies from nature.

Nothing keeps men down but their ignorance. Nothing makes men free but a knowledge of the truth. Men have been taught to believe in many errors—untruths—and when, later, they are disillusioned they become unhappy, confused in mind and godless. These are the people we are going to educate into a love for religion. We shall make them practice the golden rule so that their lives will be of helpful service to their fellowmen.

We shall teach men that righteousness is not only God-like but as a business proposition it is the only one that pays dividends in terms of health, happiness, love and peace-of-mind, and in financial success.



We shall have vocal and instrumental music that one will go far to hear. There will never be an empty pew in the House of Learning. Every Sunday there will be a morning and evening picture lesson. And to keep the boys and girls off the strees, we shall give one two-hour lesson every week-day night.

We are going to show men the value that religion gives to their mundane lives here and now. Too many have mistaken theology for religion. They have taken their theology much as we take insurance against fire to our homes. We shall not offer them any protection against a lake of fire that burns in the hereafter. But we shall show them how to avoid a hell of their own creation during earth-life. Life teaches its lessons to us through contrasts and comparisons. We would never know the meaning of cold if it were always hot; nor the value of being good if we never saw the bad effects of evil.

Our pictures will all be high class, they will all carry an object lesson from life that gives one an uplift for better things.

They will be replete with love and romance. They will portray life as it is lived in many industries by the employer and the employes. We shall paint life as it is in city and in country.

Well, my friend you asked me what I would do and I have told you only in part, as my space is up.

Danger In Coughs That Hang-On

Neglected coughs often lead to worse trouble. Yet there is a simple method based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery, which usually breaks the worst cough entirely in 24 hours.

Here is the method: You take just one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. It has a double action. It not only soothes and heals irritation, but also removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. So the most stubborn cough soon disappears completely.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

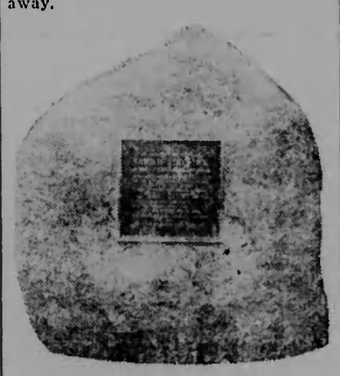
SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN

An unusual use of telephone service was recently demonstrated in Richmond, Va., when J. C. Lawrence, president of a large rubber company, "attended" a conference in that city by long distance telephone from Chicago. Mr. Lawrence was unable to reach Richmond in time to attend a salesmen's conference in the offices of Richard Gwathmey & Co., local distributors for his firm, because of a train wreck. Not wishing to delay the conference, he immediately arranged with the telephone company for a long distance line to Richmond.

The telephone company arranged for a quick installation of special apparatus, including eleven headsets, at Richmond, the headsets being so connected that each man at the conference could hear Mr. Lawrence from Chicago.



The conference was conducted by H. C. Toone, secretary-treasurer of the Richmond Company. Mr. Toone consulted with Mr. Lawrence, and then Mr. Lawrence made his talk, which continued for forty-seven minutes. All the salesmen heard clearly, and the conference was considered as successful as if Mr. Lawrence had been there in person. All questions of the salesmen were relayed by Mr. Toone, as he was the only member of the conference in Richmond equipped to talk to Mr. Lawrence.

It is believed that this is the first conference held over so long a telephone circuit, and requiring special facilities. Its importance was due to the fact that the Richmond company was making its annual special drive for business, and Mr. Lawrence wanted to discuss the rubber situation with them.

OPERATOR IS HONORED FOR HEROIC ACTION

Sarah J. Rooke, a Folsom (New Mexico) telephone operator, who perished in the flood waters of the Cimarron River, has been honored by her former associates who have placed a monument to her memory.

Miss Rooke, an operator employed by the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company, stayed at the switchboard during a severe flood, warning people of the approaching danger, and thus lost her life that others might live. While nineteen people were drowned, hundreds were saved by the heroic action of this brave telephone girl who stuck to her post until the building was carried away.

A rough granite boulder, mounted at her grave, bears a bronze tablet with this inscription:

AMERICA'S WORLD LEADERSHIP

According to statistics collected by the National Industrial Conference Board, the United States produces over one-half of the world's copper; almost two-thirds of the world's pig-iron; nearly three-fourths of the world's petroleum; over one half of the world's cotton and almost one-half of the world's lumber.

It supplies more than 43 per cent of the world's coal; nearly 60 per cent of the world's steel ingots and castings and 57.4 per cent of the world's paper.

That the United States, with only about 5 per cent of the world's area and only six per cent of the world's population, should hold this commanding economic position is not due to its vast natural resources alone. Its supremacy is not mere accident, nor is it a mere coincidence that with its economic leadership goes a leadership in the development of all forms of communication facilities upon which industrial and commercial progress is vitally dependent.

There are in the United States approximately 10,000 telephone companies, of which some 9,000 have connecting arrangements with the Bell System for the interchange of toll traffic. In addition, there are a large number of rural lines which do not rate as companies. Of these, more than 28,000 connect with the Bell System

What Foods Are Cheapest

REGULATION of the food product of the home requires familiarity with current food prices. Food values also enter into this question. What type of foods yield the most nutriment for the least money, and at the same time appeal to the family taste? These things merit study and observation. Careful consideration of food advertisements is perhaps one of the best methods of becoming posted on the subject in general.

Advertising is an important factor in modern life. Everything we are likely to need, from the cradle to the grave, is persistently called to our attention. No matter where we go, we cannot escape being told what is good for us, nor reminded of the things that make life worth living—and how cheaply we can get them.

This is direct advertising. And equally effective, sometimes, is indirect advertising. Just now, the food packers of America are involuntarily doing this indirect advertising on a very large scale, because of the exceedingly large food pack of last year. Canned foods are now being sold at remarkably low prices. This is not done with the specific purpose of advertising, but rather for the sake of marketing surplus stock.

Last summer, there were unusually large crops of practically all the staple vegetables. In consequence the canners worked over-time, packing a tremendous quantity of these foods. To get a quick market for the supply on hand, they have adopted the plan of selling them at exceedingly low prices. In so doing, they have indirectly entered upon one of the most extensive advertising campaigns ever undertaken by them.

It is a campaign of education. Vast numbers of people, taking advantage of this great price-reduction, are learning the convenience, economy and excellence of ready-to-serve foods. In other words, they are being educated to eat more of them, in preference to the more expensive and less easily obtained fresh foods—so-called. For instance, those who have used a dozen cans of corn, this year, will buy two dozen next year. And so it will be with all kinds of canned foods. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." Ready-to-serve foods have advertised themselves for all time.

In figuring the comparative cost of fresh and canned foods, the season of the year must be taken into account. In all save the extreme southern and south-western sections of the United States, fresh foods have to be carried a long distance in the winter months. Consequently, high prices must necessarily be charged for them. At this season, therefore, the economy of prepared foods is unquestionable.

This economy, however, lies not alone in the low price, but in the value obtained from the canned products, as compared with that obtained from fresh foods. In the first place, fresh foods brought from a distance, and passing through innumerable hands en route, have lost the quality of "freshness" by the time the consumer gets them. They are therefore not worth their high price. The prepared foods, on the contrary, were canned while absolutely fresh, and their valuable properties have all been retained in the air-tight can. Secondly, there is no waste to be eliminated from the ready-to-serve foods, whereas much must be removed from fresh foods before they are ready for cooking or serving.

Another economical feature of canned foods is the fact that many stores have frequent "special sales" of two cans for 25 cents, three for 29 cents, etcetera. As these prepared foods keep indefinitely, the consumer is not afraid to stock up with them and thus reap the benefit of the lower prices; in addition, gaining the convenience of having a variety always on hand, ready to serve at a moment's notice.

In reducing their surplus stock by reducing their prices, the American food-packers are really "casting their bread upon the waters." It will return to them, not only in enormously increased future sales, but in a strengthened confidence on the part of the public. For there is a rapidly spreading realization of the fact that nowhere are the laws of hygiene and sanitation more rigidly observed and enforced, today, than in the commercial preparation of the world's foods. And when to this is added the further advantage of economy, the consumer is not slow to respond.

Have Your Car Overhauled.

Motor car owners who will listen to sound advice from the experienced often save themselves much worry and a great deal of cash.

F'rinstance: The idea that one should have a NEW car every season or two is an extravagance born in the fertile brain of some motor salesman.

If you have a good car—a car that has stood the test of many thousand miles—then you have ONE good reason for keeping that car.

An overhauling during the winter months—new piston rings—valves ground—ignition tuned—carbon removed—all oil cases cleaned and refilled—fender dents ironed out—then ,when spring breakes, the old engine will be humming as of yore and you'll be all ready for another summer of pleasure.

We have workmen who are MACHINISTS—and we give you a strict accounting of time consumed.

SAFETY NOW UP TO THE STATES.

Secretary Hoover indulged in no extravagant rhetoric when he told the national conference on street and highway safety that the thousand delegates sent there by forty-six states to devise a model motor code represented the best thought of the nation as well as a new conception of democratic government.

The problems which the conference studied are serious and complex. They cannot be solved by legislation alone. They demand scientific and constructive thinking, popular education and the creation of facilities adequate to modern conditions. As Mr. Hoover pointed out, they demand also "a far wider degree of co-operation than exists today"—co-operation of a voluntary character by the forty-eight states.

The model code adopted by the conference is tentative, of course. Doubtless investigation and experience will suggest modification of several of its features—for example, the proposed speed limits, the control of what is called jay walking, the causes for the revocation of drivers' licenses. But the importance of uniformity in sound traffic regulations can hardly be exaggerated, and no doubt the conference has given a powerful stimulus to the movement in that direction.

The next step must be taken locally. In every state enlightened citizens, motor clubs and other civic and commercial organizations interested in safety should undertake a campaign of education in behalf of the code recommended. Intelligent action is now possible. It should be made certain.

CONSTITUTION BAITERS ENEMIES TO AMERICA.

There are no greater enemies within our gates than those who assault our Constitution and the laws of the land. The more prominent and influential the assailant, the more dangerous an enemy he is to the Republic.

The Constitution, if it ought to be changed, can be done so throught processes provided by the Constitution itself and those who publicly encourage disrespect and violation of the statutes put into effect by public opinion are not loyal Americans.

The common lawbreaker is more entitled to respect than the official who winks at law-breaking and all that follows in its train of broken homes, broken hearts and sometimes servitude in penal institutions. The official has taken an oath to support the Constitution and laws of the land, and if an executive official he is charged with responsibility for seeing to it that they are neforced. The public official who is faithless to his oath or to his trust is the most malign enemy of the Republic.

Those who are ready to participate in mob violence are enemies of the Republic. Within the last few weeks state troops have had to be called out in Kentucky and Delaware to protect prisoners from mod violence. The governors who ordered the troops out are entitled to credit, but the necessity for such action is a serious reflection upon the Americanism of those whose whose threats to take the law in their own hands made this action necessary. There is no crime for which the law does not provide a remedy. If a mob may today take into its own hands the administration of "justice" under provocation for a crime committed yesterday, tomorrow it may take the law ln its own hands to murder the innocent. The only protection from violence the citizen has is the retention of the power of the courts to administer justice. The truly loyal citizen of the Republic will not only refuse to take part in mob violence, but he will stand ready to protect even the vilest criminal until he has had a trial by rallying to the support of the civil authorities.

COOLIDGE ECONOMY

Coolidge economy must become an American habit and not a mere passing impulse. There are a few optomistic spirits who have rather assumed by reason of the extraordinary gains made in the economical and efficient administration of governmental functions, that the tale had been told and that nothing furtl.er remained to be done. The recent passage of the tax-bill with the cuts which provides in the taxes to be paid by all the people has given stability to that impression. The gains made in tax reduction have apparently created in the minds of some congressmen, mainly Democratic, the impression that what was saved should be spent As a result a multitude of bills are before congress calling for expenditures which completely wipe out all the savings made by the Coolidge program.

Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, House Leader, has already noted this situation, and has served notice on his fellow members that the organization of the House is strongly opposed to this grab-bag method. Able as the congressman is, he cannot do it all. What is now needed is a new and public assertion of the desire of the people that the old spirit of thrift and decent administration be continued. With reasonable backing from the taxpayers, the public expenditure bills will vanish like snowbanks in the sunshine.

The attitude of the congressmen who have introduced these measures is based on their feeling that the people approve of the spending program. Once it is made plain to them that governmental expenditures for all of these reductions are still regarded as far too high by the average taxpayer, they will develop an equal earnestness in smothering the measures which they introduced with the purpose of meeting what they thought were popular demands. We must remember that after all the margin between a federal surplus and a federal deficiency bill is none too large.

RED HERRINGS ACROSS THE TRAIL.

The Honorable Clem Shaver, of West Virginia, who is legal chairman of the Democratic National Committee, but is only allowed to function at a time when Congressman Oldfield has a cold, took advantage of the recent rise in the temperature of his ambitious co-adjutor and proclaimed the issues upon which the party was going to approach the people in the coming campaign. He believes that to get the people up and going the Democrats must attack the tariff, Secretary Mellon's aluminum trust and also the character of the presidential appointees to office. Genrally one guess is as another, but in this instance it would appear as if the Honorable Clem was making about as bad a selection of issues as he did of campaign activities in 1924.

The tariff as an issue is always disturbing to business. It inevetably makes for curtailment in employment, for the liquidation of undertakings, and the curbing of new adventures in the industrial field. It is with that thought in mind that the Republicans have been chary about making this an issue, but if the Democrats want to fight on that line, the Republicans are ready. The records of the past show that every attack on the tariff has resulted in Republican success. As to the aluminum trust issue, the people of the country have too much confidence in Secretary Mellon and so fine a belief in his honesty and sincerity, the Democrats will have to select another red herring to drag across the trail.

In the matter of presidential appointees, in view of the fact that the Democrats, in the recent Woodlock appointment, have been falling over even the Republicans in their anxiety to be first in confirmation, it would appear that for all of the Democratic skill in wagging the tongue and stilling the brain, it will require a group of particularly expert spellbinders to conduct attacks on presidential appointees which the Democrats have enthusiastically confirmed.

A carol sublime to the coming spring.

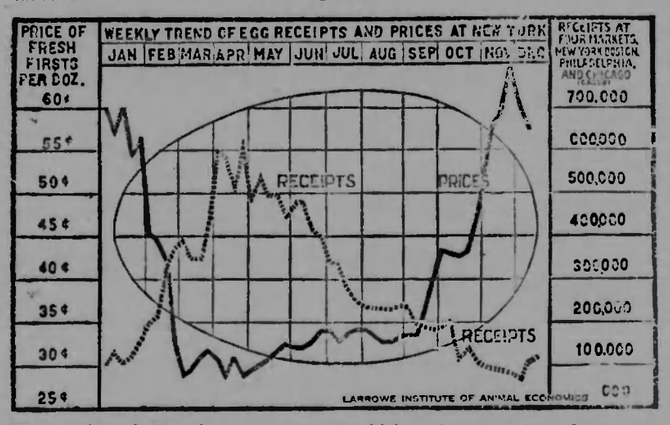
Prosperous Dairy Year Shown by Butter Prices

THE 1925 butter market reveals a prosperous condition in the dairy industry, according to the year-end agricultural review of the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. Although butter production during the first nine months of the past year seems to have lagged behind the corresponding period in the year previous, it was larger during the last quarter of 1925 than in the corresponding period of 1924. Beginning with October, receipts were the largest on record at this season of the year. For the year as a whole they were about 3 per cent less than in 1924.



Prices averaged higher than in 1924. The average wholesale price of 92 score creamery butter on the New York market in 1925 was approximately 45 cents a pound compared with 43 cents the year previous. Highest 1923 prices were received in October and November when weekly averages reached 52 and 51.5 cents, respectively.

Cows Lungs Cover City Lot

IF THE spongy sacks which form the lung of a cow were spread out flat they would cover a city lot 50 by 170 feet, according to an estimate made by experts of the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. To keep this mass of flesh functioning normally, over 3,000 cubic feet of fresh air are required each hour, which, served to cows in buckets as is water and grain, would mean 320 three-gallon pailfuls every hour for each cow.

A cow needs air (oxygen) to purify her blood, to digest and assimilate feed and turn it into heat, body repairing material and milk. Add to the well-ventilated barn a plentiful supply of fresh water, good roughage and a correctly mixed dairy ration, and you have all the essentials for abundant milk making. It is this lack of fresh air on many farms during the long winter months that is believed by practical farmers to be the underlying cause for much of the sickness among the animals.

EGG prices during the past year were higher than they have been since 1920, according to the annual review of the egg market made by the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. While there has been very little difference in the total production this past year as compared to 1924, the higher prices during 1925 indicate larger consumer demand.

Cow Works Three Months to Give Year's Milk for One Person

NINETY days of hard labor on the part of the average dairy cow will keep one person in milk for a year, according to the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. At least, it takes three months for her to turn out the 1,004 pounds of milk necessary to provide the fluid and canned milk, cheese, butter and ice cream consumed per capita per year.

While this fact may be merely interesting to the person consuming the milk, it is of vital importance to the dairyman who depends upon this milk for a living. For while the 4,368 pounds of milk produced by the average cow in a year will meet the requirements of a family of four persons, by the time one has figured up the cost of the feed that has gone into the production, there really isn't very much left. The only way to permanently increase the income per cow is in greater milk production per unit, government figures showing that when a cow's milk yield is doubled the profit is tripled, and when the yield is tripled the profit is increased almost five-fold. Experiments have proven that it is entirely possible by better feeding and management to increase the milk yield of the average cow to a point where three cows could supply four families with milk. To do this, however, the hocus-pocus feeding so commonly practiced on many dairy farms will have to give way to more scientific methods. Comfortable quarters for the cows, an abundance of fresh water at all times, a plentiful supply of good hay, and a properly balanced green ration are some of the things that go far toward securing greater profit per cow.

SOLUTION OF LAST WEEK'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE.

In Defending Her Town This Contributor Breaks Into Poetry.

To the Editor of The Republican.

My attention was recently drawn to a publication in your splendid newspaper appearing under the title "Much in Little," and containing a letter written by a boy from your section of country, Cheston Browning by name, but better known to us as Junior, who was then spending part of the winter months in our little city. Inasmuch as this letter was made public through the columns of your paper, I would much appreciate to reply in like manner.

Dear Junior: We noticed in a recent issue of your local newspaper, The Republican, a letter which you had written to some relative back home commenting especially on your life while in Florida. I'm confident I'm only voicing the sentiment of your other playmates, as well as myself, when I state that we were wonderfully surprised as we had thought the many hours which we spent playing together in the open, which was practically all of them from dawn until bedtime, save when we were in school, had been as thoroughly enjoyed by you as by ourselves. And, Junior, why didn't you express a desire to us that you would like to caddy for the golfers. You surely need seek no further for the opportunity. You know Florida is noted for its golfing and right here in Sebring we have four of the finest golf courses to be found in the State.

I, too, am from the glorious North, but will frankly admit that my stay in Sebring has been so unexpressibly happy that in closing I'd like to offer a tribute to the State I love so much:

Between the broad Atlantic
And the Gulf of Mexico
Is the finest place in all the world
In which to live and grow.
For there is nothing dormant
Down in this clime, you know,
Where the old keeps growing younger
With lots of "pep" and "go."
Where there is never any sign of ice, or sleet, or snow;
Where very seldom do the clouds
Hide out the sunshine's glow.
Where people long to bring their friends
Because they love it so—
Between the broad Atlantic
And the Gulf of Mexico.

A PLAYMATE.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Prepared Especially For The Republican's Readers by Rev. U. S. Wright, D.D.

SUNDAY, APRIL 11, 1926.

THE STORY OF CREATION. Genesis 1:1-2;25.

In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. Genesis 1:1.

THE BOOK.

For three months we have companied with John's Lord, now we turn to the beginnings of the movement of which He was the crown. For three months we will sit about the campfires of wandering tribes and listen to the stories that are told in its flickering light. For the contents of Genesis were told to eager listeners thru centuries of story before they were committed to writing. Did Moses gather them and give them their permanent form? Many think he did. Many others think differently. Certainly he knew them but it is the product of the pen that we study and not the hand that held it and if the original tellers are unknown the secondary one is not vital. We can get the glory of the book itself untrammelled by authorship. And it is a wonder book with enough of human interest to get into headlines today. Its purpose is the culture of the religious life and as such its contents are as vital now as in the long ago. Its history, its biography, its science are all simple as the basket in which is packed its message about God and man and their world. There is room for widest differences about the making of the book and for the closest harmony in its use. And it is the use we make of it that matters.

There are two divisions: one is primitive history (Chapter 1-11), the other is patriarchal history (12-50. If we wish to divide the latter is will be cut at the close of the 36th chapter and remainder classified under the heading of Joseph. The key to the arrangement of the material is found in the word "generations," five of which are in each section; ten representing the "completeness" of the book of Hebrew thinking. These are the generations of the Heaven and the Earth (2:4), of Adam (5:1), of Noah (6:9), of the sons of Noah (10:1), of Shem (11:10), of Terah (11:11), of Ishmael (25:12), of Isaac (25:19), of Esau (36:12), of Jacob (37:2). Note how one line persists and others drop out after being enumerated. Adam, Noah, Shem, Terah, Isaac and Jacob are those thru whom the high purpose of God is carried forward. G. Campbell Morgan says that Genesis is "preeminently a scientific book." In it are the rudiments of the science of God, of the Universe, of Man, of Society, of Sin, of the Ricos of Salvation. He divides it into the story of generation, degeneration and re-generation. "It teaches," he continues, "with unvarying definiteness first, the immediate relation between God and man; secondly, that the great principal for the realization of human life is such faith in God as expresses itself in obedience to His throne."

THE CREATION STORY.

Some one has described this first chapter as a great poem in which there are two sections of 3 stanzas each. In the first appear light, the firmament, the sea and land; in the second lights are placed in the firmament. fishes in the sea and animals upon land. The writer used the science he had as the means of conveying his message. Had it been written now he would have used other terms for expressing the same truth, that God was in the creation and the cause of it. His world was the center of the universe, ours makes it a tiny speck amidst numberless worlds. His Sun went around the earth, ours is the heart of the solar system which is itself in motion about some other center. He had a solid sky with waters above it and windows in it that could be opened for a deluge, ours is infinite space. Yet the same God is his and our. working through and in things seen to create a spiritual empire in which dwelleth righteousness. That the Book has endured so great a chang in human thinking involving unlimited time and space and completely reversing the conceptions of the world in which it was written, and has retained its supremacy over all other books is one of the marvels of history and confirmation of its abiding message to all the ages. Its first sentence is timeless—in the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. Chaos followed, then orderly progression to the crowning of it all in man. No limit of method is included, no suggestion of when it was done—but God is seen at work in His world. How He does things held no interest for the narrator for he wasn't a modern.

THE MAKING OF MAN.

Three times the statement is made, "God created." First is the material universe and having done that there comes the assembling of it into definite things; light, seas, land, sun, moon and stars. Again there Is the creative energy and this time life emerges, earliest in the sea and then on the land. The final stage is reached when "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." It is significant that there came a point beyond which even the creative genius of God did not go. Even God can make nothing finer than man. Or Is it woman? Combining two worlds, matter and spirit, within the compass of a single life, man is the commingling of dust and Deity. He is at home in both realms. In body he is of the earth, earthy, linked with all the animal creation. In spirit he bears the likeness of his Maker and is related to God. Here then is the marvel that made God pause. The Book gives no hint of how God did it but exhibits the product over which God bends rejoicing that man was "very good."

MAN'S COMMISSION.

"Subdue the earth, have dominion" is the high commission with which God dowered this child of His heart. It was a raw, rude world that he was called to conquer. It was merely the makings of a world that was to be fashioned into a servant for man's use. After all the centuries there are mountain summits yet unclimbed, forces that have not yet been harnessed, enemies yet unconquered. He has done much. He has bridged the sea and spanned the continents with steel. He has made the earth, water, air and electricity his servants. He has imprisoned the music of the spheres and the beauties of the sunset splendors. He has traveled far along the road God marked for him and has yet many leagues to journey before the days of earth are done. All this was in the confidence of God. There were great beasts upon the land, there were monsters in the sea, there were winds, waves, forests, mountains, deserts, ice and storms and God flung him out into their midst and said to the tiny figure that fronted them all, "I believe you can conquer every one of them!" Think of the staggering audacity of God's faith in him. It is as wonderful as the destiny toward which he strides. And it has been and has been God who cheers each step.

THE REPUBLICAN

VOLUME 51. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, APRIL 15, 1926. NUMBER 8.

WELLER'S NOMINATION IS PRACTICALLY ASSURED

Opponents Helpless, Disorganized and Inefficient—Hill's Candidacy Unpopular in Counties

(From The Marylander)

In a review of the political situation in Maryland insofar as the Republican Senatorial fight between the Weller and anti-Weller forces are concerned, last week's issue of The Marylander said:

The issue between the factions in the Republican party in Maryland, and which it is expected will be fought to a finish in the primary contest, is purely personal, and centers around the domination of Senator Weller—in other words the party is divided into two camps, Weller and anti-Weller, with General W. Bladen Lowndes as the leader of the anti-Weller faction, aided in a rather weak and half-hearted may by ex-Senators France and Jackson and that element in the city and counties which has been trampled under foot by the Senator since he assumed charge of the party seven years ago, and whose heads have been sore ever since he threw them out on the scrap heap where they have been squirming and struggling ever since. At the present time the indications are that the Senior Senator will have easy work to win his renomination in September. Whatever chance his opponents might have had to defeat him was thrown away when they took up Mr. Hill as their candidate to oppose him—for the truth is, the Third District Congressman is not seriously taken in any part of the State, even in his own party, except by a few people in East Baltimore—and there is every reason to believe that they have gone over to Mr. Weller as the best hope to gain what they want. The Senator is in a position, as a member of the Upper House, to do things. He has great influence with the National Administration; he gives out all the patronage; he names all the government officials in the State, even the Prohibition Enforcement officials, and they and all their vast influence, are at the service of Mr. Weller in all that he wants them to do; his word is law. Mr. Hill, on the other hand, is literally without any such influence. He has no official patronage to give out; he has no influence whatever with the large contingent of government officials, revenue agents, customs officials, postal officials, Prohibition Enforcement officials, literally hundreds in number, all of whom owe their places to Mr. Weller, and all of whom are working ,day after day, to secure his renomination and reelection. They are not making any fuss .or blowing any horns, but they are busy in every section of Maryland, as they go about their work—busy for Mr. Weller, and they never pass by an opportunity to help him along—and Mr. Hill has no such support. He is rarely ever heard of, and his candidacy is really looked upon as a joke, not only by Democrats but by the great mass of his own party, even by those few who are supposed to be enlisted in his cause, because they are hostile to Mr. Weller.

It should also be remembered in this connection, that at least three-fourths of the Republicans in the counties are the dryest of the dry, that they look upon Mr. Hill, not as a Republican but rather as the exponent of the wet cause, as the chief exponent of the enemies of prohibition, and, as such, hold him in horror, and while they know that Mr. Weller is not favorable to prohibition, he has not made himself conspicuous against it, but has simply contented himself with voting against it when it has been an issue, and it is safe to say that as between the two men, when the primaries take place, a very large propotion of the dry Republicans will vote for Mr. Weller, in fact in all his large acquaintance with dry Repuhlicans throughout the counties, the writer does not know of one who will vote for Mr. Hill, but rather the contrary, all those with whom he has discussed the subject are openly for the Senator and are bitter in their opposition to his opponent. So far as the dry Republican vote is concerned, it will doubtless be practically all favorable to Mr. Weller. To them, Mr. Hill is a living incarnation of the "Rum Demon," and they will have none of him. And it is one of the strangest features of this strange political situation that many of the strongest supporters of Senator Weller are to be found among the most ardent of the drys and they all know that the Senator is not dry, that he has never pretended to be dry, and to all intents and purposes is as wet as Mr. Hill.'

In explanation of this anomalous situation, a clergyman of prominence who is about as dry as any man in the State, said:

"Mr. Weller has never made any noisome parade of his opposition to Prohibition. He has not gone around the State trying to make people believe that he is the great apostle of wine, beer and whisky, and that those who are otherwise are not worthy of consideration. In addition to the above fact, he has not acted on the supposition that the only people worth considering are those who are openly wet. The fact that a man was dry has not interfered with his chances for political preferment, and he has always treated the dry members of his party with the same consideration as the wets. Besides, and this fact will aid him more than all other things to secure a renomination and probably a reelection, and that is that the President and the National Administration want him to remain in the Senate. If he is good enough to suit President Coolidge, he is certainly good enough to suit the Republicans and other citizens of Maryland who voted for Coolidge, regardless of his views on prohibition or any other question which is not partisan in its character. In other words, he suits the President; the President wants him, therefore he suits all those who wish to see the present National Administration sustained, whether they are Republicans or Democrats."

ARBUTUS APPEARS ON THE HILLSIDES OF MARYLAND

Lover of Delicate Wild Flower Urged to Protect It From Ruthless Destruction.

On sheltered hillsides the trailing arbutus, or May flower, is beginning to show its waxy, pink. Its flowering season is from March until May, but the persistent cold wind has delayed its blossoming this year.

Could anything be more delicious than the perfume of this starry little flower? It is the very breath of spring. Little wonder that the Pilgrim Fathers, after the suffering of that first awful winter, "loved this early messenger of hope and gladness above the frozen ground at Plymouth."

Whittier, the author of the verses, states that the name was familiar in England as the application of it to the historic vessel shows; but it was applied by the English, and still is to the hawthorn. Probably the Pilgrims did not find the blossoms until May, and therefore gave it the name of Mayflower.

It is little use to try to persuade this shy woods flower to live in our gardens. It pines away when brought into contact with civilization and refuses to accept conditions in which many of its neighbors make themselves happy.

Should Be Preserved.

Greedy street vendors, who ruthlessly tear up the plant by the yard and others of our citizens who should know better, without even the excuse of ekeing out a paltry income by its sale, have already exterminated it within a wide radius of our Eastern cities. How curious that the majority of people show their appreciation of a flower's beauty only by selfishly, ignorantly picking every specimen they can find.

In many localities the arbutus sets no fruit, for it still is undergoing evolutionary changes toward the perfecting of an effective system to insure cross-fertilization. It has attained to perfume and nectar to attract insects but many blossoms produce no pollen for them to carry and in many other blossoms the stigmas are defective.

Is this history of development coming to a tragic, foreshortened end? The sale of flowers, which are torn out by the roots to insure long stems, the clearing of timber which sheltered it, has reduced its extent enormously in the last 20 years. Where it used to be in sheets on the wooded hillsides, it is now in scattered clumps and small.

If every flower-lover would pledge himself to discourage its sale and to interest the school children in its protection, this spring beauty of Maryland and especially of Garrett county might be induced to spread again over the few remaining strongholds still left to it.

The editorial work for the Oakland High School annual, "The Oak", is under way by the staff of the publication composed of students, assisted by some of the instructors of the institution. The book will probably be the same size issued by the school last year. It will be printed on The Republican presses and will be ready for circulation prior to the Commencement, which occurs early in June.

SELLING FARM IDEALS TO THE YOUTH OF THE NATION HAS AN APPEAL TO THE BEST MINDS

What a High School Course In Vocational Agriculture Taught In The Accident and Friendsville High Schools By Mr. W. E. Tarbell, In Charge of That Branch of Study, Includes

Mr. W. E. Tarbell, teacher of Vocational Agriculture in the Accident and Friendsville high schools, in an article contributed to and published in The Maryland Farmer under date of March 10th, 1926, gives an outline of the work required of students in agriculture in the schools where he has classes.

Vocational agriculture is a rather high-sounding name, but when we come down to facts these two long words mean farming. They mean practical farming in every sense of the word, and they mean a little more besides.

When a boy takes a course in vocational agriculture in the high school, he not only gets the actual practice of raising a crop or an animal, but he gets the whys and wherefores of each and every operation which is required to produce successfully.

Besides this he gets an insight into the many and various fields of science which aid in making our farm life of today more desirable and pleasurable than ever before.

The high school departments of vocational agriculture in Maryland offer to the farm boy a two-year course of study in farming. The course is so arranged that one year the boy is instructed in animal husbandry. The following year he obtains instruction in the production of crops. These subjects alternate each year thereafter.

The information which is given to the boy is of the latest and of the most up-to-date nature that can be obtained.

In some schools of sufficient size to warrant and where the need is felt, two additional years of agricultural work are given. These third and fourth years of instruction include in our State the study of community specialties, farm management and agricultural economies.

The first one of these offers definite and concrete information on the solving of the problems in the one or two most important types of farming in a community. The second shows the way to a more systematic and orderly way of conducting farm business. Lastly agricultural economics teach the principles of marketing of farm produce and gives the latest and best methods of selling the surplus crops and animal products of the farm. This is very important now that we have learned how to produce a surplus of nearly every farm crop.

As it has been stated, the third and fourth years of agriculture are only given where the need has created a demand, and as yet there are only a limited number of schools in Maryland offering these courses. Therefore, at present we are more concerned with the regular first and second years' work.

A typical year's instruction in animal husbandry would include poultry raising, dairy production, beef production, swine raising and instruction in the care and management of horses. Any one of these may be stressed as the teacher and his advisory committee of local farmers and business men think best.

Corn growing, wheat and other small grain growing, orcharding, home and truck gardening, potato production, floriculture, tobacco growing and one or two others may be considered as representative of a year's instruction in plant husbandry.

In addition, a certain number of periods is set aside for farm shop work each year. In Maryland there is a minimum of thirty periods thus set aside. In the farm shop the boy is taught more or less simple woodworking and how to do general repair jobs around the farm. He learns how to solder, how to repair harness, how to repair, adjust and operate farm machinery. He receives instruction in the principles of gas engine operation and in caring for all tools common to the farm.

All of the foregoing instruction is given in the class room, on field trips or in the laboratory, and every endeavor is made to have this work of as practical a nature as possible. One of the guiding principles of this course is to give the boy those things which he can take home and put into practice at once or in his project work during the summer.

This project work is required of each and every boy who takes vocational agriculture. During the year devoted to animal husbandry he is expected to procure some animal or animals which he raises and cares for by himself. The animal, preferably, should be a purebred and it should belong to the boy. The ideal is that the boy reap the profit for himself or stand the loss, if there be any. The same thing holds true following during a year of instruction in plant husbandry, with the exception that some crop is raised instead of an animal.

The project or the raising of some crop or animal is just as important as the class-room instruction, because it gives the boy a chance to become an actual farmer on a small scale and it places him face to face with some of the problems which he will meet when he has a farm of his own. It also gives him a chance to apply those things which he has learned in the class-room. This in turn fixes this valuable information in his mind.

It is endeavored to so guide and conduct the project and class-room instruction as to inspire the boy with such a desire to farm that he will not be anxious to leave the farm, but will choose farming for his life work.

In closing, let us see some of the ideals and thoughts which the teachers of vocational agriculture endeavor to impart to the boy through their fellowship and enthusiasm. They try to make the boy see that farming today is not a day laborer's job, but an occupation or vocation which requires an intelligent, well-trained business mind. They endeavor to make the boy think of a farmer, not as a slave or drudge, but as an executive directing and co-operating with the great forces of nature. They want the boy to ask: "What could be a more honorable calling than this?" Who would not be proud to be called a farmer when he knows that he is helping to clothe, feed and make happy the millions of people not only of our own great country but in the whole world?

ANNUAL BANQUET, K. OF P., HELD FRIDAY EVENING

Affair Was Most Delighful With More Than Two Hundred and Fifty In Attendance

The annual banquet and ladies' night, under the auspices of Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias, was held at the Pythian building in Oakland last Friday night. The affair was one of the most brilliant in the annals of the organization and the program, arranged by the committee in charge, was exceptionally well carried out.

Covers were laid for more than two hundred and fifty guests who were present from Cumberland, Oakland and adjacent towns. Ladies were present in large numbers. Corsage bouquets for the ladies and carnations for the gentlemen were the favors at each plate.

Grand Chancellor Nelson W. Russler, of Cumberland, delivered a brilliant address, which was really the most noteworthy feature of the occasion. By his devotion to the cause of Pythianism he undoubtedly holds the esteem and affection of every fellow-Pythian in the grand domain of Maryland, over which he has jurisdiction.

Toastmaster Walter W. Dawson presided in a masterly fashion, the introduction of each speaker and the announcement of every number on the program being preceded by a witty anecdote of a personal character.

The address of Mr. F. E. Rathbun was an eloquent tribute to Pythianism and what it stands for. At the close of his address he presented, on behalf of Garrett Lodge, a silver loving cup to Past Chancellor Commander Henry Lauer in recognition of his twenty-one years' of service as team master of the lodge.

The hall was tastefully decorated, cut flowers and potted plants being in profusion with an elaborate festooning effect, which added materially to the attractiveness of the interior. The entire assemblage seemed to catch the spirit of the occasion and good fellowship held full sway, while an atmosphere of harmony was in evidence on every hand.

Its spacious corridors resounded with the laughter and applause of all present who encouraged the numerous speakers with their approval of their fitting remarks. Women, beautifully attired, enjoyed the program to the fullest extent, their presence contributing much to the success of the evening. The music was delightful and was most harmoniously rendered.

Immediately following the banquet numerous toasts were proposed in which the entire company joined.

In another he recited the capitals of the States in the Union while writing a familiar sentence which he had committed to memory.

His official contest record is 139 words per minute, writing for a period of thirty minutes. He is the guest of Mr. E. E. Rolle, Cumberland, who accompanied him to Oakland and who is the local representative of the Underwood Typewriter Company.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THE BEGINNING OF SIN.

Genesis 3:1-21.

For as in Adam all die, so also in Christ shall all be made alive.—I Cor. 15:2.

AN ANCIENT STORY-TELLER.

Remember that we are under an old skin tent in the Judean wilderness. Across the plain comes a traveler who sits down, shares our frugal meal and sits beside the fire as the shadows lengthen toward the closing day. Questions are bandied back and forth across the blaze and the keeping of a sacred day comes into the talk. "Let me tell you a story," says our visitor. And while we sit absorbed he tells that wonderful tale of creation that reveals God in every one of six days in the week, then pausing in the seventh for exultant meditation upon the work of the other days, "What is good for God is also good for His followers," may have been the sage comment with which he closed his recital. Certainly it was the lesson he taught. For this is not history, but the giving of materials out of which history is made a moral content for application to life.

Children's faces look out from the gathering shadows—shall they have no share in the witchery of the hour in which this visitor who seems to so undersatnd the world and life weaves a wooing spell about goodness? There is a swift change in the content and a greater one in the form in which it is cast. It is the fanciful world of the child with which he deals. God walks in a garden among the trees. He speaks, He searches for hidden figures, He shapes animals out of earth and asks men to guess their names. It is an altogether understandable God for the wee children listening breathlessly to his tale. And the animals talk, the wind has a voice—what child does not people his world in that fashion? The firelight gleams upon the naked bodies leaning forward from the heels upon which they sit and the man and woman in the Garden are as unclothed and are seen making girdles of leaves as they have made them many a time. The great question is, "What is he trying to teach?" What is a problem of the group he is addressing that has thrown light upon it by the story? Is it not one of obedience? How many times has the child found that to disobey brings punishment and loss of privilege? Here is a perfectly understandable thing out of his little life lifted into the law of life of all the world in which God dwells, quickening his sense of justice in his hour of pain, and fortifying him against temptation that besets his feet walking a world as new as the one in which Adam was. To know that disobedience has always worked that way would send these children to sleep under the old skin tent with a deeper resolve to heed the word not only of father and mother but of God as well, which was exactly the purpose of that old story teller that night.

THE HIGHER HISTORY.

A good story may not be true to the facts as an historian knows them, but it must be true to the facts of life. For the purpose of the teller the facts may be given a different order that the truth told may be seen in its right proportions and be rightly understood. For the same purpose some facts may be omitted from the tale, not because they are not true, but because they do not have a place in the moral goal of the teller. All of which makes poor history but good truth. For the thing told must always be true life. Take the God of this garden episode: Do the facts told within child limitations give a true picture of God? Of what sort is He? He is a veritable Father to that child of His heart. Bringing him into being He plans a place of beauty and joy for him as He plants a garden for his home. He sets him a congenial task in the care of it. He reserves but a single tree in all its wide-spreading acres for Himself. He plans a help-meet for him. He brings the animals to him just to listen to his dear lips give them names. He hastens after him in his sin and punishes with a promise of redemption hidden in its heart. And in sending him out into the bare world, He tenderly wraps him in garments of His own devising lest the chill of the world mar him in his new estate. Then He closes the door upon the immortality of the memory of his sin with a flaming angel that in other surroundings he might begin life over again with every chance of making good. It isn't history we are reading, it is an everlastingly true transcript of God's heart.

THE ADVENT OF LAW.

Men and God live in a world of law. The first information given him was that here was a certain rule to be followed in his living if it was to be the sort that would have the right to rule over its world. God made him His partner in the affairs of earth. Over the entire garden Adam could rove and do as he willed but for a single tree he was warnen; that was the property of his Partner. But the man refused to play fair. He would dispossess the Almighty and hold all for his own. He refused the place of steward and was determined to be the proprietor. It is as old as Adam and as new as the latest man refusing to acknowledge God's right to a share of his possessions. It was the property instinct that lay at the bottom of his fall. With Eve it was different. It was the same law and a similar breakage but from a different cause. She failed to counsel with either husband or God, and when one member of the family begins to have unshared transactions, trouble follows. The particular pull seems to have been a desire for increasing attractiveness. She would share something of God's wise winsomeness and be able to rule more completely. So they faced the demands of an early law and refused to obey.

THE PENALTY.

They make a sorry plight of their leafy garments as they run away from the consequences of their action and hide themselves. Then each attempted to pass the buck and even put some of the blame on God. He who would have forgiven freely if they had confessed their wrongdoing, had no recourse but to punish such a craven pair. And the penalty fitted the deed. For the woman who would have soared there were limitations of home and motherhood, the merging of her desires with those of her husband. For him who had betrayed a trust involving ownership, property was taken away and he was thrown upon his own resources in the creation of a new home. Labor was not a part of it; he had been assigned a task when he entered the garden, but now much toil would be unproductive. Thus early in the race story man learned that broken law means suffering, that whatsoever a man soweth that must he also reap. If he sinned he suffered. Physical death had no part in the penalty—it had been long in the world already—but the death of separation from the intimacy of God's life followed immediately.
